INTRODUCTION

Until 1853 the name of John of Ephesus was hardly known except from scattered references in extracts from the so-called Dionysius and other authors published by Assemani; but in that year the 3rd part of his Ecclesiastical History was published at Oxford by W. Cureton, and this was soon followed by J. P. N. Land's pamphlet Johannes Bischof v. Ephesos der 1^{ten} syrischer Kirchenhistoriker (Leiden, 1856). In 1860 an English translation of Cureton's text was published at Oxford by R. Payne Smith, and in 1862 a German translation by J. M. Schönfelder at Munich. Finally the Commentarii de Beatis Orientalibus and fragments of the 2nd part of the Ecclesiastical History appeared in tom. II of Land's Anecdota Syriaca at Leiden in 1868, and a Latin translation of the same by van Douwen and Land was published at Amsterdam in 1889. Since that time however two works have appeared which are invaluable for the purpose of enabling us to supplement John's published works and correct his text, M. Nau's analysis of the 2nd part of the history from the so-called Dionysius in R. O. C., II, p. 455, (1897), and the first two volumes of M. Chabot's edition of Michael the Syrian (Paris, 1899, 1901)¹. Other studies of our author have been published by Land², H. G. Kleyn³, and L. Duchesne⁴; but all these have now been thrown into the shade by the great work of A. Dyakonov, Ioann Efesskiy (Petrograd, 1908), in which 402 pages are occupied by a critical account of John's life and works, and full use is made of the new information derived from 'Dionysius' and Michael. In consequence of John's careless methods of writing the chronology of his life and of the facts which he records appeared to be an almost insoluble puzzle; and it is not the least of Dyakonov's many merits that by a laborious investigation of the whole subject he has succeeded in bringing order out of chaos. In a few places I am obliged to differ from him: but in general my chronology is based upon his work (I have not thought it necessary to occupy space by mentioning his name every time), and I am thankful indeed to have been spared the necessity of attempting what seemed to be an impossible task.

John of Ephesus (so called from his titular bishopric) was born about 507 in the territory of Ingila in the territory afterwards known as Armenia IV⁴, which for ecclesiastical purposes was united with the province of Mesopotamia of which the capital was Amida, and at the age of 3 or 4 was placed in the neighbouring monastery of the stylite Maro at Ar'a Rabtha². At the age of 15, after Maro's death, he moved to the monastery founded by John Urtaya at Amida³, the monks of which, having been expelled during the persecution of 521, were then residing in the deserted monastery of Mama at Hazim, where they remained 5 years, i. e. till 526⁵. The archimandrite at this time was Sergius⁶, who from the dates given in ch. 58 seems to have died in 523⁶, so that the author's migration may be placed in 522/3⁷. After other wanderings the monks were at the end of 530 allowed by Justinian to return to Amida⁸. In the preceding year John had been ordained deacon by the exiled bishop John of Thella (Constantina)⁹. The quiet life in the monastery seems however not to have suited him, and he frequently travelled about to visit other monasteries and celebrated hermits; in 532 he accompanied his friends Thomas and Stephen to Antioch¹⁰, and in 534 undertook a journey to Egypt, and in 535 visited Constantinople¹¹. At the end of 536 or beginning of 537 the patriarch Ephraim of Antioch followed up the final condemnation of the Monophysites at the synod of 536 by a 'descent to the East', when the monks were again expelled¹². They then removed to Thella d Thuthe in the region lying W. of Amida, and on being expelled thence came to the monastery of the Paplars at the extreme limit of the Amidene territory¹³. But there also they were not let alone, and this time they were dispersed; but in 539 the bulk of them, headed by the archimandrite Abba and including our author, came to the territory of Claudias on Zeitschr.*, XII, p. 59), it must have been before that time. — 12. Ch. 35, 58; Land, p. 294; Zach. Rh., x, 1; Vit. Monoph. C. S. C. O., tom. XXV, fo, p. 65. — 13. the Euphrates¹. Thence in 540 John, perhaps following Abba, who fled to Constantinople about this time, removed to the capital, and never permanently returned. In 541 he made a second journey to Egypt, and in the autumn of the year he went to Palestine, where the plague was just beginning², and thence to Mesopotamia, and returned through Syria to Constantinople. The date is fixed by the fact that he met John of Hephæstopolis performing ordinations in Asia Minor³, for in 542 James and Theodore were appointed for that purpose⁴.

In 542 John was selected by the emperor for the task of converting the pagans in Asia on condition that he should convert them to the Chalcedonian faith⁵. Probably however he did not wholly neglect the opportunity for propagating Monophysitism, for, when James Burdana passed through Asia Minor, he consecrated seven bishops. Among these was John himself, who was made bishop of Ephesus, the metropolis of Asia⁶, whence he is often called 'John of Asia'. The date of his consecration may be gathered from the fact that he was consecrated at almost the same time as Kashish of Chios⁶, who, having begun travelling with John, continued to travel for 13 years, and then lived 5 years in Chios before being made bishop⁷. Now the travelling must apparently have begun between 540, when John left his monastery, and 542, when he undertook the mission to the pagans⁸, and this brings the consecration to 558-60, and it should probably be fixed to 558⁹. He was still a deacon in 541, for he officiated as such at the ordinations performed by John of Hephæstopolis, and the date of his presbyterate is unknown. There is nothing to show that he ever resided at Ephesus; and after the death of the patriarch Theodosius in 566 he became the acknowledged head of the Monophysites in Constantinople, where many Syrians had taken refuge under the protection of the empress Theodora and after her death (548) continued to enjoy the favour of Justinian, who encouraged them to come to the capital in order that he might bring pressure to bear upon them for the purpose of effecting a union¹⁰ and leave the Monophysites in Syria without leaders. In this object he failed; and, though his successor by using more violent measures effected a temporary union (571)¹¹, it was repudiated by the eastern Monophysites, and Dyakonov [p. 81] supposes it to have begun between 537 and 540 and fixes the consecration to 555-8; but he does not note that J. states that the travelling was in the West. There is no evidence that he was in the West between 535 and 540. — 9. See n. on ch. 56. It may be added that 540, when J. (and probably Kashish also) left the monastery and went to CP., is the most likely time for the travelling to have begun. — 10. See ch. 25. — 11. H. E., I, 24.

the division between East and West eventually led to a schism (575)¹ in which John is found on the opposite side to his hero James². The union however did not last even in Constantinople, and the Monophysites suffered frequent persecutions as long as John lived. His history ends in 585, and he probably died in 586 after a year spent in prison at Chalcedon³; but with the last 18 years of his life, which fall after the completion of the Lives of the Eastern Saints, we have little concern. For the first two years of his residence in Constantinople (540-2) he lived in the house of the patrician Probus⁴, nephew of the emperor Anastasius, and after this, when he was in the capital, his quarters were perhaps for a time in the palace of Hormisda, where many of the refugees were settled under the protection of Theodora⁵; but at some time between 542 and 546⁶ the chamberlain Callinicus, who in 565 held the office of *praep. sacri cubiculi*⁷, gave him a villa at Sycae⁸ (probably that previously occupied by Mare the solitary, who died in 542/3)⁹ which he turned into a monastery known as 'the monastery of the Syrians', of which he was archimandrite¹⁰, and this was his head-quarters until in 578 it was confiscated by the patriarch Eutychius¹¹.

His earliest work was a history of the persecution, which was probably written in 537¹², and does not now exist. He also wrote, probably in 544, an account of the plague of 541/2¹³; but it is not certain that this was ever published as an independent work. Both of these were doubtlessly incorporated in the Ecclesiastical History, which extended from the time of Julius Caesar to 595, and was divided into three parts¹⁴, of which the first probably came down to the time of Theodosius II¹⁵, and the second to 571. Of part 1 we have only citations in Michael; but of part 2 large fragments exist, and with the help of 'Dionysius' and Michael it may be possible to restore it almost entirely. Part 3 exists almost complete. Another work, now lost, was a defence addressed to the Eastern Synod in the matter of the union of 571 and written not later than 575¹⁶. There remains the most characteristic of all his works, the Histories concerning the ways of life of the blessed Easterns, or, as it is more conveniently called, *Lives of the Eastern Saints*¹⁷,

The date is fixed by the fact that Leontius, who died before the Lives were written 566, lived 20 years in the monastery (ch. 39). Dyakonov p. 86, appy. confusing him with Aaron (ch. 38), makes him die in 560, and therefore throws back the origin of the monastery to Mare's lifetime. See n. at end of ch. 36. — 7. 58 short lives or stories of hermits and others with whom the author was contemporary, after the style of Palladius and Theodoret, but containing more of the personal element, and including lives not only of obscure ascetics but also of men who played a part in history¹ besides a few more general chapters on life in Monophysite circles in his time². This seems to have been written in 566³, and amplified in 567⁴, and again in 568⁵. We have one ms. only which contained the whole work: (1) Brit. Mus. Add. 14647 (A), written in 688 in a good estrangelo hand. This ms. consists of 20 quires of (normally) 10 leaves each, the 1st leaf being marked with the number of the quire in estrangelo, and the next four with the letters ω , ψ , χ , and α ; the last five leaves, being the other halves of the folded sheets, needed no numeration. There are lacunae after f. 2, f. 3, and f. 5; and, since f. 3 has no numeral, and the 2nd quire begins at f. 6, it follows that 3 leaves are lost after f. 2, and one each after f. 3 and f. 5. There is another lacuna after f. 13, and, the 3rd quire beginning at f. 14, 2 leaves are lost. The 4th quire begins at f. 23; and the 3rd quire therefore contained 9 leaves only. Apparently the scribe, perhaps by inadvertence, left a leaf unused. The 5th quire begins at f. 33, the 3rd, 4th, and 5th leaves are numbered ω , ψ , χ ⁶, and the 6th quire begins at f. 44. The 5th quire therefore contained 11 leaves; and we may perhaps suppose that the scribe found the blank leaf in quire 3, and tacked it on here. The 10th quire is wholly missing, and the next leaf (f. 83) is the 2nd leaf of the 11th, so that 11 leaves are here lost. After f. 89 is another lacuna; and, as the 12th quire begins at f. 90, 2 leaves are lost. In the 15th quire, which begins at f. 120, there is a lacuna after f. 121, f. 122 has no numeral, and there is another lacuna after f. 123, while f. 124 is the 2nd leaf of the 17th quire. Hence in these two lacunae 7 leaves are lost, and the earlier must include at least 3. Part of the text here lost can however be supplied from D; and from this we know that it cannot have covered less than 5 leaves, so that 5 or 6 are lost after f. 121, and 1 or 2 after f. 123. The rest is complete, but our text ends at f. 136 r^o a. The ms. is carefully written, and it is not often necessary to depart from its text. Ch. 37 has been omitted by the scribe; and, since the Simeon mentioned in the heading of ch. 41 does not appear in the narrative, the end of that chapter has perhaps also been omitted⁷. The missing portions are parts of ch. 1, the beginning of ch. 2, the end of ch. 3 and beginning of ch. 4, all ch. 26 except $\frac{1}{3}$ of a leaf at the beginning, all chs. 27-29, all ch. 30 except about $\frac{1}{2}$ of a leaf at the end, the end of ch. 33 and beginning of ch. 34, all ch. 52 except part of the title, the beginning of ch. 53, and part of ch. 54.

Several other mss. contain some of the lives or extracts from them. These are : (2) Brit. Mus. Add. 14650 (B), written in 875, which at f. 161 ff. contains chs. 3, 7, 13, 14, 15, 18, 19, 36, and 40, which are also in A, in that order, the lives of Susan and Mary (chs. 27, 28 below), which are there missing, these being placed after ch. 19, and ch. 11 and an extract from ch. 2, which stand between chs. 36 and 40, the last three having probably been added as an after-thought. The writing is semicursive, and, probably because it was fading, a later scribe wrote it over; but, since he did not ink over the letters, but spaced them afresh, he often made mistakes, as the remains of the original writing show, and in many places it is impossible to say whether the errors of the text are the fault of the original scribe or not. The text is of a paraphrastic character, the order of words being changed, one word substituted for another, and words inserted to make the sense clearer. Almost any other ms. should therefore be preferred to this; but for the life of Mary (ch. 28 below) it is the only authority. (3) Add. 12174 (C), written in 1197, a huge ms. in a large clear hand, which contains ch. 3 (f. 276 r^o). (4) Add. 7190 (D), of the 12th cent., which contains ch. 52 (for which it is the only authority) and extracts from chs. 11 and 27 (f. 333 r^o ff.). In the heading of the extract from ch. 11 John's name is not given. (5) Add. 14651 (E), a palimpsest written in 850, which contains chs. 12 and 27 (f. 70 v^o, 94 v^o) in a text which, as we see from ch. 12, differs little from that of A. (6) Add. 14730 (F), of the 12th cent., contains ch. 52 and the same extracts from chs. 11 and 27 which are preserved in D, of which it seems to be a copy (f. 121 r^o, 125 r^o)¹. I have not thought it necessary to give its variants. (7) Add. 18814 (G), of the 9th cent., contains the life of Malkha (ch. 29 below), and, as this is missing in A, is the only authority for it (f. 255 v^o). (8) Add. 14735 (H), of the 12th cent., contains chs. 18 and 33 (f. 171 v^o, 157 v^o), and for the conclusion of ch. 33, where A is defective, is the only authority. Its text resembles that of B, as may be seen from a comparison of the two in ch. 18, and the peculiarities of B may perhaps be derived from the original of B and H; but for brevity's sake I refer in notes to 'the scribe of B' without meaning to assert that the reading is not older than B. (9) Paris Syr. 234 (P), of the 13th cent., contained chs. 3 and 4 (f. 443 v^o ff.), but the latter part of ch. 4 is defective. The text has been written over again by a 2nd hand, but is very difficult to read and seems to have been most carelessly written. It is in too bad a state to photograph, and I owe the text to a copy taken long ago by M. Nau which he kindly sent to me, and of which M^{re} Grallin and M. Nau obtained a new collation for me. For the beginning of ch. 4 P is the only authority.

Land's text does not claim to be a critical edition; but it was collated with the mss. by Wright, and is fairly accurate, though many errors (some no doubt misprints) remain. Hardly any suggestions for emendation are made; but in v. Douwen and Land's translation are $2\frac{1}{2}$ pages of emendations, many of which come from Professor Nöldeke¹. A large number of these are actually in the ms., and of the others many are of great value for the restoration of the text. The parts defective in A Land supplied from other mss. in which they are found, but did not give variants where A exists, and, where A does not exist, gave the text of one ms. without recording the variants of others, except that in the life of Susan (ch. 27 below), which he published from B, he gave a few of the variants of E. The existence of P was unknown to him². Hence the beginning of ch. 4, which is in P only, is absent from his edition; and the life of Susan is given in the paraphrastic text of B instead of that of the more faithful E³. V. Douwen and Land's translation generally reproduces the original accurately; but in some places they have misunderstood the meaning, and, when there is a difficulty, they give what they believe to be the sense intended without comment or emendation. Notes on the subject-matter are rare, and there is no attempt to elucidate the chronology.

Michael (p. 377) mentions this work of John, and gives a list of the lives, stating the number as 54⁴. This list, which is very corrupt, has been emended by M. Chabot, in whose translation the number appears as 51, but Dyakonov (p. 369, n. 75) notes that no. 42 in the list is our ch. 52, and that مزملا is a corruption of مزمهلا, and is the title of the next life (our ch. 53), which brings the total to 52; and, if we suppose that the scribe omitted Elijah (ch. 30) because Elijah and Theodore (ch. 31) followed, and James and Theodore (ch. 50) because James (ch. 49) preceded, we have 54, the missing lives being chs. 10⁵, 42, and 43, and the life of Malkha (ch. 29 below). Among the lives mentioned by Michael is one of Cosmo, which cannot be identified with any existing life⁶, and this life together with the lives of Susan, Mary, and Malkha must have occupied chs. 27-29, which were in the lost 10th quire of A, and ch. 37, which has been omitted by the scribe. Now in B, where the lives follow the order of A, the lives of Susan and Mary come in that order between our chs. 19 and 36, and, though for a reason stated below, this does not prove that Mary's life was not the omitted life, it does prove that Susan's was one of the missing chapters 27-29, and that it preceded Mary's. Further the life of Mary begins with the words « Neither then was the history of this holy Mary unworthy of admiration », from which it seems a fair inference that another woman's life preceded; and, if this is accepted, since there is no other woman's life till ch. 54, these two lives¹ are either chs. 27, 28 or chs. 28, 29. Van Douwen and Land, knowing nothing of Michael, and therefore knowing nothing of Cosmo, treated the omission of ch. 37 as merely an error of numeration, and made the lives of Susan, Mary, and Malkha chs. 27-29, without binding themselves to the correctness of the order. It is however more likely, as Dyakonov (p. 371) remarks, that the three women's lives came together; and this is borne out by the following consideration. The great lacuna in A covered, as I have shown, 11 leaves; and an easy calculation will show that Susan's life would cover about $4\frac{3}{4}$ leaves, Mary's about $\frac{2}{3}$ of a leaf, and Malkha's about 3 leaves, or $8\frac{1}{4}$ leaves in all, so that for the whole of the life of Thomas of Damascus (ch. 26) except the first $\frac{1}{2}$ of a leaf, and the whole of the life of Elijah of Dara (ch. 30) except the last $\frac{1}{4}$ of a leaf there remain $2\frac{3}{4}$ leaves, i. e. for these two lives we have $3\frac{1}{2}$ leaves. Now Thomas was a distinguished bishop, and is inserted here after John of Thella and John of Hephæstopolis as having been concerned with them in the work of ordaining Monophysite clergy², and their lives occupy $3\frac{1}{2}$ and 4 leaves respectively. It seems unlikely then that the life of Thomas covered less than 3 leaves, and, even if we cut it down to $2\frac{1}{4}$, we have only $\frac{1}{4}$ of a leaf for that of Elijah, at the end of which John says « Out of his practices I have briefly set down these », which seems to imply a longer space than this³. I conclude therefore that a shorter life than Malkha's stood in this place, and that can only have been Cosmo's⁴. Accordingly it is most probable that the life omitted by the scribe was Malkha's, and that the lives of Susan, Mary, and Cosmo occupied chs. 27-29. As to the order, we have already seen that Susan's preceded Mary's, and the order in Michael is a slight presumption that the three lives came in the order given above¹. If however we make Malkha's life ch. 37, two difficulties arise: (1) The work naturally divides itself into two portions, of which the earlier (chs. 1-35) deals with persons whom the author knew (most of them in the East) before 542, and the later with those whom he knew (mostly in Constantinople) after that time², whereas Malkha died while he was at Amida³. (2) The life of Mare⁴ (ch. 36) describes the sepulchre built by Mare, and the title of ch. 38 runs « of ... Aaron the presbyter and the rest of the presbyters and deacons who were afterwards laid in the sepulchre that was built by .. Mare », from which it clearly appears to be the immediate sequel of Mare's life. Hence we must suppose that the omission of a chapter has caused an error in the numeration through the scribe numbering the chapters consecutively without looking at the ms. that he was copying. Dyakonov (p. 371) would make Malkha's life ch. 36 and Mare's 37; but another difficulty then arises, since the history of the Amidene convents during the persecution in ch. 35 seems to wind up the first part, just as the history of the monastery of John Urtaya in ch. 58 winds up the second part. It is possible therefore that the error occurred earlier; but on the other hand the opening words of Malkha's life « Once, when we were in our convent, before it was driven into banishment » seem to refer back to ch. 35, and look as if Malkha's life were added as an afterthought⁵; and it may be conjectured that the two parts were in two volumes, and that the leaves containing this life, being at the end of a volume, were lost⁶. Since however the order is uncertain and of no importance, and Cosmo's life does not exist, I have preferred not to cause confusion by altering the numeration of v. Douwen and Land⁷, and have left Malkha's life as ch. 29.

1. I believe these are taken from a review, but I have not the ref. to it, and give them from v. D. and L. with mention of Nöldeke's name. — 2. Land, p. ix. — 3. In this he departs from his principle of transcribing the oldest ms. (Id., p. xi). — 4. He implies that J. wrote more, but says that he himself transcribed or epitomated these 54 in another work. — 5. Dyakonov notes that in Mich.'s no. 7, where only مزمهلا is legible, we should not with M. Chabot supply 'Simeon' ch. 10, since he is not called مزمهلا in the heading, but 'Addai' (ch. 8). — 6. M. Chabot identified it with ch. 52, because a C. is mentioned there; but see above.

1. Sc. Mary's and that which preceded, be it Susan's or Cosmo's. — 2. This is implied by the opening words of the life. — 3. There are similar expressions at p. 35, p. 71, ch. 25 fin., ch. 36 fin., ch. 49 fin., all in lives of considerable length. — 4. Dyakonov (p. 370) would identify the heroine of the life with the C. of ch. 13 and the C. of ch. 52; but it is strange that in that case John should in neither place have stated that he was writing or had written her life.

Of the whole 58 lives then that of Cosmo is altogether lost, of the lives of Thomas of Damascus (26) and Elijah (30) we have only insignificant

1. Mich. by calling ch. 47 a life of Theodora reckons 7 women's lives, which he puts together at the end as follows: (46) Theodora (ch. 47), (47) Susan, (48) Mary, (49) Cosmo, (50) Caesaria (ch. 54), (51) Sosiana (ch. 55), (52) Mary and Euphemia (ch. 12). Possibly he put Th. first as being empress, and meant to specify the others in order, but accidentally omitted the two sisters, and added them at the end. — 2. If my understanding of the difficult chronology of ch. 52 is right (see notes there), that chapter might appear to be an exception; but his informant, the cleric John, lived with him in CP. for 8 years. We might also have expected to find ch. 25 in the 2nd part, but it is the natural sequel of ch. 24. — 3. Dyakonov, p. 380. — 4. See p. 187, n. 1. — 5. A similar phrase occurs however in ch. 17 (p. 149) in a life which much resembles Malkha's. — 6. It may be that the ms. used by Mich. was derived from A or its original, and therefore did not contain Malkha's life, in which case the lives omitted by Mich. are reduced to 3. — 7. 'XXXVII' in the title of Mare's life in v. D. and L. is a misprint, as is clear from the list of contents and the note on p. 141.

fragments, and the lives of Habib (1), Z'ura (2), Simeon the scribe (34), Priscus (53), and Caesaria (54) are defective. The rest, except in so far as omissions may have been made by the scribe¹, and a few illegible words in ch. 4², is complete.

Besides Michael the work was also used by the so-called Dionysius, who transcribes p. 141, l. 2-12³, and under A. S. 836 gives the following list of men celebrated at the time: « Abraham bishop of Anzetene and Maro the stylite from the convent of ܡܚܘܒܐ, Simeon the recluse and Sergius his disciple, Mare, [Paul] of Surtha on the Tigris, Addai ܐܕܕܝܐ (visitor) from the convent of Fardaia, John of Zuknu »⁴, i. e. our chs. 3-9 in a different order and with ch. 7 omitted (unless it came in the lacuna after Mare); where it is to be noticed that he has apparently confounded Abraham the Stylite (ch. 4) with Abraham bishop of Beth Urtaye mentioned in ch. 58 (f. 131 v^o a), and that he gives the name Hsikha (abstinent) to the monastery over which Abraham and Maro presided, the name being perhaps derived from a gloss in an early ms.⁵. Again under A. S. 862 he gives the following names: « Theodosius, Anthimus, Paul, James, John of Amida from the monastery of Karthamin, Theodore of Hirtha »⁶, all of which come from our chs. 48-50 except John, who is added to the list of bishops consecrated by James in the interpolated life of James⁷ (see below), and may also be derived from a marginal addition in an early ms.⁸.

John is not a literary writer. He puts down what he wants to say as it comes into his head, stringing sentences together by the use of ܘܗܘܐ and ܘܗܘܐ, which are often equivalent to 'and', and frequently rambles on, forgetting how he had begun; indeed in many places irregularities that I have charitably attributed to the scribe may well be the author's. In the translation I have reproduced these peculiarities so far as can be done without making the sentences unintelligible, placing the words 'sic syr.' in the notes when the sentence is ungrammatical or inconsequent. From the circumstances of his life he must have had an extensive knowledge of colloquial Greek, and many Greek words are interspersed in his Syriac⁹. He certainly used John Malala¹⁰; but the only evidence of acquaintance with any other Greek writer is an erroneous citation from Ignatius in ch. 24, and that may come from a Syriac translation. Though he was a fervent Monophysite, he shows little interest in theology, and in contrast to his contemporary, the so-called Zacharias, includes no theological document in his works except the Henoticon. Even in the account of the Tritheite controversy in H. E., v, 1-12, where some theology seems to be imperatively required, his theology is confined to a few stilted formulae, except that in ch. 8 he gives two short citations from the arguments at the conference. The only other theological argument in his works is the report of the debate with the Nestorians in the life of Simeon of Beth Arsham (p. 148), and that is put into Simeon's mouth, and is probably derived either from his own lips or from the books which John inherited from him¹. His chronological statements are often loose or even wild, of which many instances are given in the notes².

1. See above, p. vii. There are also two accidental omissions in ch. 46. — 2. P. 59. — 3. B. O., I, p. 341. — 4. Kleyn, Bijdrage, p. 69; cf. B. O., II, Diss., s. v. Anizeta Dyakonov, p. 34. — 5. It is just possible that it occurred in the lacunae on p. 59. — 6. Kleyn, op. cit., p. 72. — 7. He is there however called bp. of Dara; see n. ad loc. — 8. That the extract under A. S. 836 at all events comes from the Lives, not from the Ecclesiastical History, seems clear, for J. would not have inserted a list of obscure ascetics as of men distinguished at the time. — 9. In two places in ch. 36 he even transliterates παις into Syriac, though ܡܘܨܝܐ is an exact equivalent. — 10. Land, p. 300. Perh. we should say 'a source of John Malala' Haase in Or. Christ., Neue Ser., VI, p. 86, 259.

As an appendix to the genuine lives Land published a longer life of James, which is attributed to John and was taken by Land to be his; but its spuriousness was clearly proved by Kleyn³ and was admitted by v. Douwen and Land in their translation; and its character is so obvious that I need not occupy space by repeating the arguments here. For the sake of completeness however, and because Land's text is taken from an inferior ms., I have re-edited it with the genuine lives. It is contained in three mss.: (1) Berlin Sachau 321 (S), of the end of the 8th cent. (f. 166 r^o b). This is perhaps the best of all Syriac hagiographical mss.; and, where we have it, we rarely need to emend or follow another ms.; but the last leaf of this life is unfortunately lost. For the text of this ms. I am indebted to a photograph which the kind assistance of Professor Allgeier enabled me to procure. (2) Paris Syr. 235 (N), of the 13th cent. (f. 315 v^o), which I have consulted in a photograph which Monseigneur Graffin with his usual kindness supplied. This seems to be a not very good copy of S, and I have therefore not as a rule recorded its variants, but have supplied the lost final leaf of S from it. (3) Brit. Mus. Add. 12174 (C). See above, p. viii. The text of this ms. (f. 285 v^o a) is a later paraphrastic version of the life, in which some stories are omitted because the scribe did not think them edifying. It was from this ms. only that the life was published by Land, and the full text is therefore now published for the first time.

This life is followed in S and C by a short narrative of the theft of the relics of James by the monks of Esiltha, which has been most carefully edited with illuminating introduction and commentary by M. Kugener in M. Clugnet's Bibl. Hagiogr. Orientale, III, p. 5. As the document is closely connected with the life preceding I have added it here; but, though I have collated both mss., I have seldom indeed found it necessary to depart from M. Kugener's text¹. In both mss. the narrative is followed by the words: « The history of Mar James, bishop of Edessa, is ended », and in S there follows a colophon stating that the history was composed by Theodosius the stylite of Fsiltha in 741², as if he were the author of both. The narrative is however stated in the title to be the work of Cyriac bishop of Amida (C 'Mardin'), and we must therefore apparently suppose that Theodosius after writing the life copied the narrative of Cyriac as a pendant to it. Three difficulties remain. (1) Theodosius is said in the colophon to have written when Stephen was archimandrite of Fsiltha; but the archimandrite when the relics were stolen in 622 was also Stephen, so that we must postulate two archimandrites of that name. (2) The so-called Dionysius places the death of Cyriac of Amida in 623³, whereas the narrative mentions events of 628, so that we must either postulate two bishops of Amida named Cyriac or adopt with M. Kugener the reading 'Mardin' from C¹. Of a Cyriac of Mardin nothing is known. (3) The author of the life calls himself « Me the sinful John the Syrian, the converter of the pagans and author of the Ecclesiastical History, who am from the house of Mar John at Amida », and this is apparently not simply copied from the original, for the text there is « a man whose name was John »⁵. If then the author passed himself off as John of Ephesus, why is he in the subscription called Theodosius? To this it may be answered that the document is an amplification of the original lives, and that the use of the 1st person was a mere literary device not intended to deceive, and Theodosius was known to everyone as the author. I must say however that it seems very strange that a writer who is amplifying an older work should put an expression of humility into the mouth of the original writer which he did not find in the text; and, as John nowhere else in the Lives speaks of himself in the 3rd person⁶, I have a suspicion that he really wrote ܐܢܫܐ ܕܢܘܡܢܐ ܗܘܐ here and the scribe of A inadvertently substituted ܐܢܫܐ ܕܢܘܡܢܐ ܗܘܐ because the expression was used of the other bishops above; but, as he is not in the habit of making mistakes, I have not presumed to alter the text⁷. In any case the narrative must have been

1. My S and C are M. Kugener's B and L. I had already used B for another ms., and had denoted Add. 12174 by C, and therefore could not adopt his notation. — 2. See Kugener, p. 23, where it is shown that 741 should be taken as the date of this document rather than that of the ms., as Dr Sachau took it. — 3. Ed. Chabot, A. S. 934. He was the successor of the John who died in 578 ('Dion.' ap. Kleyn, Bijdrage, p. 73). See above, p. xii, and the interpolated life ad fin. — 4. Baumstark (Gesch. d. syr. Lit., p. 181) ascribes the narrative to a Cyriac of Thella. — 5. Ch. 50. — 6. He often does so in H. E. — 7. There is a clear instance in which the text of A may be corrected from the interpolated life, i. e. the account of the consecration of the bp. of Seleucia in Syria, where A has 'Isauria'; see n. on ch. 50. Cf. also f. 117 r^b, where the reading ܐܢܫܐ should almost certainly be adopted from the interpolated life.

In the text I have recorded all variants except the common orthographical variations in the spelling of ص, صه, صهه, صههه, صهههه, and such words as صههههه. Words and letters inserted to fill lacunae are inclosed in square brackets in the text, and, as far as possible, in the translation, and words which have been omitted by the scribe are inclosed in round brackets in the text. A half-bracket denotes the beginning of the part of the text to which a note refers. The biblical references are to the Peshito.

1. Baumstark (l. c.) thinks that the life may have been written before 600; but the title 'king of the Romans' shows that the author wrote under the Arabs.

A BOOK OF HISTORIES CONCERNING THE WAYS OF LIFE OF THE BLESSED EASTERNS.
 COMPILED AND WRITTEN BY JOHN THE PILGRIM AND AT ONE TIME A SOLITARY OF THE HOUSE OF MAR JOHN OF AMIDA IN THE FERVOUR OF DIVINE ZEAL.

When we considered the words of our Saviour and Redeemer Jesus in his preaching to his saints which he said, « Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good deeds, and glorify your Father who is in heaven »¹, it seemed to us that this is not disagreeable to his will, that the light of the deeds and of the triumphs of his holy disciples should at all times arise and be made known and appear among men, as indeed the sense of his holy saying declares; and for this reason, although we may seem to be presuming to set foot in things that are too great for us, by the power of his saying and the hope of his gift we have been encouraged to approach the task of compiling histories concerning their ways of life and their brave triumphs and the characters of their good deeds, that, we may draw, though obscurely, by means the vile and common pigments of our poor words, the pattern of their likenesses for posterity, and leave it in the memorial of our writings; so that, when they read and see their good deeds and marvellous ways of life, by this means we opine that two beneficial results will be produced, one that when they see their good deeds they may also glorify their Father who is in heaven as it is written, and the second again, that, when the light of the narratives of their ways of life shines upon souls entangled in the vanities of this world and darkened by error, they may be enlightened by the light of their triumphs and be eager to imitate them, and to receive their patterns in themselves, in order that they may attain to their crowns, and hear with them the life-fraught call that says « Come enter, ye blessed of my Father »¹. For these reasons therefore, since I dreaded even to hear the apostolic saying that condemns the man who knows what is good and does it not by the sentence of sin², I determined not to conceal and cover with silence the great and marvellous virtues that I have seen and known and clearly learned in heroic and divine persons, and I am confident of bearing true witness without fear and without hesitation: having first formed this resolution in my mind, that, though I hear went to him, when he was about ten years old, and he received him, and he continued to dwell with him, and he exercised him in spiritual ways of life, marking his tender age, and what devoutness and what orderliness he possessed from his youth. But, when that old man had completed ninety years, he departed to his mansion in heaven, and left his monastery in the hands of the blessed Habib, after he had lived with him twenty years; and so, having seen his ways of life and his obedience and his humility, he made him heir of the inheritance of his blessings, and left him to succeed him. For the blessed Habib was so humble and obedient even in his old age that I do not think it was strange to him¹

And from that time the fear of the blessed man fell upon all men, so that many from fear, before he himself spoke to them, of their own free will made a remission; and then afterwards the blessed man used to perform frequent mighty works in every place against those who contended against him, and when he spoke God would perform in action everything that he also used to plunder many people; and they came and told the blessed man about him, and he set out to go to him. And, when he heard 'Lo! Habib is coming', inasmuch as he was not prepared to do good, he arose and took the parchments χρῆστες, i. e. the deeds, and left him and fled. And when the blessed man heard it he was distressed and said: « Because his will was thus prepared to do evil toward these poor men, if God wills their deliverance, let them never see him again ». And the same night that man died, and fear fell on all who heard it. And the blessed man went on continuing to busy himself greatly in matters of debt-remission, becoming a deliverance for the poor and his fame increasing. But the wife of the man to everyone else, do with him as thy grace knoweth how ». Then Grace exacted forthwith from the man requital for the old man; and that same day the Lord smote him, and half of him became withered, one of his eyes and one of his arms, and the whole of his side, and one of his feet, and he fell into grievous affliction. And, when he understood that it was a sentence emanating from justice, which had overtaken him of on account of his blasphemy, he sent intercessors to the saint to ask him to pray for him; and he on his side did not withhold his kindness from him, but immediately sent his disciple whose name was Z'ura; on whom from that time he poured part of the gift of the power of his prayer like the blessed Elijah upon his disciple Elisha, so that after him he became even more distinguished than himself. This man therefore he sent, saying: « Go, my son; we for our part will not close the door, and pray for him. But the rest of the sentence has gone forth against him, that he shall depart from life; and this we cannot reverse ». And, when he had gone and prayed over him, immediately his soul departed from his body, and he died, and without his consent a remission was brought about for these injured persons whom he himself was prepared to subject to afflictions. And in consequence of this fear everyone who had debtors of ancient standing would remit the debt; and some of them brought their deeds to the blessed man himself, and entreated him to bless them; while the fear and the terror of him went out thenceforth in every place because he himself also travelled in all the districts of Syria. And, as it is written in the blessed Job, « Who hath contended with him and hath had peace? »¹, so was it fulfilled in this spiritual old man, so that no one resisted him in this matter, and transgressed his orders, and raised his head again.

There was again another rich man in the city of Maiferkat², who was a banker (τροπικῆς) and had many bonds (γυμναστῶν, several years old, and used to exact cruelly and mercilessly. And certain persons came and informed the old man; and he rose forthwith and directed his steps to the city³.

And so this miracle was proclaimed all over the city, while everyone the Lord heard the old man's voice; and that cloud passed away, and did not harm even one leaf in it; and lo! from that time, through the power of the blessed man's prayers, that vineyard remained without hail falling in it, while havoc was made of every thing round it, and it alone escaped.¹

Again they brought a certain woman to him who had a demon in her, and he laid an inhibition upon him, and he came out of her. And after some years the old man fell sick, and was constrained to die; and his disciples came near and besought him to remove his inhibitions; and the blessed man removed all his inhibitions that he had made. And immediately that fiend returned, and appeared in that woman. And, when they said to him, «How have you presumed, when you were laid under an inhibition by the blessed Habib?», he said to them, «Last evening he removed every inhibition laid by him, while I was standing there, and I came». And when they came and told the blessed man he sent him a message, «As for you, you are not at liberty to dwell in a human being for ever and ever». And so he was again expelled by the power of God's word. There was again another woman in a certain village who had a mad demon in her, a woman who barked at people like a noxious beast, and tore their clothes, and violently assaulted many, and, when they brought her to the old man, she continued

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. This ensures transparency and allows for easy verification of the data.

In the second section, the author outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze the data. These include direct observation, interviews with key personnel, and the use of specialized software tools. Each method has its own strengths and limitations, and they are often used in combination to provide a comprehensive view of the situation.

The third part of the report details the findings of the study. It shows that there are significant discrepancies between the reported figures and the actual data. These differences are primarily due to incomplete reporting and a lack of proper documentation. The author suggests that implementing a more rigorous record-keeping system could help to resolve these issues.

Finally, the document concludes with a series of recommendations for future work. It suggests that regular audits should be conducted to ensure the accuracy of the records. Additionally, training should be provided to staff to ensure they understand the importance of proper documentation and how to use the available tools effectively.

And he who anathematizes the synod contends with his life ». On all this commotion taking place great terror overwhelmed all the magnates; but the blessed man, when he saw that he had decreed death against anyone who anathematized the synod, was kindled with zeal and his heart became hot within him as it is written, and fire seized his body¹, and immediately he went straight against him, and said : « The synod which divided Christ our Lord is anathematized not only by us, but also by the angels of heaven. And, since you seek a sign, by believers signs are not required; but the Lord will not show you a sign outside you, but in your own self ». And so he² went out in violent rage, while threats were also being forged against the blessed man. But after a day the sign for which he asked appeared in him according to the blessed man's saying, in that he was smitten upon his head, and his understanding was taken away; and a fearful swelling covered him³, until human shape was not recognised in him³, inasmuch that his wife, who was very cunning, hid him secretly in the chamber, that it might not be known to the city that he was already dead, and except two physicians and two chamberlains she did not allow anyone to come in to him, while she sent intercessors to the blessed man to ask him to come and pray for him that he might recover, and he would at once make peace in the church.

 And, this message having roused him, he went and saw him, and he was sorry; and he said to him : « Lo! the sign which you sought ». And the blessed man made a prayer, and the same hour his understanding returned to him, and he recognised the old man and knew that it had so happened to him because he had set him at naught; and he went on entreating him to pray for him that he might be healed, and he might do all that he ordered; while the blessed man said to him : « This happened to you, because you tempted the Lord your God like an unbeliever, and sought a sign ». And thenceforth the dread of the blessed man fell upon him, and in fear he used to assent to his requests in everything; only the state of the church he did not set right, because the delinquencies of the Amorites were perhaps not yet full; but he ceased that violence and these threats, while the power of the old man's prayer thenceforward gave freedom of action (παραρτήσιν) to all after we have opened it what God knows to be right he will himself perform fetch the blessed man, when he was on the point of landing on the other side, something like a wind took the cutter (δρεμων) and turned it back, and they returned, and approached; and, when they were 'just about' to fix the force placed it where it started.

Again according to that which is written « They knew not nor understood that they were walking in darkness »², he was enraged against the cutter-men δρεμωνιζους as if it was they who were lazy, and they proceeded to go on board. And, as they were struggling and advanced little nearer, like what is written again, « The Lord was making war for Israel »³, there came forth something like a flash of lightning and suddenly smote their boat (αροβριον), and the bench was torn out of it from end to end, and it sprang away and mounted upwards as far as the eye can see; and then that wretched man understood that it was God's power which was contending on behalf of the blessed man. And quickly with cries of lamentation they escaped to shore; and they went and told these things to those who sent them, and everyone was seized with wonder.

had threatened the blessed man received his burial and perished¹, and fear accompanied by shame seized all the partisans of that wretched man, and joy reigned over the believers everywhere, while everyone was amazed at the blessed man's words, how God wrought this miracle in him. When the partisans of that wretched man could not by reason of their shame find what to say, they devised a plan, saying, « Whereas on the day which Zura decreed for the patriarch he died, he used enchantments against him, and he died on that same day ». And so these men were ashamed and God was glorified, and the believers rejoiced; and even the blessed man himself would confess that God had heard his voice, and had awoken with his sentence against the blasphemer. For, when he heard the openness παρρησια of his blasphemies, he prayed and said, as he used to pray and say at all seasons, « The Lord awaked like a sleeper and like a man who hath shaken off his wine, and smote his enemies behind him². against thy people' 10; besides the other things which the blessed man used to repeat in his prayer and over his incense. And justice did indeed not delay to show the power of his prayer in that blasphemer. And so everyone was amazed at all the things that were done through the saint and at the deeds of power wrought through his prayer, and gave thanks to God, and especially at his labours and his petitions and his crying and his tears night and day, so that not one hour ever passed from him without his knocking at God's door. Even when he was sitting and speaking with men, because his mind was dwelling above in heaven among the angels, his tears would suddenly gush forth perforce, while he did not wish to do this before men, and sobs would spring up in him, and he would beat his two hands upon his face, and rest his head upon his knees, and thus he would cry loudly. And sometimes, when he was displaying the cheerful appearance of laughter with his lips, in the middle of his speech at which he displayed the appearance of laughing sobs overpowered him, insomuch that while speaking with us he often did so, until by virtue of the freedom (ελευθερία) which I

III. -- NEXT THE THIRD HISTORY, OF THE BLESSED JOHN THE PERFECT NAZIRITE.

When we set ourselves to approach and record the history of this holy John, we exposed ourselves to a multitude of conflicting thoughts, in consequence of the fact that, if we take upon ourselves to narrate severally the signs that were wrought through each of these same saints, we shall wander and extend into a great number of unending writings: and for this reason we considered that the triumphs only that belong to the labours of each of them are enough to excite the praise of God that is in those who hear them, and how they bore themselves manfully in the course of justice all the days of their life without shrinking, while by reason of this fact and the fact further that even one only of the triumphs of each of the saints that has been related is sufficient to indicate the divine power hidden in him who wrought it, just as it is in the power of expert tasters to know the whole taste of a tree from one fruit only, on this account we abstain from recording many signs in order, only presenting the triumphs gained by their labours and the manner of the signs to the memory of expert hearers. This perfect blessed man therefore, who is in truth one worthy to be third in this series of saints, received his training from his boyhood in the great and renowned monastery called that of Zuknin¹, while from the very beginning of his training he would consider in himself and say, « What profit have I from the fact that I feed this body the end of which was doomed to be loathsome and disgusting decay? and wherefore do I by a quantity of food amass and lay up store in it for a multitude of creeping things and of worms? »; since he heard further what the blessed apostle writes saying, « Food belongeth to the belly and the belly to food; but God shall make an end of both »², and further that also which is written reproachfully to those who concern themselves with the sustenance of their bodies, « Ye took your pleasure upon the earth and were wanton, and ye fed your bodies as for a day of slaughter »³.

When then the blessed man through hearing these things turned his thoughts upon himself, he in zeal decided for himself that he would be a man aloof from and a stranger to all pleasure that comes through the bodily tastes which spring up in food, saying, « I for my part did not depart from the things of the world in order to turn back to them; but it is enough that I have set myself to be a stranger to these transitory things, in order to run after the things that pass not away; and through holding aloof from corruptible things I remembered and desired the heavenly blessings which the blessed Paul indicated and said, ' Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor hath it risen into the heart of man, what God prepared for them that love him'. These I must run after and pursue with all my strength, casting all corruptible things behind me, except the ordinary nourishment of my body in order to sustain it ». And thenceforth the blessed man in fervent zeal decided for himself that he would eat no food at all of any kind except ordinary bread, and water and salt or ordinary lentils, while in place of herbs he used to mix with these the leaves of a certain large tree that was inside the court of that monastery called *shigra*¹, eating from it all the summer, and in the winter again drying the produce of it and eating what was left, while all the members of his convent would urge him to desist from this distressing practice that was distressing his body, and in this only he did not obey; but the obedience and silence and humility in all his other relations of life went even beyond the limits, qualities that befit the humble and obedient; so that, if anyone stretched out his finger and stuck it in his eye, he would not raise his face (πρὸς ὄψιν) and look at him, or open his mouth and speak with him, and, if he said to him, « Take an ax and come turn this rock over », or « Come dig out this boulder that is not dug out », he would again not delay for the purpose of at least inquiring² « How [am I to] turn the mountain³ over » or « dig out the rock? », but silently take the iron and begin; so that they often made a kind of trial of him, and he would at once without delay begin what was ordered him, until that man whoever he were said to him ' Stop', and then he would cease.

Again a place had been made by him in the monastery-enclosure, and he would spend the rest of the day or of the night there, in vigil without measure and prayers without ceasing, so that in consequence of these things there was generated for him first sorrow of heart, and floods of tears of great weeping by night and by day, insomuch that his eyelids shed their lashes from weeping, and the hair of his head fell off in front, from the number of times that he used to knock it before God in supplication, while all who saw him were amazed and wondered at him, and on this account they used to call him, 'John the perfect Nazirite', while he was thereby openly preparing for the contest with the demons even to blood, insomuch that sometimes his mind received blows in the contest and was silenced, so that, if there was anyone who was present and saw him, he thought that he had a demon, in that he had become silent and had secretly in his spirit entered upon a secret contest with powers (γγγγ) and authorities, and during the intervals of the contest he was so hard smitten that others would approach him and speak with him and think that he was dead. And so for ten years this saint contended; and at last, when God saw his confidence in him and his steadfastness, he gave him strength and victory over his enemies, and from that time his mind was enlightened and his spiritual sight cleared, and he attained to high and marvellous conceptions (θεωρησεις) at which men marvelled, though he had not laboured at reading the Scriptures, but instead of everything he would utter a series of constant prayers; and through this there was given to him great perspicacity in the Scriptures and the commentaries, so that men were unable even to comprehend and take in the height of his words and the depth of his intellect, even the scholastics and the other men who were learned in the Holy Scriptures running to him to hear his words, while they were amazed and praised and glorified God. And afterwards he attained to authority over unclean spirits, and over great works of healing; but, if we record these severally, as we have also stated above, many sheets of parchment $\gamma\gamma\tau\tau\tau$ will not suffice us. When the blessed

John had completed twenty-five years in this life of perfection, heretical machinations assailed his convent¹, and all the leading men in it submitted under compulsion and great constraint (zvyzoz); and accordingly the blessed man prepared to withdraw from among them, saying, « For my part I have not forgotten the words of our Saviour who says, 'Whoso shall deny me before men, I also will deny him before my Father who is in heaven'² ». Then he left them, and departed, while about thirty men among the chiefs of the brotherhood and the leading men of the convent also went out after the blessed man, saying to him, « Death with you, our father, is more desired by us than life with others ». And so they set forth and went to another district, hoping in God, not even bread for the day being found upon them, while the blessed man encouraged them and said, « Would, my brethren, that we could attain to the blessing of those who have been persecuted for righteousness' sake³ ». And so they found a certain monastery and took up their abode in it, while the fame of the blessed John was heard also over the whole district, and accordingly all who were sick with various diseases and who had evil spirits ran to him, and the divine power that was in him would confidently heal them all, while everyone was amazed and thanked God ; so that we also went to him in the district of the saint's martyrdom, i. e. in his exile (ἐξορία), and, when we had sat down to take food, five demoniacs together with their hands tied behind them and howling beat down the door and came and entered foaming; but the blessed man rebuked them, and ordered them to go to the martyrs' chapel and lie down; and so they went; and, after we had had supper and everyone had gone away to rest, he himself went out and went and made a prayer, and expelled them¹ all; and they were found in the morning at peace and in their right minds. And we saw it, and were seized with amazement at the power of the saint's prayer. We were further specially amazed at him, because after severe labour he was even so not remiss; for there was an enclosure in that monastery, and one fig-tree inside it, and he went and brought sand and laid it on the south side of that tree, and he filled who said to him, 'My Lord, have we not in thy name prophesied, and in thy name done acts of power?', and he on his side will say to them, 'Verily I say unto you I know you not'. And again in the case of those who finished their courses in submission for God's sake, setting their will aside and doing that of their masters and of their brethren, and despising men and shunning even the appearance of virtue, whence is it tell me if that blessing is theirs which was given by the Lord of blessings to the lowly, and to the poor in spirit², as he also states in the prophet, 'Better is one who doeth the will than a thousand'³. Whence can we understand the secrets of God's dreadful final judgment, and his provision made in righteousness? And my opinion is this, that those who have spent the days of their life in due submission, according to the gospel (εὐαγγέλιον) saying, 'come not to judgment, but have passed from death to life'.

Again the third question, 'And what is the submission which is so great in your eyes, O our father?, and how should the man conduct himself who has set himself to practise submission, and how should he attain to this virtue which you have mentioned, which you have magnified beyond all classes of virtue, and what models are suited for the man who is submissive to observe? » The answer of the same blessed man. « There are many models; and there is a submission which while appearing submission begets loss for many by being accompanied by pride and by contumacy, and by the personal wishes of the man who seems submissive and by all the other things; and this leads to hell and not to life. But the submission which properly belongs to religion is this (which should also vary according to difference of inclination), that he who is ready to snatch spiritual fruits should be ready to listen to every order that is given him simply, and to carry it out diligently, not judging the man who gave him the order, and thinking 'This man has ordered me wrongly', unless he orders some act of sin that is at variance with religion, carrying in himself the model of the patriarch Abraham, who made no question or objection against him who ordered him « Take thy son thine only son him whom thou lovest, Isaac, and go offer him up to me as a whole burnt-offering upon one of the mountains » ¹. And, when this man received the order concerning his only son, he did not judge the saying that preceded it which he said to him « In Isaac shall thy seed be called », and « His seed shall be as the sand of the seas and as the stars in heaven » ²; and, when he said to him to whom this son was promised for these purposes « Go kill him », he accepted it simply, and only determined to show perfect obedience, and to carry to slaughter him in whom he promised him that his seed should be called; and, what is greater than all, with his own hands to sacrifice his only son, without thinking and saying, « Yesterday he said to me, « In this son shall thy seed be called », and now he said, « Go sacrifice him », and how will seed be called in him after he has been sacrificed? » And yet more facts than these were to be found in the affair of the blessed Abraham, if he had sought to raise objection against him who ordered him to carry out these two orders which thus seemed outwardly to be opposite to and inconsistent with one another, but he even undoubtfully believed and trusted him who promised, and to him who instigated him to kill the son of promise he assented, and he made ready to do it without inquiry; so that in virtue of this will that was submissive to faith and of obedience he attained the position of chief in the kingdom of heaven. So therefore he who is made submissive for God's sake should himself be ready to perform what has been ordered him without judging the man who gave the orders; and the man who gave the orders, whether he gave them wrongly or rightly, shall himself give account for the orders given by him; for the man himself also from whom he receives them has one who will reprimand him if he give a wrong order. Besides these things it is the duty of the man who professes religion by means of submission to have in him discretion in all matters that conduce to spiritual benefits, that whoever he is he may carry them out discreetly; i. e. to wait upon the saints, to wash the feet of strangers, to relieve them in all that they need, to clean their clothes, to mend all that are torn, to visit the sick, to concern himself about the relief of his brethren in all ways, to keep watch and vigil and pray and sigh before God at all seasons, and keep his tongue from evil, and his lips stainer and darkener of the soul, and will cry in affliction to God to come to his aid, and rescue him from his fraud and from his filthiness'. In the case therefore of this passion, our brother, he who wishes to escape from it and keep true purity, and be purified from all pollution of the flesh and of the spirit, needs tears and prayers and many sobs, and paucity of food, and abstinence from dishes of varying tastes, because the desire of dishes that please the taste are 'a deep cavern in which is no standing-ground. But think not that precaution against fornication is this only, precaution against that which consists in the open contact of body with body, but that also which is many times greater than this, the secret fornication of the heart and of the thoughts, is that against which we ought to take special precautions and be diligently on our guard; because many are the wiles by which the rebellious fiends endeavour in secret fashion rather than in that which is open to cheat and submerge and defile the soul that promises purity to its Lord, and strive by their deceits rather than that which is open to stain and submerge with many kinds of filthinesses, from the mention of which easily apply the plaster of his mercy to his infirmity. And further, even if the man who has been smitten receive healing, and after it he again smitten with another stroke, he should not even so neglect to run a second time to the Physician's door, even if he be smitten many times, or refrain from entreating for a plaster for his stroke, a thing which we see happen in visible battles also to those who are smitten, that, as long as their life is preserved in them, even if they be struck many times, they do not neglect to take measures for their bodily healing with all carefulness. So those also who have lapsed after the lapse of a spiritual fall must act, not falling into despair of life, and delivering themselves into the hand of their enemies.

 When these things are brought about in the case of any persons, that, after they have been involved in any lapses, they thrust themselves into the deep cavern of sin, they are worthy objects for great weeping and many sighs, in that, having fallen through a lapse, and having been a little besmirched with mire, instead of running to have their stains washed away, through the shameful teaching of those who caused them to lapse they resolved to throw themselves completely into the pit of filthiness, and voluntarily remain in the very submersion of their putrescence, which leads them to the submersion of condemnation in which there is no absolution, and to the wound for which there is no remedy, and bitter lamentation for which there is no consolation, and the dreadful judgment of torment which has no end for ever and ever. In the case of those who after the lapse of a fall are smitten with the same pleasure of sin, and remain in the same den of corruption and perdition, without having concerned themselves for the resurrection of their souls and the saving of their lives from the putrescence of sin, and have delivered themselves to the service of Satan, to whose will they have been made captive¹ by their free choice, the requiter of their service with him will repay them with eternal torment that passes not away, and in return for their affection with him and their remaining in his company will make them to inherit part of his possessions, which are outer darkness, wherein is weeping and gnashing of teeth, according to the saying of the Life-giver: since they have themselves sceeded from him who have joined themselves to the destroyer of their lives, with whom if they remain, they will also be tormented with him; from whom and from all whose doings may we all be preserved, by the abundant mercy of the Lord of all.

These, our brother, are the words which at the instigation of your request have been spoken on this subject; but they will be blamed by your sound and great and spiritual knowledge on account of the fact that they were spoken of fall and resurrection alike, and not according to the character of perfection, as your questions also strongly demanded: because we see that the disposition of all of us is inclined to and our will bent on a fall rather than on hastening to perfection; and therefore we must inquire and ask and speak about the forms of our illness and the remedies for it, lest the whole body be struck with the ulcers of sin, and grow putrid with the tumour of negligence, and we be thereby thrust into the abyss of torment: for we learn from the divine Paul who said: 'There is great fear of falling into the hands of the living God'.¹ What has been spoken is sufficient to stir up the memory of the discreet ».

The history of the blessed John the perfect Nazirite is ended.

IV. NEXT THE FOURTH HISTORY, OF THE SAINTS ABRAHAM AND MARO THE BROTHERS.

These before our time and in our time itself gained distinction upon a column and seized the crown of victory through their marvellous ways of life; in whose case also the words found in the Psalm of the Holy Spirit may also aptly be sung : « How good and how beautiful it is for brethren when they dwell together »¹; for to these two holy brethren alike it is good and beautiful and marvellous that they dwell together, as is written in the Psalmist. These two holy brothers were by birth pazzi from a village called *Kadesh*², in the territory of Amida; and the elder whose name was Abraham was first moved by zeal, and he went and dwelt in a monastery called *Ar'a Babtha*³ in the territory of Ingila. Now there was a high stone column to which men used to come in order to stand upon it in that monastery; and after he had broken himself for a space of ten years by great labours he himself ascended the column. And, when his brother whose name was Maro had seen it, he also came and entered upon the road from the first mile and began to walk soundly, while those two brothers were thenceforward illustrious for mighty labours of abstinence, until they received gifts of the Spirit also, the blessed Abraham receiving even the power of working healings and driving out demons, he being above, while his brother the blessed Maro shunned these things, saying: « Sir, I will have nothing to do with things that gain very vain glory for someone but deceive certain persons ». And many would seek assistance² with these; but he when he saw these persons coming to be healed would shut his door and remain silent. For from the very beginning also he had made a great segment from a hollow tree and set himself up inside it, having taken it inside the enclosure in a certain corner (γωνίᾳ; and he used to stand in it. And there was a little door, and he would stoop and come out by it when he wanted; for this monastery is situated on the top of a mountain, and there used to be heavy snow there and violent winds; and so he would go out and remove the snow who will entreat for me that I may escape from that torment? » And so these brothers were objects of marvel, their fame going as far as the country of the Persians. And, when Abraham... thirty-eight years... completed thirty eight¹ years on the column... deep and he... in his days,... When a great clamour everywhere arose and a great number of people in the villages and of the cities gathered together, they went up... the blessed Abraham. And what was purposed in the heart of the blessed Maro was not known to anyone; but when a ladder had been set up he first went up; and, when he stood at the top of the ladder, he found the holy old man bending down and sitting with his face to the east with his head between his knees, and he bade him a farewell; and so he took him up and carried him out weeping, and handed him towards... below him²... the east and for himself and prayed. And he entered and went to his brother's place. And the multitude (ὄχλος) was seized with sorrow and affliction on his account that was more than that in memory of the holy blessed man Abraham, while they cried and said, « Do us a kindness, our father; and, if so be you are thus purposed, come down, and first comfort us and go up at once in peace, because we shall all be made glad by this. » And, if you do not come down, we will all go up there ». And, being from affliction and many sighs unable to speak to the people, he beckoned to them with his hand to be silent and wait for him. And, when he had suppressed his own tears for a short time and restrained his weeping, he then said to them : « Brethren, pray for me, and leave me alone. I for my part did not desire this and my Lord knows, but, in order that my holy brother's place may not be vacant, I hope by his prayers that, until you bring me down as he came down, I shall henceforth not come down hence. But take the saint and wrap him up for burial, and go; and pray for me, that I may not be deprived of my brother Abraham's portion with all the saints. Now take away the ladder, and pray for me ». When this had been done and the holy Abraham had been wrapped up, the assembly dispersed, and each man went to his place in peace, being amazed and glorifying God¹. But the blessed man would in great affliction cry night and day to God, saying, « My Lord, let not this stone be to me a conductor to torment, but a conductor to life ».

My parents were acquainted with him, and every son who was born to them used to die at the end of a year and a half or two years : and, when I myself was born and came into this perturbed life, and¹ on the same day as my brothers the stroke that had slain them attacked me, as my parents used to tell me, they immediately repaired to the holy Maro, carrying me and weeping with sobs, crying to him, « Have mercy upon us, and pray to God for this one who has remained to us. Perhaps God will hear your prayers, and save him; since, if your prayers do not persuade God, this child, to judge from the example (στυγνείων) of his brothers, is already housed in the grave ». Then the blessed man, seeking to silence my parents' sobs, said to them : « Be quiet, be quiet. John shall not die before Maro ». Then, as they used to say to me, I was struck with silence as it were to death; and my mother wailed with a loud voice, and said : « Sir, he is dead ». Thereupon what happened? The blessed man (they said) in answer to the woman's vehement wailing jested and said : « Do not wail, woman — John shall not die before me ». And, guarding against the suspicion of pride like a wise merchant who keeps his riches that they may not be seen and plundered, and to make these persons think that it was not he who was the cause of the deliverance, he said to my mother laughing : « Believe in our Lord and go, take yourself into the refectory (2) ¹, and ask for some lentils from the servants' ² cauldron, and bring them to him, and he will at once live and recover, and eat of them ». And she, as thinking that he was jesting with her in order to silence her, herself went on wailing more than before, saying, « Henceforth, sir, this child's lentils are ripening in the grave. This child will now never again taste lentils here ». The holy Maro says to her : « See, you do not believe that from these lentils of these brothers you will gain a son, through the help of the prayers of the same brothers ». Then he said : « They told me to a certain brother who was present : « Brother, go in and fetch some lentils in a cup, and drop them into that baby's mouth ». That brother also (they told me) says : « Sir, for the baby, pray for him. This baby has already passed to that world ». And again (they said) he repeated to that brother, « Go do as I have told you ». That brother, in order not to oppose the intent of his command, went laughing and saying : « I am going to raise your son from the dead by the eating of lentils ». And he went in and fetched the lentils and came (they said) and stood above me, and said to the blessed man: « Sir, here are the lentils. You wilt see one who is dead eating lentils ». The saint says to him: « Take some with your finger, and insert them into his mouth three times ». And that brother (they said) took them and inserted them into my mouth, saying: « See! These things have been done to no purpose ». And at the third time (they said) I opened my eyes, and moved my tongue round, and tasted and turned round and roused myself. And then they cried to the blessed man, « Sir, sir, pray; and perhaps our Lord will effect a deliverance by your prayers, for the child has roused himself ». But the blessed man did not see them; because women used to stand and speak to him from one gate of the enclosure as far behind him as a woman's voice will carry, and they were not allowed to set foot inside, and he also never saw the face ^{παραπρωτο} of a woman, but her speech ¹ only. Then he said to my mother: « Give him lentils to eat as much as he wants, and take him and go, rear him for two more years, and bring him to me here; because this is my son, and there is no possibility of his dying until his father is buried ». And so they took me and went away; and, after two years, they gave me to the blessed man my spiritual father, by whose prayers I was saved from death; and the power of his blessing was dissolved and nullified through my evil deeds; for God used to work acts of great and marvellous power through him in all the words that he spoke even when laughing. And from that time the multitude (οχλος) began to gather together to the saint in numbers many times as great as came to his brother Abraham; which¹ was also very hateful to him that anyone should come and bring him a sick person or one possessed with a demon, but he would at once drive him out, saying these words: « O wretch-which took up its dwelling in the saints who were slain for his name, and loved him and did his will, and coming to me the wretched man and provoker of God? Indeed, επει, if I were one who pleased and loved God and did his will, you ought not to have come to me and neglected the saints, let alone when I provoke and irritate God. And there is another thing that you should know and understand, that it was because of my sins that I came up here to ask mercy like every man, not because of my righteousness. To suade men not to come to him every day; and, being distressed, and it not being open to him to act as he did in his brother's days by withdrawing when he saw these, accordingly, in order to extinguish out of him the reputation of gravity, he would speak to many with simple and ridiculous words, and like a fool, saying, « Why then (z̄z̄) come you to a madman? blessed man thus distressed by the multitude of people and crying that they hindered him from holding intercourse with God, wondered greatly. Once a certain layman came to him whose wife was barren and bore no children; and he knew his disposition, and had gained the privilege of free speech (παρανομία) with him, and by chance he came in and found him removing his nails, because his toe-nails were of vigorous growth, so that they were a finger or two fingers long. And, having prayed and sat down and begun to speak, he says to him: « Sir, pray for your bondmaid that she may have children, since I have no heir and hope of my house. » But he looked at him and wondered, and' he says to him: « Then (ἔρα), so-and-so, how is it that you do not consider the words that you are speaking to the most wretched of all men? How is it that you say these things to me? Have you not heard the blessed apostle saying, 'If a man hath not been able to rule his own house aright, how will he be able to rule God's church.'² How will one who has not been able to pray for his soul, which has become by its disposition barren of the progeny of good deeds, and through his prayer made it fruitful in spiritual progeny, be able to pray for women that they may bear children? » The man says to him : « Sir, there is no difficulty with God in making the former fruitful as well as the latter. And if you wish you will have mercy upon me. By God who chose you do not neglect me ». When he heard that he adjured him by God, he was moved by two considerations, one that he did not wish to state of himself at all that he could do any such thing, and another that he heard God's name and his heart trembled; and he said to that man : « Why did you adjure me by God about a matter that is not my concern and is too hard for me? Accordingly take what I will give you without men being aware it of, and go hang it on your wife, and you shall have a son, and you shall call his name Maro, no man being aware of it ». And he took one of his toe-nails and wrapt it up, and gave it him; and, in order that he might not honour it as a martyr, he said to him : « Observe that it is not a martyr, nor is this bundle humana': but it is a herb that I give you. See that no one undo and see it; and next year you shall carry your son also and bring this herb with him to me ». Then that man took it and went; and he hung it on his wife; and at once God gave to her and she received conception, and she bare a son. When this happened, it seemed to everyone no ordinary wonder that so-and-so the

with the blessed man. Then the saint would send and fetch him and gently entreat him, admonishing him and saying : « My son, beware, and keep what God has given you, for you are not in need. Wherefore do you oppress these broken-hearted poor, not one of whom has daily bread in his house? Remember the scripture that says, 'The orphans and the widows and them that turn to me ye shall not overreach nor defraud'; and again 'I am the father of the orphans and the judge of the widows'; and again, 'By reason of the plundering of the poor and the groaning of the needy, therefore will I arise, saith the Lord, and I will make deliverance openly'*. But for my part I pity you, my son; since, however much God's justice turns away, it is impossible that it will not some time be roused against evil-doers; and again, « Neither yet think that this power of the saints before whom these poor people come and groan is a void thing; lest it be roused against you, and you and your house perish. » But that wretched man stirred himself up arrogantly at the instigation of his father the devil, whose will he did according to what our Lord said to the Jews, « The will of your father ye do », so this man derided and scorned the man of God.

saying, « See, my sons, again how severe and awful and rapid is the sentence of the fall of pride, and beware of it, observing how many high and powerful men it has overthrown. And why repeat many instances, when it cast down from heaven to earth and overthrew him who himself causes it among men; even as he also to-day is again in the same fashion eager to overthrow everyone as he was overthrown, just as that wretched magistrate also was suddenly consumed and destroyed by his pride and haughtiness? Let us fear, and tremble, and entreat Christ our God to repel it from us by the prayers of his saints ». Concerning the rest of the admonition which treated of every form of life in his discourse, and concerning his warning and his exhortation addressed not to us only, but to laymen also as well, and even to women and children and fathers and all classes, what is there to write and say? To the brothers who were with him he would offer spiritual education and warnings and exhortation to spiritual things, and to his own priests and those of the villages and all who resorted to him he would give expositions of the solemnity of their service and the magnitude of the penalty, and the greatness also of the glory, and would incite and warn them to stand earnestly and with fear in their stations and serve in their classes: laymen again and women who was next after him went in, and cried out and said to him, « Sir, give byter said to him, « Why, sir, is your holiness distressed with weeping, and so above all when speaking? » But the saint said to him : « My son, go, and wake the brethren, and stand up to prayer; and grieve for my latter end, for what times I have been preserved, and what in my days my eyes see and my ears hear ». And, when his sobs came up more than ever, the presbyter, having been himself also seized with trembling, continued crying to him and saying : « What is the matter with you, sir? Tell me what it is ». Then he said to him : « My son, go and pray; because a sword has gone forth from the presence of the Lord, and slaughter has prevailed among the believers, and also over the churches and monasteries, because men have provoked God ». And the presbyter said, « If you please ², I entreat you to inform me what you have seen ». Then the blessed man was angry and said to him : « Remove yourself now, my son, from my presence. Have you not come to pry? Please go and recite the service; or, if not, begone now from here ».

the morning. But after twenty days the hosts of the Huns came forth, and they covered the land of the East, and none so numerous as they had appeared in the land of the Romans, nor had it ever been heard that any Huns except these presumed to cross the Euphrates; indeed even among the blessed man's companions also arose haste to flee to the fortress, while they said to him, « Sir, if you please we will carry you down, lest we leave you alone and you suffer distress, or they burn the monastery or anything happen to you yourself ». But he in confidence in his Lord said to them, and again not by way of boasting : « I, my sons, am ready for suffering, and my life and death are in God's hands. Go, and the Lord be with you, and pray for me ». When they saw it, three of them, trusting in the blessed man's prayers, bravely remained, while he was unaware that they had remained, and the rest fled to the fortress. But those who remained went in to him, and he saw them and was astonished, saying : « Have you not gone away, my sons? », and they say to him : « Either life or death is better for us with you, our father ». But he said to them : « Pray, my sons, that we may not

1. Ms. ins. « And these things happened in the reign of Justinian in his 8th year; but this is 534-5, and the year of the flight of the monks, which he did not do till after M's death, and, even if we read Justinian's 7th year, the year 529-6, the difficulty remains. Probably therefore the words are a scribe's interpolation, and D. and E. suppose.

these, like men who are driven along or whose eyes are blinded or whom a deceiver carries along so that they do not see, passed round the monastery half on one side and half on the other, and, just as if those whom they were pursuing were running before them, they passed by the gate of the monastery on this side and on that, thinking that they were just overtaking and catching the fugitives. And this their shouting indicated; since, while there was no one in front of them, they themselves continued crying and running, and so they passed round the blessed man's monastery, and not one of them entered within it; and so it is believed by everyone that it was not even seen by them at all, because they passed by the side of its walls and gates, and did not even lift up their eyes and look upon the site of one of its sides, although it is seen even at a great distance, and the blessed man's station moreover is seen above, being black. And so by the help of his prayers neither was the monastery harmed, nor anyone who was in it or round it, though in all the villages round it complete destruction was carried out, and even in the village itself they were for a whole day, and, while the whole monastery and the blessed man were seen by the village like a sun, their eyes were blinded and they did not see him. Many such things God used to perform him; and after him he bore all his burden and that also of the whole convent with stainless purity without murmur and without complaint: while the fame of his kindness and of his own habits also was everywhere spoken, through the charity to the poor which he possessed, and the love towards his brethren, and the reception of strangers, who used to carry his fame everywhere. But, after the blessed man's decease, he made himself a hut and a station in the enclosure itself, and therein carried out his labour and his abstinence: but he did not as yet mount the column. But I removed myself thence because of the neighbourhood of bodily kin (ϣϣϣϣ), and joined myself to the communities of the Amidenes, while they themselves were in the exile (ϣϣϣϣ) decreed by the heretics.

their origin (γενεσι)¹ a great and holy old man who was called Simeon had also been living as a recluse ever since the time when the saints Abraham and Maro the brothers began their discipleship², a man whose own story also was not unworthy of great admiration; who also in his own person carried out the words of the apostle which say, « They crucified their flesh with all its affections and its lusts »³. This man because of the great hospitality that existed in him (and he was eager to carry out the ministration to the saints personally with his own hands like the holy Abraham the patriarch)⁴ used not to shut himself up in a hut like all the others, because indeed as I have said he would not endure to do so, since he used to perform the ministration to the brothers who resorted to him. For the love of the great Abraham had been implanted in him toward all men, and on this account he made himself some small huts, and a little enclosed court and garden without a gate; and thus he was shut up within them with one disciple or two; and at one place he made for himself a way of ascending and descending the wall, on account of the strange brothers who resorted to him; and thus therefore he fulfilled in himself two purposes, both that of seclusion and time when M. ascended the column (p. 59), we get 583 as the date of the beginning of Simeon's seclusion, which is inconsistent with later statements: see p. 39 n. 1. - 3. Gal. v. 24.

to me these words : « How, my son, can I do aught but weep for my wretched self, since Christ comes to me on his own feet, and I cannot rise and wash them and drink ». But I, in order that he might be comforted, was saying to him : « Be not distressed at this, our father. When Christ wished, you washed him as much as he wished. And now his will be done. And your own will also he knows, and will not do you wrong, weep not ». But he said to me : « He, my son, has not done wrong and does not do wrong; but I am a doer of wrong and one who have done him wrong, and who am doing him wrong. If I had served him as I ought to have done, he would have allowed me to serve him all my life; but because I provoked him and neglected the service of his bondmen, for this reason he cast me down. » And so, though he was already a dead man in the body, men supporting him and setting him up, he insisted on their coming up before him and on stretching out his hand, weeping, and dipping it in the water in which the strangers had been washed, and taking it and smearing it on his body.

A short time before a persecution had been set on foot by those who served the synod of Chalcedon¹, and men who possessed the name only of churchmen expelled many by the use of barbarian troops, and many they arrested and imprisoned, and many they drove to death by stripes inflicted with rods, and many again they greedily and mercilessly plundered; and others they reduced to submission by force, and, when men had eaten and drunk wine and meat, they would open their mouths with lashing¹ hides (سوزیوس) and rods, and stuff their oblation into their mouths. When these things were being done in the very village in which these blessed men lived (inasmuch as it was in fact inhabited by real churchmen, at first they went straight to the blessed Sergius the old man's disciple; for of the saint himself they were afraid; for indeed some time before also they had used blandishments with him under the cloak of persuasion and affection, and they saw the vigour of his disposition, when they on their part thought that they were deceiving him as a simple man; for he on his side went on openly anathematizing them. Therefore they shrank from him; and for this reason they bent the whole mass of their plans in the direction of his disciple. And, when they went and began to speak craftily to him with coaxing words, while they praised the head of their congregation, that is their bishop², and wished to deceive and say, « There is nothing wrong, but agree and accept », while they on their side said these things to him softly and gently, as is said in the psalmist, « Their words are softer than oil, and they are arrow-points »¹, inasmuch as he was vigorous in his speech and in his zeal, he cried from his own window to them, « Stand up and go away from here, evil wicked men. You are cursed with the deceitful doctrine that you proclaim, since you advise me to accept a quaternity instead of the Holy Trinity, in which I was sealed for my life's salvation ». But these men, when they heard the anathema upon them spoken boldly² without fear, on their part also began their own methods, saying to him, « Come, come out; since there is no possibility of your staying here ». But the blessed Sergius said to them : « I will not come out of myself. But, if you turn me out, as our Lord Jesus lives, whose I am and whom I serve »³, in the middle of the church, while the whole city is assembled, before them and in the middle of them I will go up to the chancel (βήμα), and will curse you to your faces, you and the head of your congregation ». And his speech was thus keen and cutting, like a sword. But these men were yet more agitated by his words, and they pulled down his window, and dragged him out. But the blessed man did not neglect to carry out his oaths upon them: but the same night he set out and went to the holy Maro the stylite: because this happened in his days, while he was still alive, even as he also contended for twenty years in this struggle (zýon) against the heretics¹; but the bishops² were much ashamed before him and feared to send, or anyone to presume³ to enter his monastery: unless perhaps one of the clergy (ἐκκλησιαστικὸς) came in to him as it were by chance, who had voluntarily numbered himself in the ranks of the heretics, and being ashamed acknowledged the falsity of their⁴ faith. And thus two bishops passed away and died one after the other, and none molested the holy Maro⁵. But the third, in order to gratify those who appointed him, was lifted up in his pride and presumed to go to the blessed man, advising and admonishing and cajoling him, in order to bring him into subjection to the evil impiety of the accursed synod of Chalcedon. And, because this was a great and celebrated man, this man craftily sought means to catch him if only in speech, in order by him to deceive many, and say « Lo! Maro of his column agrees with us »; and, you have come out of your seclusion? Why have you come hither? And what has befallen our holy father your master? Has even he also come out? » Then the zealous Sergius, himself also weeping, related to him everything that had been done, and that they had been afraid of his master, and had not gone to him; and that he himself moreover had bound himself by oaths to go and go in and curse them before the whole city inside the church if they turned him out. When we all too being assembled heard these things also, we too desired to learn about the ejection of Sergius the recluse: but our father continued beating on his breast and weeping with sobs, saying, « Alas for my latter end and for my evil days, to what times I have been preserved. It is in thy power, Lord, to take my soul from me, rather than that I should see the buffetings and the distress of thy believers, and the persecution of thy church which thou purchasedst with thy precious blood! Have mercy, Lord, and remember thy church which thou purchasedst with thy passion and savedst with thy cross. Behold from heaven, my Lord, and see; and eat this vine, and the vine which thy right hand planted! » While our holy Father was saying these things with feeling and with bitter sobs, at the sound of his pitiful sobs we all wept with him. But, when he had been he swung his hand round and gave him a buffet, and distorted his mouth; and he seized him and shook him down. And he himself sprang up and stood in his place at the top of the chancel-steps (σῆμα), and said: « Cursed are the renegades; cursed are the persecutors; cursed is the synod of Chalcedon, and whosoever assents to it. Cursed is every soul that receives the oblation from you and assents to your opinion unless he repents ». When the blessed man had cried these words in a loud voice, great turmoil and confusion prevailed among the clergy (ἐπίσκοποι) and the people and the bishop, some threatening, some expressing indignation, some crying, « This man is a teacher of error, let him be arrested », and some crying, « Let no man lay hands upon him and die ». And so the whole city became one intense volume of sound, the adversaries expressing indignation, and the believers joy. Since they feared on account of the people to lay their hands upon the blessed man, the man who was practised in pernicious wiles rose and quieted the people by saying, « Be so good¹ as to let the blessed man come into the vestry², and we will speak, and see what his business is »; and thus he succeeded by a trick in withdrawing him from the people, and then accomplishing his will upon him. When the crowd (ὄχλος) had dispersed, or a hundred only, but each one of them would pull him¹ from his side and torture him (for they were about three hundred); and accordingly those who used to send to that place were confident that their purpose would be accomplished. But the holy Sergius, being confined in the middle of the monastery on the third floor, by God's help escaped from them on the third day, having even slipped out of his irons, and a certain pitcher for water, which was the only thing that he had with him, he also in the keenness of his ardour grasped in his hand, and he climbed up to his window on the third floor, and he leaped with that pitcher also in his hand and the irons with it², and he came down and stood on his feet outside the monastery. And so he escaped from them, and came to his holy master; and he fell upon his face before him, and said : « Now, sir, I have learned that God loves you, and in truth hears you; since, unless the mediation of your prayers helps, it would have been quite impossible for me to see your face ». When he had related everything to him, he gave thanks to the merciful God, who cares for his own. But afterwards he asked his master's permission to go and build a monastery in a certain mountainous district belonging to a village called Qlwlyte; and he gave him permission and blessed him. And he took his cross and the saint's blessing, and went and erected his cross there, and recites the service. And he kneels down and prays for three days, night and day; and then some people saw him and gave information in the village, and they came to him. And on his informing them of his purpose they were pleased; and each one of them ran to his house to find something to bestow upon the blessed man's prayer in proportion to his ability, while by the common effort also a monastery was erected in that desolate mountainous region in a few days, there being abundance of water there. When the monastery was completely finished, the adversaries heard the news, « That audacious stubborn man is building a monastery in such-and-such a place »; and men were at once appointed to go out and pull the monastery down to its foundations, « and signify to him also besides that you desire to arrest and bring him to us »; and if you see that he is ready and willing to come, leave him alone, and do not bring him upon us ». Then these men set out, having first declared and professed « Why! perhaps he will be afraid, and run away from us ». And, when they came, they found the blessed man standing and reciting the service; and, when they saw him, they said to him: « Since you have built a monastery without an order, we have been ordered to pull your monastery down, and conduct you to the bishop ». But the blessed man in the fervour of his zeal said to them with oaths : « If you are in truth ordered to pull down and desire to do so, I myself will lay the first ax to it; and, if it is your desire, I will go in before you to him who sent you ». When those men saw that he was ready, they were afraid of him; and they say to him : « We are truly ordered to pull it down and are prepared to do so; but we do not desire you to come in to the bishop ». Then the blessed man was the first to run and take his ax, and he fixed it in the wall and said to them : « Come, here is glory to our Lord ». And they, because they were many, pulled the monastery down to the ground in one day; and he himself was assisting them to do the work of demolition. But, when they had finished their task, and he was himself urging them to drag away the wood and stones and throw them outside, he said to them : « Listen now, evil wicked men. In truth I say to you that, if renegades against grace deserved it, I would thank you greatly for labouring with me here. God without your being aware of what you have done constrained you to subvert these huts, as to which I was truly exercised in my mind in consequence of the fact that they were built in haste; and now I trust in our Lord Jesus that I shall now build a monastery indeed here ».

1. As Maro was still living (p. 98), this must be the persecution of 521, and the short time must be at least 19 years.

for his glory by the hand of this holy old man the time is too short for me to relate; and for this reason, wishing to avoid a lengthy narrative, I have recorded these things only, thereby falling far short of the splendid glories of this man; to which it is not only I who was a witness, but all who knew him; so that another great and holy man and seer of spiritual visions also who lived in the south in the inner desert bore testimony about the old man, since, when some men from the territory (γέφυρα) of the city of Amida were going down for the harvest (because men are in the habit of going down to the southern country for the harvest), they heard of that saint, and were eager to go and be blessed by him; and, when they had gone and had come to him and been blessed by him, he asked them, « Whence are you, my sons? »; and they said, « From the north of Amida ». The blessed man said to them : « But what, my sons, do I for my part really know? and wherefore did you come to my wretched self? If you are from the north of Amida, wherefore did you not go to the pillar of light which stands in the northern country, who to-day has been serving God in his saints for forty years, and has not grown tired or weary, nor is yet satiated with so doing? Wherefore, my sons, did you not go to this man, who has refreshed God in the persons of the weary, who has also caused the savour of his practices and of his purpose that is good and acceptable¹ at all times to reach to the heavens of heavens? » But these men on hearing these things from the saint fell on their faces and continued entreating him and saying: « Who, sir, is he of whom you have said these things to us? » But the blessed man, in accordance with what our Lord also taught in his preaching, « A city built upon a mountain cannot be hid », and again « So let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father that is in the heavens »², says to these men: « This

VI. — NEXT THE SIXTH HISTORY, OF THE GREAT MAN OF GOD PAUL THE HUMBLE ANCHORITE.

There was again a blessed man beloved of God and laborious and humble and a perfect Nazirite, Paul the anchorite, who was from the district of Sophanene. This man therefore, when he had been for many years practising heavy and severe labours of asceticism and great abstinence, heard some men saying that there was a certain large cave in the side of a certain high rock on the banks of the Tigris at a place called Sutha¹, which is some distance from the cultivated land, but near the road, and malignant fiends lived in it, so that men passed along that road with trembling, though it was very necessary that men should pass along it, because it led into the fortress called Ziyat'. But this blessed man, when he heard the report of that cave, reflected, « Because those who pass along that road are frightened, and again in order that the powers of the enemy may be expelled by the name of human beings and the presence of a human habitation, it is a duty to go, and to erect the emblem of the cross there ».

Then this blessed man, like a mighty man who mocks at the feeble and sick men who wish to fight with him, confidently armed himself with the power of God and confidence in him, and directed his steps to the place. And he went and arrived at the cave, and near it at about half a furrow's length² he erected the cross; and he fetched stones, and traced the plan of a small oratory and knelt there in prayer, and passed the night in the place. And during the night shapes of basilisks and fearful shapes of every kind qyoz gathered together against him³; and, the more constancy he on his side showed, the more the gruff voices and grievous exhalations increased, just as if great serpents had arrived and were coming, and just as if their breath were striking against the blessed man's clothes in order to drive him away. But he was thus constant in prayer all that night, and all the day, and again another night also. And next to a sound of boulders being uprooted just above the blessed man, and they were indeed uprooted and came down from the rock above, and they came, and reached him, and thus they would pass by while he was kneeling at his prayer, not having power to touch him. And so he passed seven days and nights in that place in such conflicts. And, when these demons practised many different kinds of contrivances against him in order to shake him or frighten him or drive him away, he like a mighty man girt in the true breastplate of his Lord was not shaken, nor reckoned their wiles and their foul shapes as anything, but also after he had, like a mighty man who trusts in his Lord, after the pattern of the holy David, chosen for himself the sound pebbles of prayers from the river of grace, and had taken the staff of the cross, and lifted the sling of heavenly trust, then he next looked upon the camp of the Philistine tyrants, to pull down their prowess and to scatter their camp. And so on the eighth he not agitated, but make the sign of the cross upon you and be silent; and, even if I myself call you or anyone else, do not come out » (because the fiends often deceived men there). And again to those who came to him to receive instruction from him he would say the same words and he would caution them, since at night they slept inside, and he outside by the gate; because fiends used to appear in his likeness, and used to terrify the brother, and entice him out; because under the cave there was a great hole. And so the blessed man used to lie awake to guard the place in which he lived, from the time when he directed his steps to that cave, and he made an altar and set it up in it, and he made it a chapel. And thenceforth the brotherhood used to sleep confidently in it; and his monastery extended to twenty men. And so all the men of that district used to run to receive the blessed Paul's blessing, and to gain the privilege of seeing him, and to hear his gentle words; for God gave also into his hand a great gift of healing. But his asceticism and his labours and his humility no man can 'succeed in describing'; since he was so humble and retiring that, if a man were to sit with him and converse for three days, he would not raise his face (πρόσωπον) nor who was called 'the consecrated', and had reached old age being about sixty years old. This man one day, when the gospel (εὐγγέλιον) was being read, heard that our Lord said, « Whoever shall leave wife or children etc. for my sake and for the sake of my preaching shall receive thirtyfold and sixtyfold and an hundredfold in this age, and in the future age shall inherit eternal life »¹; and again « Whoever doth not take up his cross and follow me is not worthy of me »². When this old man heard these words, sorrow entered into his mind, and he thought within himself, and said : « Wherefore am I for my part alive and called a Christian, if I do not do God's will? If it is pleasing to God that I should leave wife and children, even now that my days have been completed and the sentence has reached me that I shall leave them against my will, why do I not that which God wishes?

 What have I gained either from children or from wife, or from the whole world, except that I have consumed my life in it in vanity, and idly wasted my moments, and passed my days evilly?, and lo! I have come to the gate of the grave. Who will shelter me there in that judgment? or who will resere me from my sins? But now even for this little remainder of my life that remains to me I will go and repent of my sins, and then I will die, having hope in that parable of the labourers which our Lord spake, that, even after the day had declined and one hour only was left for those who came, they were thought worthy to receive the pay with the first'. So I too also hope that God will not shut the door of his mercy in the face of my repentance ». And thereafter the old man would think, « What shall I do? If I go to a monastery, I cannot work; and they will say, 'This old man has come upon us in order to get a present out of us' ». Then the old man left everything, and went to a certain monastery and said to them, weeping : « Rise make the prayer for me, and give me the tonsure, and take the hair of my secular life from me, since I desire to repent for a short time for my sins before I die ». But the blessed men did not frustrate his wish and stand in his way, when they heard the announcement of repentance from him, but they encouraged him and they say to him : « You are doing right, our father, if you are turning in repentance toward God; since he is merciful and will receive you ». After they had held much conversation with him, because they supposed that he intended to live with say, « Come let us go and be blessed by Abraham the consecrated recluse », and others, uttering words that came from the evil one, would say, « If he had shut up his wife with him, he would be doing rightly ». But the old man despised everything and set one object only before his eyes, since he would ask repentance for his sins and healing from the merciful Physician, not ceasing from prayer and recitation of service, either by night or by day. And his service was as follows : « Glory to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Spirit Halleluyah! »; and again as follows : « and from eternity to eternity Amen and Amen! Halleluyah! » And thus he spent the hours of the night and of the day in these words of praise with prayer and supplication and thanksgiving, while he gave orders that none of his kin (γένοις) should appear in his presence; and before the first day of the week he did not speak to anyone, but wept continuously for his sins; and so men used to go by stealth, and listen to the sound of his sobs, and they were astonished at him. And the old man persevered in his repentance for eight years. And in the eighth year when he was near his end, there used to be hail in these villages outside all its boundaries all round, not even the leaves remained upon the trees'. Then the boundaries of that village exulted, while they themselves made proclamation concerning the power of the prayers of the blessed Abraham, everyone being astonished and giving thanks to God. And the old man also rejoiced, and he gives thanks to God who had shown him that he accepted his repentance. And, at the end of the eighth year, he departed from the world in the good ending of repentance.

The history of the old man Abraham the layman, the recluse, is ended.

It is patent to everyone that salt does not itself need a condiment, because by its own nature it is a condiment, and, to put it differently, not a condiment only, but — salted by its nature; and accordingly it does not need itself or make use of itself, but all other insipid foods need to use it as a condiment. But the four sketches which show the admirable form of the likenesses of the saints are not adapted for repetition to them, nor do they themselves need made, and the man who attended him would meet him, and inform him in case anyone had come out to look for him. And thus he would do even in snow and frost, in order that he might not be seen by men; but he had given orders that everyone who came should be received and refreshed and go; so that in fact on one and two occasions I went up to these mountains to see the blessed man, and I did not see him with his consent. But on one occasion, because I knew the hour of his arrival, I took one of the brethren with me, and at eventide we betook ourselves to that place; and, as there was a thicket of many trees there, I said to the brother who was with me: « Let us sit down among these trees, and lie in wait for the old man; since perhaps he will come and we shall catch him, and obtain his blessing ». And, while we on our part were sitting down, lo! there comes the sound of his feet and of his breath as he was coming down from the mountain; and, when we saw him in the distance, we kept ourselves hidden all the more, lest he should see us and turn back; as in fact happened. When he had approached to about half a furlow's length' from us, though neither the sight of us nor the perception of our presence reached him, as if he scented the smell of us, he checked himself and halted, waiting a long time, while we on our side did not stand up and were not seen by him; and, as if he had become to rest for a short time. But we, when we saw that he had sat down to rest, came down by a certain deep gully, and went on until we arrived opposite the blessed man; and thus we suddenly came up and caught him. But when he saw us he was thunderstruck, as a man is frightened by the sudden sight of some lion; and, after he had looked this way and that and seen that there was no escape, he stood up and received us, and made a prayer. And he stood and asked, saying, « Whence have you come hither, blessed men, on this mountain? » We continued entreating him to sit down for a little time; but he did not consent to sit down, in order that he might not be involved in a long conversation with human beings; but he continued saying to us, « Go to the monastery and rest there, and lo! I will myself come at once ». And, after we had begun many sentences, he continued urging this upon us, to go to the monastery, in order (as he professed) to rest, which was only that he might escape from us. But I, inasmuch as I divined his purpose, said to him: « Why, our father, do you run away from us? Sit down and speak, and console us with your affectionate words¹, and sow good seed in our ears, even if² our own soil is ungrateful, and barren and uncultivated ». But he looked at me, and said : « Do we then (žžz), pray, seek another greater than Jesus to speak with us or to admonish us? and, if we do not obey him, if a man rise from the dead and speak, how shall we obey him? » Now go and rest, and I will come, and we will talk ». But I inasmuch as I knew his purpose reflected that on account of the blessed man's pleasure we had been afraid of annoying him; and so we fell down before him and entreated him to bless us and to endow us with his holy prayers. But he when he dismissed us said to us : « Do you pray for me the ungrateful. As for yourselves your earnestness signifies the direction of your will, that God may mingle his will with your will, and make your will his will. Pray for me ». And thus we parted, and we did not see the blessed man again; but sufficient for our consolation and for thanksgiving to God to be ever rendered by us was this one occasion on which we were not deprived of the benefit of the sight of this divine man. After a period of twenty-five years, while spending his time in this way, he ended this life of troubles, and departed to the rest of his Lord, having committed the place of provision for the needy to the inmates of his convent, and enjoined

IX. — NEXT THE NINTH HISTORY, OF THE BLESSED MARE¹ OF BETH URTAYE².

This blessed Mare was a clergyman (ܕܐܘܨܘܨܝܢܐ) in the church of a certain large village in the district of Anzetene³ called the village of Hula (ܗܘܠܐ). This man then, when he was a member of the clergy (ܕܐܘܨܘܨܝܢܐ), used to behave with great and measureless arrogance, and he was haughty and a good speaker and teacher, and very well-informed on every subject. And, grace having at a certain time arisen in his mind, suddenly he began to form the plan of taking upon him the yoke of monasticism; and he disposed of and distributed all that he had among the needy; and he withdrew to a certain mountainous spot about three miles from the village; and he bound himself never to taste bread or wine or oil, or cheese or fish, or anything whatever except pulse and herbs and water; and thus he exercised himself severely.

countries in which the preaching of Christ had travelled; for whom, I think, it would not have been improper to speak with boldness (παρρησία) like the holy Paul and say: « I have toiled more than all »¹, and to say further this also, that he had travelled not only from Jerusalem and as far as Illyricum², but also in all countries in which the preaching of Christ had travelled, except only the territories of Rome; and thither also he was ready and had started to go, when God saw his venerable character and his old age and his labour, and ordered him to finish his course in the royal city of Constantinople.

This holy Simeon then even before the period of his episcopacy, besides the fervent zeal and enthusiasm for the true faith unto death which he possessed, was deeply versed in the Scriptures, and he was also ardent in practising debate, beyond (in my opinion) any other man, even the ancient fathers; because besides the gift of God this other fact too summoned him to it, because he was also a Persian, and he lived in Persia, and it is in that country especially that the teaching of the school of Theodore and Nestorius is very wide-spread, so that believing bishops and their dioceses are few there, and further besides this teaching that of the school of Mani and

and ceaselessly contending; and wherever he came victory was given him by God, and he was made a closer of the mouth to all heretics (aipetōzoi), until their chiefs or doctors dreaded to open their mouth and speak in a district in which his presence had been reported; because in a district in which a debate was being originated by the Nestorians against the believers who were in it, if he were five or ten days' journey (uzvōtōv) away, as if God had made him ready and as if the earth had vomited him up, he would suddenly spring up and be present there¹, since from the greatness of his zeal and the fervour of his will he did not rest and sit still in one district, saying, « I must not sit still and rest, when I know that Christ's sheep are being scattered among ravening and destructive wolves, who will not spare to destroy them and tear them in pieces² ». And for this reason he was sedulous in going out among the countries, as far as the camp³ of the Saracens of the tribe of Nu'man, which he often visited; so that he gained a large number of Saracens in it, and he induced the magnates who were converted by his words to build a Christian church in it. And again he would depart and go down to the very gate of the kingdom⁴, and would turn many to God not only among the heretics (xiposwtari), but also among the Magians; so that he once even converted three great and distinguished men among the Magians and baptized them. And, when their companions heard that they had turned away from Magism and become Christians, they informed the king about them; and they received an order that, if they had really turned away and would not deny Christianity, they should die.

But these men, who showed themselves worthy of a crown of life, when they saw the threat and the king's sword, were not afraid nor dismayed, while the blessed man also armed them with the enthusiasm of martyrdom for the sake of eternal life, and they resisted the order and the sword that had gone out against them; and they say, « Far be it from us to deny the living God who made heaven and earth, and his Son the Lord Jesus Christ, who called us and brought us near to him by his grace, that we should deny him again and worship instead of him the things that he created ». Then ten days after their spiritual birth these blessed men departed to God by the quick death of the sword, bearing good testimony. But this blessed man continued to go out among the countries without ceasing, and to warn and make disciples and convert. And accordingly his fame went out over the whole land, and not only that of the Persians but that of the Romans also:

and doctors, inasmuch that, wherever they asked him to debate, he would debate with them before an audience and would set up umpires to hear the discussion between them, and so he would debate and would refute them and put them to shame, so that on no single occasion was he defeated by them in debate. And therefore, if it happened that one of their bishops wished to originate a debate with any of the believers, he would first inquire ¹ from travellers, or from anyone who came in his way where Simeon was, and then would speak, saying, « Inquire ¹ and see as to the man whom they used also to call the invincible Satan Simeon the debater where he is »; so that once they were asking [him himself² about him³, because everywhere he was inflicting shame upon them, defeating and refuting them, and causing even the Magians to laugh at them, since he would often set up the Magians themselves as judges, and thus before them as judges plead the cause of the faith, and they themselves would adjudge the victory to him, and laugh at these men. And therefore many were threatening to kill him, in order to rid themselves of him; and above all those who did not know him by sight and were accustomed to hear about him used to threaten him; and for this reason agrees with that of the Romans, and they convey the secrets of the kingdom to the Roman dominions ». But this wretched catholicus, because he knew that if he opened his mouth on the subject of the faith he would be put to shame, began to make accusation, not knowing that God would put him to shame; and, because he did not know what to do, had recourse to accusation.

But that governor as if inspired by the grace of God answered him, saying:

These are our affairs, not yours. If we learn that as a matter of fact these things are so, we will attend to them. You on account of the enmity that you have toward one another say these things to us; but we for our part will not receive these statements from you ». Then an expression of thanks was offered to the Magian by the believers, who said, « Your judgment is just and upright ». The governor says to the catholicus: « If you have anything else to say, about your faith, say on ». Babai the catholicus says to him: « My lord, as to our faith we have to speak about a certain man like us, who was born from a woman as we were, and upon whom the Word of God came down on account of his uprightness and his righteousness; and, just as the king of kings might find a beggar's son in a dunghheap girl with rags, and give orders about him that they should raise him from the dungheap, and strip the rags with which he was girt off him and clothe him in royal raiment, and the king might issue an order « Let everyone name this man my son », and, because that poor man found grace in the king's eyes, he also conferred upon him the honour of being called his son, so God was pleased to name this man to whom the contention between us relates his Son by grace, when he is not so by nature ». And he came to an end. The governor says : « What do you say ? » Simeon says : « We know that your wisdom will not go astray. Therefore we entreat you by the great God (may he prolong your days) out of all the statements which the catholicus has made to investigate two, and examine and judge fairly ». a man like us, or whence was he ». The governor says to the catholicus : « What say you about these things? Was the man of whom you spoke to me from the seed of a man, or whence was he? » But he was struck with shame, and he could not say that he came from seed. He says to him : « He did not come from seed ». He says to him, « And whence is his conception? » He says to him : « It is written that it is from the Holy Spirit ». He says to them : « Lo! therefore you lied when you said that he is an ordinary man like us. Lo! therefore his conception and birth are not like us, but above us; for we for our part never heard that a man was born without seed. And, if in the case of this man whom you accuse you have yourself on the other hand testified that he was born without copulation and without seed, he is not an ordinary man like us; and by your own testimony you have been condemned, and these men speak truth rather than you ». While the party of the believers were proceeding to extol the governor with praises, Simeon says to the marzban : « My lord, let them confess one more point in the presence of your wisdom, and let us dispense with lengthy speech ». He says to him, « What? » Simeon says to him : « Since the catholicus said to your highness that the king of kings takes a poor man's son from a dung-bishops continued giving vent to exclamations (φωνάζει), saying, « God preserve your wisdom and your uprightness many years. God multiply your greatness many times, and grant you a good life ». And so they separated, the Nestorians having been put to shame. This was also the occasion of this saint's episcopate; because they often pressed him to accept ordination to the episcopate, and he would not consent; but, after he had come out victorious, they seized him by force and made him bishop for a place called Beth Arsham¹, and thereforward he bore the title of metropolitan bishop of Beth Arsham. And so he would go about in the interior countries beyond the Persians and make disciples, and convert men from paganism and Magism, and return again to the same country, and strenuously meet those who held the impious doctrine of Nestorius in the same contests; and these were again inflamed with hatred against him. And some moreover of the most eminent among them made cruel accusations against him and all the believers as well before the Persian king. Then he issued an order that all the believing bishops should be arrested, and all the chief archimandrites, and committed to prison at Nisibis; and thus they were arrested and imprisoned in bitter confinement (as is the custom of the Persians who imprison without mercy) for seven years, being subjected to great distress and severe trial (ζῆλον), so that the mouth is too small for us to describe that distress. And then, after their own lives had wasted away, and they were all already knocking at the gate of death, from the distress and also from the length of time, an account of these things was written to the king of Aethiopia; and, since he also was a believer, he made this request though his ambassadors of the Persian king, and he released them from that distress. But after a time much accusation was again made against them before the king by the Nestorian bishops, who said : « Our people hold the faith among all Christians and in all kingdoms ». When the blessed Simeon learned these things, he came to the king's court, and strenuously contended in the refutation of this falsehood. But the Magians, being much worried by them, since they did not know how to judge and decide between them, issued an order in these terms : « Whoever of you wishes it, permission is given to him to go out and go round among the kings of the Christian peoples, and among the chief bishops and authorities, and bring us their faith and their seals, that we may know which party among you speaks well and shows great correctness ». But this earnest blessed man, when he heard these words, rejoiced with great joy; and from the ardour of his zeal, since he had thus set his face to the task, the labour of going¹ from peoples to peoples, and from kingdoms to kingdoms was not reckoned by him as anything at all, but he undertook this with joy as something light and easy and of no moment². And he set out at once without delay in his zeal, in order to traverse the frontiers of the peoples and the kingdoms, not being hindered or frightened by fear of anything, not of the great length of the intervening space, nor the dangerous character of the countries on account of robbers, nor the crossings of the rivers, nor the long distances to be covered, and, what is greater than all, not even the burden of his old age; but thus, in confidence on God and the ardour of his burning zeal, he made light of everything, and

1. It is possible, of course, that the argument here advanced must be ascribed to Simson; but that the words which were put into their mouths 'ο οδαι Judæus'. 2. As the verb is καταβαλεν it is a little weak word.

1. Ms. om. — 2. The reason for the journey can hardly have been as here stated, since the Persians would have no object in making the inquiry and knew well that the Nestorians differed from the Catholics of the empire and therefore favoured them. Moreover it was to the interest of the Nestorians to stress upon the difference, not to deny it; cf. p. 142, 147. Barb. (l. c. says that S. obtained permission from the king to encourage the Monophysites to hold their services freely and to defend them against the Nestorians, adding that he received certificates from Greeks, Armenians, and Syrians, and that he considered from the Nestorians.

him; and he proceeded to stir up war in the territories of the Romans', and his appearance before the authorities was not carried out. But it became known to all men living in the country of the Persians that the evil doctrine of Nestorius flourished there only, while all peoples and tongues abhorred it; and this glorious old man was yet more emboldened against them. In this same zeal then some occasion called him to go up to the queen of the Romans, to ask her for a letter to the chief queen of the Persians about the affairs of the believers, and, if it were possible, to go up in the same zeal to the territories of Rome. And she gladly consented, because she had in fact been well acquainted with his earnestness and his zeal for some time; and she detained him there for the space of one year, holding him in great honour. And God saw the saint's labour, and that he had grown old and very feeble, and his signal gave command and he fell asleep there, in our presence; so that his presbyter who himself also was devout and virtuous, whose name was Paul, lived with us in the domicile of the glorious patrician Probus for two years², while at all seasons we meditated together upon the eloquence of the holy old man Simeon and on his treatises and his proceedings against the heretics (zi:zaw:zi), Nestorians and Manichees, and followers of Bar Daisan and Eutychianists; since he also composed a work of instruction and books of objections against the heretics, and he write many letters on the faith to many believers everywhere, some of which in the saint's own handwriting we inherited in order to supplement his blessing. But at last that presbyter also as well fell asleep in the same city, bearing the testimony of a devout manner of life.

The history of Mar Simeon the bishop the Persian debater is ended.

This blessed man belonged to a distinguished, great, and rich family, and, when all the members of his family (zi:zaw:zi), his parents included, had died, the whole household and the wealth were left in this man's hands, and also in the hands of another kinsman older than he; and he practised deceit and was a man of artful tricks and a dog like Nabal¹; and he was moreover engaged in the affairs of the *prætoriani*². But this virtuous Harfat lived in pure and simple fashion and spent a guileless life within the house like Jacob³, having committed the whole management of it to that kinsman of his; and he himself as far as he could gave his attention to the needy and to the salvation of his soul, while his soul was indeed vexed and he was distressed at the multitude of male and female slaves, and hired servants and outsiders, and the other luxuries of the household; and he would think in himself, and say: « Wherefore do I need all this parade, while debtors go on bringing interest and bonds continue to be exacted every day? »; but the blessed man was occupied with thoughts that were adverse to these things. After a little time the bishop of a place called Arsamosata died, and they came to make the blessed man bishop, that is in the Chalcedonian communion⁴; but he shrank from this. When they saw that this man had absolutely refused, under the inducement of riches and high position they seized his kinsman, a layman, and made him bishop; and, when he had become bishop, the blessed man continually required of him to divide the estate; in order that he himself might distribute his share (μῆρος) among the needy, and he would not agree, saying, « While I live, it shall not be divided ». Now they had about five thousand denarii, besides all the rest of the estate, and, when that man had gone to his see, the blessed man distributed as much as he could among the needy, and committed the rest to our Lord, saying, « Lord, thou knowest the readiness of my mind, and the fact moreover that neither hast thou commanded me to continue in contention and strife. Henceforth, Lord, dispose thou my wretched soul to live before thee according to thy will ».

Then the blessed man left the house and the office of the chorepiscopate which he had held for some years, and withdrew to a convent of the solitary life. And, because he was very simple, and thought that this was the consummation of perfection, he went and made great heavy irons and put them up on himself, that is on his neck and on his hands and on his feet, two on each. And he went and settled on a certain mountain about three miles from the cultivated land, and he did not take or receive any part whatever of his property, but he would sit thus on that mountain, mourning and weeping and groaning for the rest of life which had been spent and had passed from him in vain. But, when he had stayed a considerable time in these mountains, in consequence of the quantity of snow and the severity of the cold the blessed man suffered great distress and was brought to the point of death. Then a certain believing lady made a hut for him, and in it he would sit and weep night and day, though many said to him, « What is the cause of this weeping of yours that is thus incessant and not for a limited season? The man who weeps out of sorrow for his sins has seasons. Why do you thus weep like a baby over your eating and your sitting down and your rising up? » But, when he heard these words, the blessed man's sobs would rose all the more, and his very speech to the man who was addressing him was mingled with weeping, while he expressed himself saying, « Who, my sons, will not weep, when he sees a decayed and putrid corpse thrown down in his house? Who will not mourn for the sons of youth fair to behold and of attractive age, when he sees that death has corrupted their features, and they have become mire and putrescence and loathsome worms in place of the attractive beauty of childhood? And, if men weep for these with sobs, how shall I not now wail bitterly for my wretched soul that was fashioned in the likeness of angels with all beauties, and lo! is dead in sin and decayed through evil deeds and cast down in the house of the body, and in which corrupt and abominable thoughts creep about like worms? How shall I not weep for my moments that have been spent by me in vain without my perceiving it? How shall I not mourn for my days that I have uselessly wasted one by one without knowing it? And now lo! the terrible sentence of torment is prepared for me, which the workers of iniquity deserve! For this reason I ought not only to weep, but also to mourn and wail like a jackal, and increase mourning as of a jackal's whelp for my life that has been spent, for my moments that have been consumed, for my years that have been lost, for my time that has been wasted, for my soul that is dead in sin, for my body that has been made a grave during my life, for my soul that is dead in evil deeds, for the judgment that has arrived, for the end of life that has overtaken me, for the terrible sentence of justice, for the moment when the command will go forth, 'He who hath not wedding-garments, let his hands and his feet be bound and let him be cast into outer darkness'. And for what reasons, pray, O men, do you advise me to cease crying woe upon my life at all moments? » And thus this man used to cause all men to marvel and be amazed, until the report of his mortification and of his affliction penetrated to every place. And, when we heard these things, we made it our object to obtain a sight of this blessed man. And, having done this, we went and entered his presence; and so we found him in the same state, sitting in dejection, and in great infirmity on account of the labour and the abstinence, as well as from the weight of these irons. And, when we had enjoyed his society for a day and two days, and had gained freedom (παύσησιν) of speech in his presence, and continued saying to him « Wherefore, O our father, have you burdened your body with the weight of all this iron? », he said to us, « On account of my sins ». we were on another occasion conversing with him, we again said to him : « What regulation commands this matter of the irons to be carried out? », and, « If we seek to humble our body to the earth by labours of asceticism, cannot we humble it without irons! ». After we had addressed many words to the blessed man, he continued to weep and sigh; and at last he said to us : « And now, sir, what do you wish done? ». And I, joking a little with him, said to him : « We wish you to throw off these irons which are a useless burden, and lade yourself instead of them with the burden of labours performed with knowledge; and thus you will please God ». But the blessed man was much annoyed at these words, saying, « It were better for me that my head were removed and not these irons ». And I turned upon him with the words : « For what reason? ». But he in his simplicity said, « On account of my sins, and on account of the stumbling-block put in men's way ». But we, since we pitied the infirmity of his body, and wished to remove these irons from him, said to him : « Lo! therefore see, our father, that the matter of the irons is addressed only to men, but there is nothing in them that brings near to God; but I even fear lest they lead away from life; since God gave no commandment about irons. But, if we seek to conduct ourselves according to knowledge and fulfil God's commandments, we shall hear from him what he said, 'Learn of me for I am mild and lowly in my heart', and, « Whoever smiteth thee upon thy cheek »; and first 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God'; and again 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself'; and again 'Whoever will take thy cloak', besides the other things which the Lord taught and commanded us in his preaching. If, our father, you wish to please the Lord, it is by these things and by the others that are like them that you will please; but by irons God will never be pleased; but they even become sources of detriment to the soul. For now, as you said, you are a sinner; and we or others who see you with irons hanging on you think to ourselves that you are a great and holy man, and a worker of miracles. If you are so, you do well in hanging irons on yourself ». When the blessed man heard all these things, his heart trembled and he said: « If it is so, and not fall short of the standard of the series of the histories of the saints; since neither is the course of life of these persons lower than that of the high path in which each one of these walked, but their habits of life also are great, and surpass written narratives. These virtuous blessed women then were sisters in the body, of whom one, the elder, was called Mary, and one Euphemia. But this Mary was a pure virgin, and chose for herself from her childhood quietude and renunciation and great labours of fasting and much watching, and constant prayers, and exertion in the way of charity or of pilgrimage. This woman therefore formed the plan of going up to Jerusalem, and in the holy country in which the dispensation for the sake of the salvation of all was carried out there to worship and return to her employment¹. When then she had gone up and prayed, she stood before the place called Golgotha, and was lifted up with ecstasy, and she remained standing there three days and three nights, while men came and saw her; and the custodians wished to drive her away; and on seeing that she was a feeble old woman, and further that she was standing in prayer they let her place, inasmuch as she had intended to remain there in that occupation all her lifetime. And so she departed, and went down again to the East; and she determined that all her life she would once every year offer worship in the place where God suffered. And thus she did, travelling along that road in the season of extreme heat, and she did not taste anything except every other day, while she carried nothing whatever except one small basket (σπυρίδιον), which she fastened to her arm, and one salver; and thus she travelled. And she imposed this labour upon herself every year all the days of her life, returning and applying herself to constant prayers and supplications and tears, all the days of her quiet life; and so she would when her time came again return and go up to Jerusalem, and accomplish her vow and come back to her usual habits, insomuch that great deeds of power were wrought by her presence, not by her will and her words. But she herself shrank greatly from such things, and it was not pleasing to her that anyone should say anything of the kind to her; and, if anyone wished to press her, he did not see her again. For this devout woman guarded herself carefully against pride and repressed vain glory, lest she should lose her labour. But her sister Euphemia, who was younger than she, had in her childhood been united to a husband, and had had one daughter, who herself also had been trained from a tender age in religion. But afterwards, since this woman's husband had died, Euphemia herself and her little daughter formed the household, insomuch that she thenceforward came to herself¹ from the secular order of life, and turned to the practices of her sister which she had been practising for a long time, and lived in the order of devoutness and in the religious habit (σχιμα), while she also learned the psalms by heart, and taught them to her daughter; for her daughter also had while she was a child been splendidly trained in the psalms and in the Scriptures and in handwriting. And from that time she appointed fixed hours for reciting service and for the prayers, those of the night and those of the day; and, while observing her sister's asceticism and the rest of her practices, she herself practised another high and sublime order of life, while she in fact carried out both, the observance of abstinence and the practice of relief of the distressed. But this admirable woman decided in her mind not to introduce into her house other men's bread that was not gained by the work of her hands; and, if it satisfy that indigent man; and there could not be any sick poor man among those lying in the streets who escaped her so that she did not visit him either twice or once in the day, inasmuch as she was capable of running about all day. But she would go round the courts of the houses and ask, « Is there here a needy orphan, or a poor old sick widow? ». And so in the case of everyone whom she found sick, according to the extent of her possessions she would buy for him, fine wheaten bread and fruit, and wine for anyone for whom she knew it to be proper, and would go round and distribute it to them. And, if it happened that she had not by her wherewithal to satisfy any man whoever he might be as was proper, nothing whatever would prevent her from at least bringing him apples or pomegranates or fish or bread, and sitting by him and taking him by the hand, and asking him « What has afflicted you, my son? », admonishing and saying, « Be not dejected because you are in distress and have no consolation. Blessed are you for the number of unending blessings that are prepared for you in that world, in return for these distresses which are passing by upon you. Look at Lazarus, how because he endured and was patient and did not murmur he inherited the kingdom of heaven. » And so the poor used to call her 'our comfort and our visitor'. Blessed truly is that soul for the number of souls that are laden with gratitude to her and with her bounties, like those of the original Tabitha, and display them to God the all-seeing; and accordingly this woman was called Tabitha all over the city. And, when all the high-placed men and women of the city saw her strenuousness and her zeal, and saw that she was distressed because she could not visit the distressed in a liberal fashion, everyone who was earnest in seeking what was for the good of his life used to entreat her to go and take everything that she knew to be required by her for the relief of the afflicted and visit them; and thus she was henceforth free from anxiety, because on both points she was much distressed, one that she was unable to relieve the sick and needy out of their small amount of labour, and another that she had not leisure to devote herself to the employment which she had taken upon herself, the work of her hands, except at night. And therefore her daughter laboured simply-mindedly and without murmuring night and day, and she would say if any of her companions or anyone else said to her, « Your mother leaves you to minister to our brethren according to our power. » And so they never ate except from the proceeds of their labour in their house, unless perhaps one of them might be constrained on some occasion to perform an act of friendship¹ somewhere. But in this way they were continually occupied in this labour, and moreover in fasting also and prayer, and the recital of service; and, whenever the blessed woman was engaged outside in ministering to the needy, she would perform her office (uzzôro) in the street while going from one to another, and likewise also did her daughter too at home as well, and at vespers, nocturns, and matins they recited service together. While then this blessed woman was with all her power running in the line of these great practices and in this perfect course of life, neither did she miss the great benefit derived from another labour, in order that the saying of the Lord to the man who had the five talents who said, « He that hath to him shall be given »², might be fulfilled: but, when the persecution took place, and all the convents round the city were expelled from their places, and the adversaries occupied them, then that blessed woman, like a harbour (uzzo) which receives ships from all sides that they may lie to and be at peace in it, so herself also received and relieved the persecuted and afflicted from every place: and, because there was no place for the convents to enter away from the heretics, they were constrained to find quarters with her as with a devout woman renowned for her manner of life. But she found means, and hired spacious rooms; and one which was suited and adapted for the purpose and of great size she turned into an imitation of a martyrs' chapel, with likenesses and pictures, and chests', and everything, while the oblation also and the Scriptures and everything that is proper to a monastery were in it; and she prepared great mats also, and curtains and rugs. And for herself and her daughter she made provision in a certain inner chamber; and being a very wise woman she alone devoted herself to ministration with the blessed men, and her daughter, because she was a child, she would keep in security within 'by day and² by night, lest by the sight of her she should harm anyone, or be herself harmed by anyone through the sight. And so from that time that martyrs' chapel harboured not fewer than ten or fifteen, and as many as twenty, while with the labour of their hands which they disposed of outside ask forgiveness from him? Or how can you expect him to deliver you from hell? » And thus she would pass judgment upon them, so that those who were secular (?) were a little offended against her in accordance with the saying « The fool loveth not one who reproveth him »¹. But she herself was so earnestly bent on relieving at all costs distressed and afflicted souls who lacked human comfort and satisfying their needs that even the whole city did not suffice for her business, but she would even go round the inns and roads and habitations outside also and search, lest there should be any needy man or stranger laid up sick in one of them, so that she in fact found many and relieved them. And some she took into her house, and some she carried to superintendents of hospitals, and gave charge concerning them, and it was chiefly on her account that they were received and tended: for she was known to great and small in the city, and everyone recognised her on seeing her even at a distance by her quick and rapid walk, since she would walk in this way summer and winter in mud and snow and frost without anything whatever on her feet, with her toes bruised and her nails torn out and the blood flowing from her wounds, and she would not consent even to treat them, while everyone was very sorry for her on account of the state in which they saw her; for indeed we ourselves too would often jest with her and say to her, « Do not kill yourself in so cruel a way, Tabitha »; but she would say : « When the end of a thing is corruption and the worm, wherefore do we preserve it? »¹ And she was so energetic in her task that the mouth is too small to tell the story of her great labour; for, just as her sister Mary in the city of Thella was celebrated for her perfect practices of asceticism and quietude and renunciation, so was this woman also in the city of Amida; so that the fame of these sisters was spoken all over the East, everyone being wrapt in wonder to think how each of them in one peerless mode of life was strenuously applying herself to store up righteousness. When then the blessed woman had completed a period of thirty years more or less in such practices, and her house thundered night and day with the praises of the

1. This must have been while John was living in Amida, i. e., between 530 and 537 (see Intro.), and the story is with his usual carelessness misplaced, for the monks were not in exile at that time, and the persecution mentioned must apply, be that of 537.

saints from all quarters. Satan who is always envious of good things did not neglect to stir up a trial against them, in order to make them lose the benefit of their great and spiritual business and deprive them of it. Then he stirred up against them the heretical envy of those who held power in the church, cruelly and savagely and mercilessly, in that they said, « These women are disturbing this city, and the citizens fear and honour them more than the bishops: since their house has been made a cave of robbers¹, and they receive and shelter the deceivers ». And they sent and arrested them and brought them into the church, in order to make them communicants in their impiety. When they had brought many inducements to bear upon them both in the way of threats and in the way of blandishments and they did not yield, but the blessed woman in confidence that fights with death even used vehement language, saying, « As for me, may the Lord Jesus Christ deliver me from communicating with those who divide him, and with those who proclaim a quaternity in place of the Holy Trinity »², and, when those who deserved these words had heard them, they were seized with furious, vehement, passionate indignation, and they ordered the blessed woman to be confined in the lowest dungeon of the prison as a punishment for 'this audacity'. And so she was confined for thirty days in the dungeon, while the whole city entreated that she might be released; and they bound themselves under a curse that she should not come up thence till she received the oblation there. And, when she heard it, she would mock at them, and say : « Would that I might undergo sufferings in return for the suffering of him who suffered for my sake on the cross. I am glad to die here rather than to die in denial of my Lord and my God ». And, when they saw that it was impossible, and the whole city was grieved on her account, they released her and expelled her from the whole city; which also Satan had been contriving to bring about. And then all the poor of the city were oppressed with sorrow and great affliction, inasmuch that all the people of high position were distressed. But they left, and went to her blessed sister Mary, and it was their wish to go up to Jerusalem; and they went up and prayed, and returned. And so these blessed women were buffeted by the trials (ἀγῶν) of persecution for five years; and, having received one another's blessing, afterwards, thinking that the fury against them had perhaps abated, they returned to Amida and came in secretly, and they resided in a certain gentleman's house. And, when it began to become known, and the adversaries began to speak about them, those in whose house they were residing were alarmed, and they besought them to depart, lest (as they said) their house should be plundered. But the blessed woman was distressed; and she cried to God, and said: « My Lord, thy mercy knoweth that I have grown feeble, and there is no more strength in me. It is sufficient for me ». And the same night a summons was sent forth for the blessed woman according to the request of her prayer, and she fell into a sickness; and, while these people were troubled on her account and in fear, she called them, and says to them: « Be not dismayed, my children; for I shall go out from among you' this week assuredly ». But they did not understand her words, to what departure she referred. And she called her daughter, who was called Maria, and said to her: « My daughter, be comforted in Christ, and keep yourself in purity for the Lord your Lord to whom you were betrothed; and be not distressed, for I am not deserting you (far be it from me, my beloved); but I am committing you to the Child of my this way both finished their marvellous courses together within eight days, each of them carrying the great load of her merchandise. The blessed Mary completed sixty years in the course of sanctity from her birth down to her departure, walking in the road of perfection, and labouring toward God; while, as for the blessed Euphemia, she too accomplished thirty-five years in this course of perfection, thirty in ministering to the saints, and five in the afflictions and the conflict (ziton) of persecution¹, that is of martyrdom for Christ's sake. And her blessed daughter yet remained, strengthened by the power of her blessing and of her prayer, while she too followed closely in the footsteps of these saints, and began after them to take up the strict course of their practices.

The history of Euphemia and Mary the sisters is ended.

1. If 'ministering to the saints' is to be taken literally, the 30 years must be dated from the persecution, and, if that of 537 is meant (p. 181, n.), her death would fall later than the composition of the book, so that we have probably only another instance of careless writing.

firmness of his will, those who had¹ the love of God, and those again who had¹ the love of the world and desire for positions of power and inclination toward the renegades. These things therefore quickly reached Mesopotamia, and overtook the holy Mare bishop of Amida; and he took upon himself to suffer persecution and expulsion with Christ, rather than to depart from Christ and occupy the temple and the throne of temporal honour². This saint therefore, with Sergius and Stephen and Thomas his notaries (νοτάριους) and synecelli, were³ sent to a hard and distant place of exile (ἐξορία) at Petra; and they accepted it and departed and went; and they were there in great distress exceeding their power of endurance, until their lives were near disappearing. By reason of this distress therefore the holy Mare was constrained to send the virtuous zealous Stephen his deacon and notary (νοτάριους) to the royal city, in the hope that he might perhaps by the intercession of anyone whom

1. The verb is not in the syr, and the sentence is ungrammatical. — 2. In 549 Thomas was bp. of Amida, but died after the order for his expulsion, and his successor, Nommus, lived only 3 months. — 3. The holy Mare was appointed (Zach. Be., ANI, 5. Assen., B. O., II, 349). His expulsion was probably voluntary. — 4. Sic. syr. From the sequel it is clear that M. only was banished, and the others remained. — 5. The word synecellus is not again mentioned, and from the return to Amida it is clear that he did not go to his place.

they brought him, and received his mzyqu¹ from him, and conversed with him; and they inquired also further where he lived. And, when he had told them all his affairs, the blessed Stephen and Thomas the deacons conceived the desire of going out to that place; and he conducted them, and they went out with him; and they saw the blessed men driven out by persecution who were with him and the blessed women, and the quietude of the place also attracted them. And they also told them about a certain large pit that lay near the place in the desert at a distance of two miles, in which someone had once lived²; and they went and saw it. And from that time the blessed Thomas, with whom the chief part of the story and the course of the narrative are concerned, formed the plan of going down and living in that pit; a luxurious and dainty man, who from his childhood had been brought up like a king's son, who was also a descendant (γενός) of Ishakuni Bar Br'y³, who was a patrician; who was mighty and great and eminent above all who were in the East; and the blessed Thomas moreover possessed an estate (ὀνομα) and male and female slaves, and great riches; and he was so luxurious

The same is stated in Susan's case (ch. 27), and it is perh. the same cave, though one would have expected Susan to be mentioned as the last occupant. — 3. Cf. Zach. Rh. 7. vii. 7. Noldeke's conjecture 'Arsacids' (Arshakuni), hesitatingly adopted by v. D. and L., is quite out of place.

and dainty that he used to clean his face and his hands with water more than ten times a day. This saint then, who lived under these conditions, now in opposition to these things formed the resolution of acquiring ascetic habits. But, when his object became known, that he wished to do these things, then everyone who heard it would as it were laugh at his purpose, saying, « All that delicacy and luxury wants to dwell in the waste uninhabited desert ». And, though the blessed Stephen had the intention of doing spiritual service, yet, because he was feeble and sickly of body, he refrained from doing these things, saying, « For ourselves this is too great a thing to live in the desert on account of our feebleness: but, my brother, let us look after our soul, and gain a desert by our manner of life and our heart, and always entreat the Lord to cause his grace to shine upon us ». When they had returned to the city, the blessed Thomas provided for the concerns of his cell, doing everything in secret, and he gave his key (κλει) to the bishop's cellarer (ἐπίσκοπος), and for some reason was blessed by the saint without his knowing of it¹; and he departed and returned to the place, and went straight to that pit, bravely applying himself thenceforward to asceticism and vigil and protracted recitation of services. But he used to go down into that pit and come up again, that he might not put force upon his body all at once and faint and be overcome, while the blessed men who were the occasion of his going out to that place supplied his necessary requirements. And so in that pit he laid great and grievous labours upon himself, and was without ceasing continuously occupied in weeping and sorrow and mourning for his sins, and these blessed men (since these also were very perfect in their manner of life) used to relate to me¹, « Whenever we see the blessed Thomas, we find him beating his face, and saying, ‘Woe to me, my brethren, since I have consumed my days in vanity. Woe to me, since my moments have melted away in evil deeds. Woe to me since my life has been squandered in works of darkness. The world has deceived me. The demons have mocked me. My mind has been lost in the vanity of the affairs of this lying world. Pray for me, my brethren, that the merciful God may receive me in repentance, and not turn his face away from my hatefulness. Pray for me that the door of mercy at which I am knocking may be opened to me, and I his sisters with the rest of the company συνεργιστο that was with them prepared to carry his bones down to his own country; and they sent the blessed Stephen the deacon to Theodora, who had before interested herself in procuring their release from exile ἐξοριζομένη, who also at the time had become queen; and she thereupon issued an order that the blessed man should be carried down. And, when the order came, they thereupon continued constraining this blessed man who loved the wilderness to show his gratitude to his holy bishop, and consent to go down with them with his bones to his country. But the blessed man utterly refused to do this, saying, « It cannot be ». And, when they had made many attempts to induce him to consent to go down, and if he wished, return, saying to him, « If you wish this, it would not be right for you to leave your estate οὐκία and your affairs to chance, but you ought to go down and arrange matters as you wish between yourself and your sister, and come back », and, when they had urged him, he considered this to be the right course, since he came to this conclusion, that it was not in accordance with right that his affairs should remain we should not be able to overtake it again or to see it for ever and ever? And for this reason it is much better for me to go and sit in some corner (γωνία), and weep for my life and for my empty moments and for my profitless years, and for my hours that have melted and passed from me empty and void, where neither acquaintances nor relatives will harass me; because in the moment when the sentence goes forth upon me no friends, or loved ones, or kin (γενεή), or members of the family, will give me any pleasure». As for me, while I was listening to all these things from this saint, great marvel fell upon me that he so effectually controlled his thoughts and collected his mind, directing it toward God, and did not allow even if it were one idle hour or moment of his life to be lost without praise and prayer and repentance, and thus shunned and dreaded and feared the waste of one hour only. Then I marvelling in my mind thought, « Pray, what sounds and songs of lamentations will suffice to make lament for my own self, and for the souls of those who are like me! since I have wasted some of my moments, that is even the whole of my life, in wantonness (στυγνία): and not only has one hour not been treated by me as of any account, but not even a whole year of days also ». And marvelling I went out from the presence of the blessed man, and used to repeat all these things to my brethren with trembling. Now the blessed man's manner of life while he was in the monastery was as follows, fasting from one evening to the next, and scanty food; and indeed with the freedom of speech (παρρησία) that I had acquired with him I used to say to him, « In truth I wonder how you live »; but he would answer me, saying: « What have I gained by feeding my body as if for sacrifice down to the present time? Or ought I not to know that food belongs to the creeping thing and the worms? Wherefore must I take fire and scorch my eyelids? When the body receives foods and is nourished and grows fat, the fire of passions and lusts is kindled in it, and it scorches and burns the eyes of the soul so that they do not see and restrain it from sinning. And now, instead of it hanging to the soul so that it is brought down and, wallows in the mire of the body's lusts, let the soul hang upon it, that the body may rise out of its mire and share in the soul's purity and lightness. Those who concern themselves with the nourishment of their bodies, thinking that it is a good thing, are weaving a rope of pigskin and make three knocks in quick succession, the sound would come to me just as if three men were striking together upon a smith's anvil with hammers, the sounds following one another till morning, since his hands first struck the ground, and after them his knees, and lastly his head; and so he would suddenly sink down, until I thought that the sound was coming up from beneath me, while I even crossed myself and said, « Perhaps Satan is mocking me, and is making me hear this sound in order to deceive me »; and I would go outside by night, and would hear the sound; and I would come in again, and there was the same sound. And, because the blessed man showed great care and earnestness in charging and entreating everyone. « Let not a man approach the door of my cell till the morning, because I am a very bad sleeper, and, if I am aware that any one is passing round the place where I am sleeping, it is quite impossible for me to sleep again, and I am tormented the whole night, on account of this charge therefore no one approached his cell, lest he should annoy him, since we thought that it was as he said; but he wished to act by stealth and not be discovered by stealth.

I therefore, keeping the charge, and being for many nights annoyed by the sound, from the first hour of the night till morning, wondered greatly.
 But one day, not having sufficient resolution to endure that sound which had tormented many days and take no notice, I went outside and stood still, listening to the sound, and I softly approached the door, and found that it was made by a man pressed down under all this labour, panting as if he were running before a horse; and I was greatly amazed at this man's labour.
 But his bed was magnificently laid, and raised high by the number of its legs, and he had wrapped himself in a little piece of hair-matting fitted to his stature as if under his feet, and on it he rested so far as he slept at all, while to us he presented the appearance of really sleeping on his bed.
 And from that time I like an idle man would often keep count of the industry of men's prayers, both those of the night and those of the day. And the elders and the virtuous men Stephen and Zwt, the deacons made it their duty to admonish him in everything, and they themselves also underwent great labours. When then they had thereafter made preparations to set and a letter, earnestly inviting him to come up to the capital in order to be with her in the palace πρυτανειῶν, because of his eloquence and his conversation and his wisdom, and moreover because he also lived a pure life and after the manner of a solitary; and this further hastened them in making their departure. Then they left the district of the East, and I also with them in intercourse with them, as far as Antioch. And there Stephen thenceforth continued to entreat Thomas, saying, « My Brethren, let us on no account part from one another; but, in order that this woman's will may not be disappointed, let us go up together to the royal city, and return and go down together by sea to the desert ». But he, declining to do this, continued entreating him and saying: Pray for me, my brother, since Thomas will not see anyone from this kingdom here ». And so with weeping and many from that city and come down to you, and we may end our lives together in the 'convent of solitaires' ». But the holy Thomas, shedding tears and sobbing, said to him: « Beware, my brother, and take care of your soul; and day by day, as far as in you lies, entreat God in penitence for your sins.

 Let not your thoughts mock you and say to you, 'You shall go out to the desert and pray to God': because you shall never see the desert again: but neither indeed shall we meet one another in the body any more: and you will grave, so, my brother, in this hour also do you think that you are following things, the tears of us all burst forth with sobs. And thus they for their

by the holy Thomas in such great labours, in order that the conflict (zýwón) against his distresses which he displayed by means of his endurance might be further increased, he fell for about eight months under the chastisement of an illness; and then the blessed man finished his conflict (zýwón); and he departed carrying the great and honoured burden of his triumphs; and we were not again granted the privilege of seeing his face in the body. But he left in his place after him the blessed Zwt' the deacon; who also passed out of this disturbing and deceiving world in the same desert with great labours and noble triumphs in the third year after the passing of the blessed Thomas. And so, after we parted from them and down to the passing of each one of them, both they and we were day by day in hope that we should be coming back to them; and so our sins brought it about for us that we did not come to the place where they lived till a year after the death of both.
 But we, after we had gone down to Syria, went up again to the royal city; and we also found the blessed virtuous Stephen too'; who also did not fail to obtain the glory that is gained by great labours of asceticism and of abstinence; and who was moreover a great harbour (zýmón) of rest for all the compulsion of the persecutors united to their communion; but in the case of the holy old man, as they were unable to bring down his high purpose that was set on Christ, they gave him a charge, saying, « If you will not yield, since you have been made an example to many, withdraw yourself hence whither you please ». Then the old man, weeping for the time of error that had got possession of men, set forth and came to the community of us the men of Amida, which was living in the district of Ty-s'f, in a village called H z y n ' ; which was in number seven hundred and fifty men. And, because this blessed man was acquainted with the convent in which I was at that time², he came direct to us; and thus he attached himself to the same monastery, having one tunic and one cape made of pieces of rag fastened together, and a small text of the gospel (εὐαγγέλιον); and he would not consent to read in any other book except that gospel (εὐαγγέλιον). even during service too he would again stand in this way in the same corner (γωνία) with his head bowed and covered, and after every sentence that came out of his mouth he would utter an expression of praise with ecstasy. And he used to keep silence the whole day, not speaking to men at all, no not even if anyone spoke to him. But, if any kind of occasion called him to speak, he would weep while speaking; and, even if one of the seniors came up to him and said to him, « Wherefore, our father, are you exceedingly mournful, and do not speak and enjoy yourself a little? », he on his side would thus answer : « Why do you desire a dead man who is dead in his sins and buried in his body to speak? For me whom you see my body is a grave; for, like a rotting corpse in a grave, thus my soul is rotting within it in sin; and henceforth over the dead man there is mourning only and weeping ». And even these words he would say with many sobs. And in the same way his food also which he took at table did not go down

Lord'; and guard your purity, and keep virginity, which beyond all things has magnified and glorified its possessors; and see moreover what a threat and sentence of weeping and gnashing of teeth, and an immortal worm and unsleeping fire and darkness are threatened against the wicked and the presumptuous and the doers of sin; and fear, and be wary ». And these words again he would speak to me with a flood of tears. But one day I presumed to say to him : « Why, sir, do you tell me to perform acts of righteousness? If I go to do anything, lo! you seniors laugh at us, and say : ' If you see a boy going up to heaven, catch hold of his foot'. And what therefore can we do? » But the saint, looking at me and shaking his head, said to me : « Know, my son, that a lion who does not tear the prey in his second year will not afterwards quickly tear it. And know this further, that childhood, like tender wax which receives the impress of that which falls from the ring upon it, so itself also from the beginning receives the impress with a load of joy, in order that the text may be fulfilled, « They who sow in tears shall reap in joy »¹; so that from the time when I myself came to know this old man of abnegation down to his passing away not one moment passed in which he was not sowing the tears of sorrow.

The history of Abbi the man of abnegation is ended.

XV. — NEXT THE FIFTEENTH HISTORY, OF TWO BROTHERS FROM THE SAME COMMUNITY, AT THE SAME TIME OF PERSECUTION.

Great caution therefore is required of us, my brethren, to provide that we may escape from the craftiness of the evil one, and again, that we may fear the divine words (especially men who are highly reputed for modes of life or for knowledge), when they caution us and say : « Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall »². For the sake then of cautioning those who are treading on the road of virtue, I have determined to commit to record an act of one that is well worthy to be an object of great commiseration which the fiends did to two brothers who were in truth running with all their strength in the way of virtue, and whom the fiends made such a laughing-stock that the like was never heard among men of older or of recent times. These blessed men therefore, that is one of them especially, who was called James ¹, — this man employed himself in a marvellous way in the same community in great practices of standing and of watching and of abstinence and great quietude; and he came from the convent called that of the Edessenes adjoining Amida itself ². And this brother was so laborious and humble and meek that these seven hundred men ³ were all amazed at his labours, and at his asceticism; so that I also was with him on the weekly duties ⁴, and particularly marvelled at his gentleness and his quietude. and further at the way in which he crucified his body by night and by day. This man then had many who for the purpose of imitating his modes of life used to attach themselves to him and keep themselves close to him. And, while he was of depart hence'. And, when under great pressure he went out, these persons saw him, and began to foam; and he came up and made the sign over them, and immediately these persons were healed from that hour, and they departed. And thenceforth a multitude used to repair thither foaming, men and women, and boys and girls, and all ages; and from that time he was under the necessity (zuzuzuz) of going out. But he on his side would go out to a certain small martyrs' chapel outside the gate, and would fill it; and he would put them to silence and drive them out one by one; and the persons from whom they came out no longer suffered from them. And thus he would drive them out in countless numbers; and they would come outside and cause annoyance, and cry out. And, if it was not in his power to come out, he would send them an order to go and lie down in that martyrs' chapel till he came out. And thus they would go away foaming, and would lie down there; and, if he waited two days, none of them dared to stretch himself out or to remove from the place till he came out. But, when the numbers of those who used to come there and cause annoyance increased, there were agitations there against this blessed man, both on the part of the inmates of his monastery and also on the part of others; and accordingly he wished to give up this business, and could not, on account of the multitude who used to come. And in consequence of such annoyances it became necessary (ἀνάγκη) for him to withdraw from the community; and so he withdrew under the instigation (I believe) of the demons themselves, in company with the other who was attached to him, and they set out, and went in the direction of Hamimtha¹, to a certain village called Beth Musika²; and they had a certain monastery that was there given to them, and they resided in it. And in a similar way again there also multitudes began to flock together to them; and then also the blessed James would again command them authoritatively, and by means of his word demons without number were expelled. Then the evil one, who by means of his crafty tricks finds methods of deceiving men, contrived a method of making a mockery of these blessed men. One night, when the possessed persons were assembled there, there was also a certain young woman there of whom he had taken possession, who was also of worldly appearance³. Her accordingly the demons took, and they clothed her in awe-striking forms of phantasmal¹ rays; and they led her up and seated her on the bishops' throne (θρόνος), which is usually placed in the churches or in the chief martyrs' chapels on the dais (κατάξυρον) of the altar. Then they filled the whole martyrs' chapel again with phantasmal¹ forms, as if forsooth they were angels of God; and some of them flew away, and entered the chapel² where the blessed men were sleeping; and there also as well they emitted rays with the appearance of light, according to the text 'maketh himself like an angel of light'³. And they roused the blessed men and urged them to haste, hastily alarming them and saying, « Take incense, incense, and haste to the martyrs' chapel; for the holy Mary the God-bearer has been sent to you, with a great host of angels; and she has sent us for you, come straightway ». But the blessed men were terrified by the sight, not perceiving the craftiness of the evil one; and they hurriedly took incense and spices, and ran to the martyrs' chapel; and on entering they found the whole house full of phantasmal¹ forms, in the semblance forsooth of angels her hand upon the heads of both of them, and said to them : « You have both these men saw what had happened to them and came to their senses, they demon and saying : « What has come to you? Why are you troubled? » But they on their side resolved to find means of subjecting their case to the cure of penitence; and they left that place, weeping and sobbing at what had things of this false and deceitful world? A great thing it is how our heart is sunk and our mind blinded, and we do not consider the bounties of him who created us, and brought us into existence out of nothing, how we, feeble dust of the earth, "live and move and exist", how the good Creator gave us the breath of this pure air (ἀήρ) to sustain our life without anxiety, how he put together for us an organ (ὄργανον) for speech, and a voice and a mouth and lips and a tongue and a palate, how he infused light into the pupils of our eyes, that it might be an informant and a director to the whole body, how again he bestowed hearing in the ears and breath in the nostrils, and understanding in the heart, that by means of its perceptions it might know and discern creation which declares him; and, again, that he always gives aliment also in all varieties for the sustenance of the body, and again to the soul also besides, in accordance with its nature and after the pattern of its airiness, he gave spiritual life according to its spirituality, and again besides these things his grace like a watchful guardian stands carefully over our life by night and by day and delivers and guards us from mishaps and from all detriment that evil things may chance to do, and while this our merciful

Creator performs all these gracious acts in relation to us, and gave us all these spiritual and bodily gifts, our wretched heart is sunk in the mire of sin, and neglects to give thanks for these things. For we truly ought not only to thank and praise him who created us as the angels do, but even many times more than these, even as his care for us too is manifestly many times greater than his care for them. And why again do we look at things that are small? But let us regard with greater astonishment the thing that is greater and more marvellous than all, and passes all bounds and all measures, that God himself in his love descended from heaven to earth for our salvation, and sacrificed himself on the cross for our sake, and gave us his living and life-giving body and blood to eat and to drink, and further promised us in his kindness invisible blessings. And how do we not much more than the angels owe thanks for great kindnesses such as these, which our good Creator and merciful God performed in relation to us? » While this blessed man was saying all these things with ecstatic wonder, he was filling all his hearers with similar wonder, while, his mind being uplifted by ecstatic contemplation of the glories of the heavenly beings, he said many things beside that are greater than these. And the occasion which called him to enter the limits

But the shepherds would state to him, « We found our fathers living in this way on these mountains; and, inasmuch as we were born on them, lo! we also live on them. » And again he would ask them, « How then, as you live on these mountains, are you able to assemble in God's house, and to hear his word from the holy Scriptures, or to communicate in the mysteries of his body and blood? ». But these men, like some wild beasts, upon these words laughed at the blessed man, and they say : « How, blessed sir, does the oblation that a man receives profit him? For what is the oblation? ». When the blessed man heard these words, his bones shook from his fright and his tears gushed out, and he said to them: « Tell me, my sons, are you Christians or Jews? ». But they were indignant at these words, and they say: « O! indeed, blessed man, we are Christians, do not call us Jews. » The blessed man says to them: « And, if you are Christians, how is it that you have mocked at God and said of his living and holy body and blood in which our life and our souls' salvation consists, 'What does it profit us?' or 'For what is it?'? How is it that you were not frightened to perform with your tongues the acts of pagans and Jews, when you are as you say Christians? ». They, when they saw the awe with which he expressed himself, became afraid themselves also, and they say: « Forgive us, sir, for we have no knowledge. » He says to them: « And have you not heard the Scriptures, my sons? ». They say to him: « From our fathers we have heard; but the Scriptures themselves we have not seen. » Now those who were speaking to the blessed man were as he used to state to us about thirty years old. He says to them again: « Are you, my sons, only in this state, or are all who are living on these mountains the same? ». They say to him: « Sir, it is not as he himself declared, « How is it that these men are like animals on these mountains? ». Then he considered, and he said in his heart as if from God, « Perhaps it was indeed for this reason that God's grace led me to the mountains here, in order that there may be salvation for these souls that are in the darkness of error. » And the blessed man became enthusiastic, saying, « God wishes for the salvation of all these people more than mine. Henceforth I will not withdraw from this place, unless these have been gained for God; since they are bound in error, and are as if they were not Christians. What pagan is there, or what other worshippers of creation, who for so long a period of time would neglect to pay honour to the object of his worship, and would not always worship that which is reckoned by him as God? These men neither worship God like Christians, nor honour something else like pagans; and they are apostates against the one and against the other. » As he was going about, he found a kind of village on the same frontier the name of which was Mrbn'; and he resolved to approach this village, and learn what its condition also was. And on approaching he saw in it a little church overshadowed with vines, and he rejoiced, and said : « Lo! here there is a sign of the presence of Christians. »

And, when he had come up to it, he went in and saw that it was full of wood and stones and dust; and the blessed man wept bitterly. But, some men from the village having seen an old anchorite enter the church, one of the old men came up to him, and received his blessing; and the blessed man asked him, « Is there a priest here? ». He said to him : « There has not been a priest here during these times. » And he asked him again : « And not even a brother' or anyone whatever.' ». He said to him, « There is none here. » Again he went on to ask him also, « Where do you receive the oblation? ». He says to him : « If one of us has business and has happened to be present in one of these villages, he receives; if not, no one here has this concern for the oblation. » He says to him : « And wherefore have you no priests? ». He says to him, « It is you do not follow the custom of Christians? ». After conversing with him in this fashion he says to him : « Come let us sweep out and tidy up they swept and scoured(?)² and tidied. And he said to him : « Gather women and children, and small as well as great. » And on hearing about some strange sight that they had never seen they assembled together before him in the morning; and he conversed with them in words of admonition, and said to them : « Wherefore, O men, do you hold your lives in contempt and take no thought for the salvation of your souls? Wherefore, when God formed us in his image, do we on our part live animal lives outside the orderliness of men? Know you not that you are men, and not animals? know you not that even the animals have a greater blessing than you, they who are not destined to rise, nor yet to enter the judgment of justice? Know you not that the dread judgment of God’s justice is at hand? and know you not that you are destined to stand before the dread tribunal (βῆμα) of God? Wherefore then do you make yourselves like the animals on the mountains? and wherefore are you like them delivered indiscriminately to death, in that you hold aloof from hearing God’s word, and are moreover deprived of the communion of the venerated body and blood of God, and this is not reckoned by you as anything? ». While the blessed man was repeating such words to them, like some irrational animal, which when a man speaks

But he again said to them : « Do you not speak? ». They said to him : « What, sir, can we say to you? There is no one to say anything to us or teach us; and this which you say has never reached our ears; since we do not know the Scriptures. » He says to them : « Know you not that our Lord Jesus Christ came down from heaven, and clothed himself in our body from a Virgin for our salvation, and consorted with men as a man? are you aware of these things, or not? ». The old men among them say to him : « Yes, sir, we hear these things ». He says to them : « Do you hear only without knowing the truth? Know you not moreover that God suffered for our sake, and was suspended on the cross, and was fastened with nails and his side was pierced by a lance, and blood and water flowed from him as a propitiation for men, and that he died and by his death slew our death, and rose after three days as it is written and raised us with him, having trodden the road and shown us the resurrection that shall be ours, and before he suffered broke his body and blood¹ in an upper room and mountains to the house, and converting them afresh, as if from paganism; and thus he used to gather them all together like wild animals. After a short time, when he had gained information about the children of each one of them, who had male children and who female, and how many each of them had, while they were unaware of his purpose, what he intended to do, he gave the order « Next first day of the week see that no persons stay away from the congregation »; and he sent to the mountains, saying, « Let the little children also be present in the congregation ». When they assembled and came according to his instructions (since they were indeed afraid of him), he provided himself with a razor, both himself and a certain man who was in the secret who knew them well, and, when all had received the oblation, he said to them: « Allow all the little ones to receive a present¹ to-day, and we will bless them and speak with them, and they shall come: since to these from to-day someone must always speak the word of God, that thus they may remember it as long as they live; and do you go everyone in peace ». And they believed it, and went away, having induced the little ones to remain by these words, « You will receive presents, and we will mix them for you². Remain all of you ». Then they all remained, about ninety, males and yourselves of your children, and incur blame ». They said : « Let us be deprived this evening and we will not make our children shavelings ».

 He says to them : « Beware, for, if you take them away, I for my part have testified, and I testify again, that neither of them will reach next first day of the week in this bodily life ». They, when they heard it, jeered at the blessed man, saying : « If you think that your curses are so well heard, go and curse these Huns who are coming and making havoc of creation', and let them die. » And so they took their children away in good health, and went off; and within three days both of them were smitten and died.
 Then the terror of the blessed man fell upon everyone, when the power of his word and of his prayer upon those men was seen: and they also repented, and they went and fell down before him, weeping and saying, « We have been presumtuons, sir, forgive us; lest you curse us also and we die ».
 Then he said to them : « I, my sons, did not curse these either (far be it!); but God took them away, that he might chastise you yourselves for your presumption against his word; since it was not in our name, but in the name of God himself and in his word that I marked them. And now uncivilized character of that people and about their subjugation and about all the torments that they had inflicted on him, when he was now old and decrepit, and these disciples of his also had become grown women and men, and they were now becoming readers and daughters of the covenant, and they were themselves teaching others also as well. And accordingly the blessed man's name had gone out over all that country, and he was a law (νόμος) and a judge of the country; and every matter that was in need of reform was referred to him. And now, because feebleness and old age had overtaken him, he was no longer able to retire to the mountains outside according to his custom, but he used to carry out his labour there in the same country in his cell, and he had also gained possession of these men; and he was as a spiritual father to all of them, having also converted them from the error of their apostasy to proper rules of life both bodily and spiritual.

The history of the blessed Simeon the anchorite the mountaineer is ended.

for this reason he was afraid of the cold »; and he said to him : « Do you wish us to bring you hot water, our father? ». He says, « No, excuse me. Whether it is cold or hot, this is my habit, to drink a little at a time ». When we were sitting, we asked the old man, « Whence, sir, does your holiness come? ». But he, as if he were now occupied in eating, silently bent his head down toward us, and was silent; and again a second and a third time; and then at last he made this answer : « Excuse me, my fathers, I am hungry and need to eat ». And then we understood the blessed man's intention, and left him alone. And, when we had eaten and the old man was looking down and privily signalling upward, when we had spoken with him once and twice and thrice, and had asked him « Whence are you? », his tears suddenly gushed out; and when he had put force upon himself to refrain and could not, he bowed his face down upon his knees, and covered his head; and so he with difficulty constrained himself, and stayed his sobs. And so we rose from the table, the old man standing in the midst with his head covered; and, when we had offered praise over the tables, and the old man had been washed according to custom (νόμος), a rug was prepared for him in the chapel. And when he saw it he continued making request and saying, « Because I am feeble and weary, and cannot mandrite would not let him, saying, « Rest, our father, for five days and went out into the garden to walk; and I, having learned these things about him from those who had been watching him, went out after him; and he saw me, and stopped. And I, beginning to enter into conversation with him, said to him : « Wherefore, our father, did you conceal from us what kind of man you are, and from what convent you come? ». But on his side his tears at once gushed forth again, and he was silent. But I said to him : « If you are a Christian and Christ's bondman, I will not let you depart, unless you have informed me wherefore last evening and now you wept at this question. I have presumed, if you are God's bondman, to adjure you by him whom you serve, inform me about this and also about your modes of life for the sake of my soul's salvation ». But the blessed man was annoyed and indignant, saying : « For such an adjuration there was no need ». And I on my side said : « I made an adjuration that I might profit, while you do not lose ». Then the old man laid an injunction upon me with an oath that, until three years had passed, no word should come out of my mouth of what he would say to me ; and he said : « I, my son, have today spent thirty years in this discipline; and during these years God will not judge me for having opened my mouth over food which is derived from God's gift without stretching my thoughts to give praise for his bounty. I hope in his name that I shall not be condemned for having stretched forth my hand to my mouth without every time that I stretched it forth similarly stretching forth my tongue to praise and my mind to prayer on behalf of those who labour and sweat and toil to supply my need. I shall not be despised by the Giver of our good things for having put a vessel to my lips to drink water or wine, and drunk two consecutive sips without giving thanks to the Creator of it and interceding for those who have extended to me a share in their gift. And after these things last evening you were urging me to neglect such rendering of thanks to my Benefactor as my little strength is able to perform, and engage in vain talk. Or know you not that it was God's bounty that we were eating, with the sins of men¹ moreover that stain us? And how can it be, my son, that God will not be angry with us and deliver us to the judgment of torments when we eat his bounty and instead of rendering thanks engage in frivolous talk, and further, instead of prayers for the men the sweat of whose labour we are eating, that 'we should sit and enjoy ourselves in idle talk? And, because you adjured me by God, lo! these are the reasons for which last evening and now my sobs came up, since I said : 'How then (z̄z̄z) can the heart of a man who is fed by God's bounty and mens' sin not tremble to emit words in any other kind of conversation beyond that of thanks and prayer on behalf of the needy and remembrance of those who are working and suffering hardship and distress and want and need, while he is sitting thus without care and without fear, and concerning himself with frivolous stories?' ». I on hearing these things from that old man did the only thing that was proper for me to do, I bowed my face to the ground, marvelling at this extraordinary man and fixing my gaze on him, and further also too how¹ in the evening at table he would not consent to take even two sips only together. And such is our presumptuous impudence that I thought to myself while I was standing, « This man is a solitary, and further also he is his own master, and there is none to command him, and it is easy for him; and moreover neither is he pressed by matters of the obligation of domestic business; and therefore he can observe this amazing canon (z̄z̄w̄w̄y). do so.' ». But, while I on my part was secretly tracing these things in my thoughts, that spiritual man openly told me them all as if he had written out my thought and come to know it, saying : « I have come to know what the evil one has caused to creep into your mind, in order to deprive you of profit », while he repeated everything to me as I had thought it. And then, when not only fear but astonishment also as well fell upon me, I confessed that that was what I had thought. But he sighed the more, saying : « On account of these things, my son, Christianity has been corrupted, and the ordinances of religion have been thrown into confusion. If you are sitting at table, and enjoying the gifts of the Giver, how can you bring in affairs of business and cheat God's kindness of its due for the sake of his gifts? Or is not then ἕρξ the day sufficient for you for your business with its hours and its moments, but at the moment at which one business only is required, thanksgiving, are you on your part giving attention to stories? (and would these were matters of business as you say; but they are actually detriments, and not matters of business) and all the more since it is indeed no trouble for the outer man, while the outer man is feeding on his own food, it is easy, if you wish, for the hidden man to nourish himself with his, unless conversation be unfairly brought in and cheat him of his due ». When the holy old man had spoken all these words, I began to request him to explain his other modes of life to me. Then he cut me short, saying : « On one point on which you begged and pressed and adjured me you have heard me speak. Take a short answer. If you repeat another word to me, I will not eat bread within twenty miles of this city. But go and beware, and observe your promise, and pray for me ». And, understanding these things, that it was on account of the fear of robbers that the spiritual merchant feared to show his riches, I fell down before him and besought him to forgive me. And thus he departed and went away after two days, without having consented to tell us his name or anything about the other modes of life. And I have remained down to the present time lost in admiration of the man of God at all seasons.

The history of one of the saints who would not consent to state his name is ended.

XVIII. — NEXT THE EIGHTEENTH HISTORY, OF A CERTAIN BROTHER WHO LEFT A CONVENT WITHOUT 'BEING RELEASED', AND BETOOK HIMSELF TO ANOTHER.

If therefore I cover with silence a sentence that was pronounced in a terrible story which I saw², which was enacted in the case of one of the blessed brothers, I do not think that I also shall be freed from the sentence of blame that proceeds from justice. When formerly the community of those who had been everywhere expelled on account of the faith were celebrated, and the spiritual community of the diocese of Amida, that of these great convents, were gathered together in great numbers in the village of Hlyn in Tysf, as we have indeed recorded these matters in one of the histories³, and blessed men from everywhere desired to join that spiritual unity, and the blessed men did not keep their door shut, but received everyone, it happened that a certain 'blessed man' came thither, who by his habit (σχιζιμα) was an anchorite, and this man desired to be received in one of the convents in obedience¹, and remain. And on his tendering this request to one of the blessed archimandrites he examined him as to his monastic training, and if he were in any other obedience, or barred by any impediment. But that †blessed man² on seeing the thoroughness of that examination was afraid to confess that he had not been released, lest he should fail to obtain what he desired and not be received; and therefore he said that he had been released from his monastery, when he had not been released; but as if by the grace of God, which knew the sentence that threatened that wretched man, it³ caused him to state the name of his monastery without falsehood⁴. And thus he was received, and entered the convent in obedience. At that time a great pestilence broke out⁵; and, as commonly happened, many died there from that community, insomuch that eighty-four men from the convents themselves, besides guests, died there, and were laid in the grave. And after twenty days the lot reached the †blessed man² who had been received; and he was otherwise known.

And, whereas it was the custom, when the end was overtaking a man and he was in great pain, for five or ten to meet together, and set down incense and make propitiation for him for the other transgressions, and, if he were still in pain, they would bring the holy gospel (εὐαγγέλιον) and lay it upon him, and immediately he would be released either to life or to death, this poor man, in order that the text, « The word of God is living and doeth all things, etc. », might be understood by actual facts, gained no release when the blessed men met together and made petition and prayer and much incense and many forms of propitiation. And the Lord of the world² even came and relieves of the saints, and there was no release, nor relaxation from that intense, terrible, painful convulsion for ten days, insomuch that a hundred and twenty men were thus ranged round him, and were standing and marvelling, and weeping and distressing themselves at the agitation of that soul, and at that terrible and violent driving; and from distress and grief they sat thus round him two and three days, marvelling and weeping, and not eating or drinking, and despising all human life. But, when it had lasted ten days, Grace in accordance with its mercy effected deliverance, that is, the release of that agitated soul, when on the tenth day all the seniors had met together and had stationed themselves round him with the 'Lord of the world', and prayers and petitions and copious tears, while all who were standing there cried with affliction and said:

« Lord, great is thy mercy. Sufficient is this torture for this man. Let thy mercy persuade thee on his behalf, God who carest for thy creation ». The chief of the seniors, while standing over him and weeping, was saying these words, while my wretchedness also was standing and forming part of that sorrowful gathering and hearing him say in the midst of his sobs: « What to do to you, afflicted man, we know not, in order to ask you 'Is it because² you are conscious in your soul of grievous delinquencies that you are dying and departing from life, and only torture remains for you in 'the bodily life?', and to say 'Is there an impediment upon you and is your soul bound by it?'. Who will inform us of this, unless the abundant mercy of your Creator have pity on you? ». Then again, as if by divine instigation, the other senior who was standing at the other side of his bed said : « I, sir, think that this agitation of this soul is an impediment proceeding from the word of God ». And, when he had said this, like one who is suddenly struck by his neighbour and roughly dragged out of deep sleep, he was smitten with stupefaction and suddenly quivered and nodded his head once. And, everyone being astounded, the senior again repeated : « Is there an impediment upon you, agitated one? », and Grace caused him again to nod his head once, while his eyes dried up, and there was nothing to show even that they existed. Then the blessed men deliberated : « Even if this man is already a dead man, yet the divine grace has let us know that his soul is impeded by the word of God; and what shall we do? If we were accepted as ourselves for the release in place of the man who laid the bond, we have done so many times. But come now let us fetch a man, and let us all stand sureties in his behalf. God willing, we will send a petition to his archimandrite to release him. Perhaps the merciful God will accept us, and release him from this torture ». And, when they had determined upon these things, a certain deacon whose name was Addai rose, and came and knelt before his bed, and said : « If God be willing to grant me life till I go and make the release, I will under the security of all my fathers take this soul's impediment upon myself ». And, as the words that came from the mouth of that blessed man ended, then the release and the departure of that soul from its body also took place; and there was a great and terrible and mighty cry, while everyone was amazed and praised God. And so the blessed man exerted himself and travelled rapidly, and fulfilled his promise; and on the tenth day that agitated man was buried, while all marvelled and wondered at the things that had happened.

The history of a certain brother who left a monastery without being released and betook himself to another is ended.

But on my pressing the blessed man, he said to me with sighs : « Why, my son, do you require me to speak ? Lo you see that Christianity has vanished from the earth, and religion has been forgotten, and vanity and error have prevailed. And now what have we to speak, except to weep for the decadence of our generation (γενος), since even we, who are in name Christians, enjoy the shelter only of this name, while all the ordinances of Christianity are far from us? And now suffer me to weep for my life, and pray for me ». And again I said : « How can we live¹, our father? ». But he said : « If you seek to live, lo! he into whose hands you will fall teaches you. If you do not listen to him, why do you weary the piece of dust your fellow-slave by superfluous talking? » But, after I had pressed him with many questions which I was asking him, he turned round and put his hand to his mouth, and stealthily took a stone out of his mouth and dropped it into his bosom; and he began thenceforth to speak easily with me without any impediment in his tongue; while previously his words had been uttered with difficulty, and I on my part had been putting this to the account of old age or ascribing it to a stammer, by one of which causes the old man's tongue was restrained. But, when he suddenly conversed easily with me with many plain words, I marvelled in myself and was thinking, « What has happened to the old man? for lo! during the space of three years¹ that I have been in intercourse with him he was a stammerer and slow of speech, and in this hour the fastening of his tongue has been loosened and he has spoken easily². And, though he spoke many words with me in the way of admonition and caution, and further on the subject of the end and the future judgment, which was the matter on which my mind was above all things intent, I fell on my face entreating the old man not to hide from me the reason of his previous and his present demeanour; while I had moreover often seen an emblem of a thick thread (szguz) with three knots tied on it and tied to the palm of his left hand, which had sunk into his hand and was level with the flesh, and, whenever I asked him, he used to tell me that it was a case of disease; and about that I continued inquiring of him with much entreaty and violent adjurations. But the saint took hold of me and raised me up, while he also repeated to me and instead of my neck. Like the frontier which Jacob and Laban set up and said, 'Thou shalt not pass this heap against me, and I again will not pass it against thee', so I set this emblem on my neck, between falsehood and wrath, the ministers of which are ministers of Satan, and not of God; and I made a decree for my soul that, whenever it saw this frontier, it should not allow wrath to enter from without, and, if it should be stirred up from within, that it should again not pass this frontier to go outside, and falsehood again should never go out from within. But these knots of the emblem I have put here for private observation; and, of these three knots, one, the first, I have put there as a guardian of my thoughts, lest they dissipate themselves in vain things, and that, if error gain dominion over my mind, and it be suddenly captured and dissipated by the sight of an object, I may remember my soul and turn to God; and the second again is guardian of the remembrance of God, that, as it does not depart thence, neither may my intellect also depart from the remembrance of its Creator; and, if again the evil of error gain dominion over and take possession of my intellect, when I see this object, I may suddenly turn myself and cry to God to deliver me from error; and the third is a symbol of remembrance to keep the commandments of him who said, 'If ye love me, keep my commandments'. I know, my son, that these things are to many folly, and lead them to deplorable laughter; but to me they are very useful, and they are to me the irons of my service, but they are not manifest to anyone. Mark that I have testified against you before God ». But I, being astounded at the old man's thoughts, and the secret ordinances of virtue that he had stamped upon his soul, refrained also from repeating these things until his departure, for eight years, while many miracles were also wrought through his prayer and through the repository of his bones.

The history of a certain old man whose name was Zacharius is ended.

XX. — NEXT THE TWENTIETH HISTORY, OF A CERTAIN BROTHER FROM THE SAME CONVENT IN WHICH THIS HOLY OLD MAN ZACHARIAS WAS LIVING, AND ABOUT THE BEGINNING OF SOUND TRAINING.

Since therefore I was always constantly going to that convent, on account of the character of the old man's virtue, and that of all the other saints in it, many of that Christ-loving brotherhood, as if they supposed of us that we were something, used to come and make revelations about their thoughts, and tell of the thoughts with which they had to contend (?); and such answer would be made to each one of them as Grace supplied. And thus consolation derived from conversation was gained by many; and thus they would rejoice and cause one another to think that we, as a person raised above passions, were giving them consolation. One day a certain brother¹, who himself also possessed such great pre-eminence of character that the period during which the whole of the sole of his foot was lying and resting on the ground during the hour of service was reckoned by him as sin (© I have removed myself from and I laughed over all the depths and heights of sins which up to now we had thinking that this might be. And, being amazed at the blessed man's spirituality, to think what a height of wickedness the saints reckon such a little shortcoming as is neglected by us so that we ourselves do not even reckon it as a shortcoming, I said to him : « In case you have been constrained by shame to say one thing in place of another, beware lest Satan deceive you, and you be involved in two wickednesses and double your sin by the use of falsehood ». But he professed, « This, sir, is my sin; and I seek to learn from you how to meet God ». But I, looking at the nature of the man's pre-eminent character, did not bring his thoughts down to the level of our contemptibility and say to him, « This is not a sin », in the first place because it is a sin, and in the second since excessive caution would do no harm to the blessed man, saying : « Go, our brother, again, and pray to God on account of this sin; not for your own only, but also for the rest who slip and fall into it like you. And do you, as far as you can, beware both of it and of any other. But, if you fall into any sin, beware lest Satan lead you into despair and say to you, 'You have provoked, you will not be accepted'; but, whenever you have any ulcer of sin, lay the poultice of repentance!

and then the pure unalloyed seed of the devout and venerable habit (σχημα) of religion falls outwardly upon them, and they have put it on at once on the first day, and from this time it has been in Satan's power easily to drag and entrap and lead many into sensuality and pride as well as into actual dishonourable and odious customs and passions of various kinds: because, if the root of worldliness remains in its place, the thorns of disorderliness and sensuality and greediness and the love of money and evil passions spring from it. In this convent therefore it is not so, since from it there come monks indeed and not like that rabble who themselves according to the words of Scripture seduced Israel to turn against the Lord who delivered them to try him'.
 As soon as a layman comes who wishes to enter upon a course of training, at first they ask him questions about his country and his family (γένος), and what he possesses in the world, and what cause gave rise to this resolution in him, inquiring of him « Has any worldly cause turned your thoughts to this purpose? »; and, after the man whoever he be has settled all these points, so that they may know the genuineness of his desire, if again he in truth possesses this in his mind, they inquire of him, « Lo! how long have you had this resolution in you? »; and on learning all these things they allow him to stand at the gate for thirty days, saying, « Beware lest your thoughts urge you to return for any reason, for the sake of kindred (γένοσ), or for the sake of wife, or for the sake of any property. Sit here, and try your thoughts for thirty days, if you can die to the things of the world, and then you shall come in to live with Christ, knowing this also, that, as a dead man, after they have carried him out of his house and laid him in the grave, is no longer able either in small or in great degree to consider or think or know if he has any worldly property, so he who is buried with God, if he seeks to serve him, has no more any kind of worldly property, so that not only does he become a stranger to things outside him, but he also seeks even to forget himself, that is to abandon his former habits, and then he approaches ». But after thirty days, if they see that he is kindled with enthusiasm(?), they again say the same things to him and many words, and then he comes inside, while they give him free admission and also require him to be regular in attending service and watching with the brotherhood, and the weekly ministration¹, and all the the manual labour of the monastery for about three months, making trial of his earnestness and observing his alacrity. And, if they see him to be eager to receive the mark, and if he is vigilant and presents a petition, then indeed he is again called, and many things are said to him : « You have tried, and you have seen. Is it too hard for you? after you have received the mark and laid a foundation for repentance, let not Satan return again; for from this time struggles and temptations such as you have never seen will assail you ». And, when he professes every thing, they present him before the altar and make a prayer for him, and they take a small round piece from the crown of his head, as the custom is (and they take it even from many laymen¹); and they say to him : « From this time onward you become a penitent, not a monk. Remember everything that has been done by you, and make entreaty on account of it before God and repent of your former habits, and forget them; and cleanse yourself from all worldly foulness for three years. If so be you have cloven firmly to Christ, then he will command, and they will clothe you in the venerable robe ($\sigma\tau\epsilon\lambda\eta$) of his habit ($\sigma\chi\eta\mu\alpha$), and he will place on your hand also the ring of observance of his commandments ». And so they leave him again for three more months; and again he presents a petition to be tonsured, while this also is their part, to urge him himself to seek intercessors'. And again they require at his hands, « Look to your thoughts. It is expedient for you now to turn back and it is open to you to do so. Can you endure, even after yet other days' journeys (υπερβολων) have presented themselves before you? ». And, if again they see that he is in earnest, they shave half his head only, so that for this reason one may see many among them whose tonsures differ among themselves. And, at the end of a year of his penitence, then his tonsure only is completed, while he is not allowed to clothe himself in the coat, nor to bind on the girdle, nor the cloak, nor the cowl, nor a regular tunic or a regular coat², but they bind a cord on him over a tunic of straw, and a hood moreover of straw, saying, « Be in earnest in your repentance »; and thus they humble his thoughts during his repentance, while he lings and expects and hopes until he be thought worthy to approach the habit (σχιμα) also. And he completes three years³, and then he comes before the altar; and again great cautions are pronounced, and, « In case you seek to turn back now, it is open to you ». And so they array him in the habit (σχιμα), the first foundation which he laid

A relation therefore of the history of the admirable modes of life of this holy Thomas did not seem to me to be alien to this holy series, even if it be not related by us in accordance with its magnificence, on account of the greatness of his later modes of life, and the fervour of his zeal in divine things, and his mortification and the crucifixion of his body to this world; a man with whom we were in pleasant and spiritual intercourse for thirty years after his training¹.

This saint's father therefore, whose name was SUNQ, was formerly a great, renowned, and distinguished man before the kings², and he held the office of the satrapy in the districts of Syria and Armenia³ for many years, while the kings² and all the leading men listened to him and welcomed him, inasmuch that the man became exceedingly rich and great, in gold and silver, and extensive lands, and many slaves; while everything that he possessed was on a great scale, were it fields or woods, or parks (παρὰ κτήνησις) or high buildings of vast size; insomuch that in riches and dignity he held a very high place among those who were in the East. This man therefore had this devout son besides another brother; and he also as well as himself was distinguished and renowned before the kings²; and he bestowed great care upon him that he might receive the best possible education in the wisdom of the Greeks, placing him at Berytus and at Antioch and at other places, while he also spent large sums of money on him in accordance with the scale demanded by the high position. He therefore was brilliantly instructed, and sagaciously educated, for many years; because by his own nature he possessed in general the quality of sagacity. And, when the time came and he had been taught and had received a first-rate education, his father began to occupy himself in introducing him into the office itself, since he was indeed destined to receive the charge (στρατηγία) of the great governorship (ἀρχιεπὶς)¹; and, while he was making these plans, the end overtook him; and 'on that day', as it is written, « all his plans perished »². And this his son remained over his house and over his office, his brother also having died; and he too began to deliberate with himself and to say : « My father, who acquired all this dignity and greatness and property and riches, has left everything, and out of all his house and his riches and his property and his office nothing has gone with him except sins only; and I therefore now, if I stay and add to my father's property to the same extent as he did, and to the same extent a thousand times over, shall presently die as he did, and it will become the property of others, and perhaps it will become the property of men who are prodigal and vicious and of fornicators, and they will squander it in evil fashion; and to me what will come from it only to sit in silence in my house in your dominions: since I am indeed not equal to the position of ruler; and why must I overwhelm myself and others and incur sin? ». And the king, admiring his words, did not press him, but ordered them to receive it' from him and let him be released. And thus he was released, and went down to his house with joy, giving thanks to God and saying: « Now that God has delivered me from robbery and cares and anxieties, I will attend to myself and my house and my properties (ουσιαις), and will administer them in a religious spirit; and further I will remember my father who ran his course in the vanity of this deceitful world, and amassed all these things for me. And, in order that I and his own spirit itself may receive deliverance, since I know that he did great injustice, I on my side will give alms out of the very sum that he amassed, that he may find at least a little mercy on the judgment-day ». And from that time therefore he began to carry out these same things, and he did not give and act in the ordinary way like other men, but he would in private grasp the receiver, and in private fall on his face before him weeping and beseeching him to entreat God to accept his purpose, and absolve his father also, saying, « Since you, animal instincts of their bodies, and beget mildness and humility and religion instead of the things that are in the world, while the report of their labours and of their asceticism was heard everywhere; and thenceforth many magnates and sons of distinguished magnates, marvelling at what this blessed man had done, would imitate him, and like him despise the whole world; and some would come to him that they also might receive the habit (σχιζμα), and some again would hasten to other districts and well-known convents, which many in fact did. And accordingly this blessed man had been made a great and beautiful sight for all men, while he had also determined for himself that he would never throw himself upon his side or rest his head upon a pillow, or let water fall upon his body, or oil, as far as was possible, except under the pressure of great necessity (ζωγυζα), which he in fact carried out, until his feet were like charred columns, being thick and black, until after ten years they used to discharge a large quantity of matter, and were as if they were not his, since he was smitten with severe ulcers, and would not concern himself even to wash off that discharge, and to apply a poultice, while we used often to say to him¹, « While thinking to these ulcers, and you will fall ». But he would look in astonishment at us, saying : « Then (z̄p̄a), when these feet are anointed with drugs, and are rubbed by many persons and cleaned with great care, someone would perhaps come and say, 'They have enough, now let them pay for the outward show with which they have been magnified, lest they be required for it in hell' ».

1. This would probably be after Th. had removed to Claudias—see below. The statement at the beginning that J. knew him 30 years from his entering upon the monastic life can hardly be reconciled with the statement that Th. lived 30 years after his banishment (p. 296), and probably the period should be reckoned from his banishment.

 And so, being amazed at the soundness of his intellect, we would allow the matter to drop. Of the rest of the severe practices and heavy labours which they laid not only on themselves, but also the rest of their disciples and his wife and children¹, we are not capable of composing a relation or description, so far did they transcend the limits of corporal creatures. And this again is a point that is very admirable and great, that at the beginning when they began, the first day, each one of them found the last day also, that of his end (h)², without wearying of the life or slackening and falling off, through sicknesses, or through the infirmity of his body, or through the intensity of the winter cold, or through the extremity of the summer heat. But the blessed man, because he used to bestow much labour on reading, conceived the desire of obtaining some books of the fathers; and in consequence of this desire he directed his journey to Alexandria the great with three of his followers; and he entered into communication with the many holy bishops and the others who on account of the persecution were at that time collected there; and he was strengthened yet more both in the faith and in labours. And he bought many great books of all the fathers, the full amount that he could and was able to obtain, about five large loads², and similarly also some spices for a hundred denarii from Edessa; and he returned having collected examples of virtue. And so he thenceforth occupied himself constantly night and day, besides constant prayers and frequent repetitions of service, in reading books of the fathers containing commentaries and exhortations and dogmatics (dogmatizaz), so that thenceforward his mind was enlightened like the sun. After twelve years during which the blessed man with all the rest of his convent was thus distinguishing himself, the smoke of heretical persecution was being exhaled in the same district of Armenia, the instigator and perpetrator of these things being the likeness of the original Antichrist, the man who held the authority of the patriarchate in Antioch at that time, whose name was Ephraim 'the son of Appian' of Amida; who in his own person displayed beforehand in the church of God all the things that are to be done in the world at the end by the false Christ. This man's brother therefore was in the district of Armenia and Syria, holding the office of the satrapy previously held by the blessed Thomas himself²; and this man stirred up a cruel persecution against all the believers in the district of Armenia; and thereupon the chorrepscopi and the heads of convents and the rest of the priests of the villages assemble before the blessed Thomas as before a teacher and a learned man and a leader of men, so that a great assembly of five hundred men was formed, saying, « Everything that he commands we will do ». Then these things stirred up violent odium against the virtuous Thomas himself, since they said, « He is a head and an example to all who are in this district to rebel against us ». Then, when the numbers of their assembly had further mounted even to eight hundred, they thereafter received summonses to the praetorium of the satrap, that they might do one of two things, either assent to the impiety of the synod of Chalcedon, or leave the world. But, lest you think that I for my part am bound by district or place, if you seek to expel me from the district, I on my part will leave this evening, that you may know that I am not bound by anything else except by Jesus my God by whose name I was saved ». He said to him : « If you wish to respect yourself, and not let there be slaughter in the whole district on your account, depart from the district ». But the blessed man gladly undertook to depart, saying, « Would that I the sinner might be persecuted on behalf of the great name of Christ my God; for I neither have merited nor do merit this privilege ». And so he departed from his district with all who were with him; and the rest of all that assembly journeyed after him, and some to other districts, and some to the stern and rugged mountains; and so all of them everywhere bravely endured the violent and cruel persecution. But the blessed man crossed into the district called Claudias, and there he bought a site; and on that site on the high mountains of towering size above the river Euphrates he erected some small huts forming two monasteries for women and for men; and there for the future they valiantly carried out the labours which they habitually practised. When he had completed the period of thirty years in banishment¹, when afterwards we used to resort to while she never came within sight of the blessed man nor yet of his sons, but each of them performed his¹ spiritual service alone and solitary. And so everyone was amazed at them, to think to what extremity of humility and of labours and of hardship like this persons who were already in the world's eyes kings had been brought, and they gave thanks because of them and praised God. And they departed from the world with a reputation for marvellous modes of life; and the blessed man finished his course in the royal city, being also interred in our convent at the holy Mar Mama beyond the water², and his blessed wife ended her course at the same time in the district of Armenia.

1. sc. his or her; — 2. The convent was in Sycae (ch. 37), i. e. the suburb beyond the Golden Horn. Pargoire (Izvestiya Russkago Arkheologicheskago Istituta v Konstantinopole, IX, p. 264, (1904)) has shown that the palace of S. Mama was on the Thracian coast opposite Chrysopolis, and the monastery of S. Mama at Belgrad Kapu in the SW. of the city; and 'beyond the water' shows the palace to be here meant, even if we did not know the site to be in Sycae. V. D. and L. s rendering 'ecclesia' in ch. 37 is erroneous, the Syr. having 'house' only.

XXII. — NEXT THE TWENTY-SECOND HISTORY, OF THE TWO BLESSED ANCHORITE BROTHERS ADDAI AND ABRAHAM THE ZEALOUS MEN.

These blessed men Addai and Abraham therefore were brothers on the mother's side, and at first they remained under training in a convent for several years; and afterwards they formed the resolution of going out on pilgrimage. And, when they had been thus going about for several years, they began to deliberate between themselves, saying, « Wherefore do we thus go aimlessly about, and not show labour for our Lord, and erect places for his praise? » And so, as they were going about, they found a certain place that was a convenient site for a monastery, and they planted their cross there, and made a cabin; and they asked for iron tools, and began to dig out a site for a martyrs' chapel. And, when the people of the district saw and heard it, they repaired to them from all quarters, providing money and wood and everything that was useful. And in one year they erected an extensive convent in that place, and they also gained disciples; and when they saw it they rejoiced, and they say : « Now it is better for us than roving and going about aimlessly ». And, when they had trained some men and taught them the psalms, and shown them how to conduct affairs, they conceived the plan of leaving them there as it were to govern themselves and departing, and erecting another place. And thus they continued doing for twenty-five years, during which they erected twelve monasteries; most of which I know, which they erected in the district, and the rest, because they were some way off, I have not seen; but the men I saw at last in that in which the blessed Addai who was the elder died, and I was for some time in intercourse with them, and they said, « This is the twelfth monastery that we have erected, since we devoted ourselves to this object ». And in each of them this is what they used to do. As soon as it was built, they would obtain everything that they could for it, and appoint an archimandrite in it, and then depart. But at last the blessed Addai fell asleep in the twelfth.

The history of Addai and Abraham the zealous brothers is ended.

XXIII. — NEXT THE TWENTY-THIRD HISTORY, OF THE BLESSED SIMEON THE SOLITARY.

This blessed Simeon therefore used to occupy himself with great and marvellous practices in a convent adjoining the city of Amida, being distinguished for quietude and humility and obedience, and love of all spiritual labours, and especially the service of the saints, and great and abounding love towards all poor men and strangers. But, when he had completed twenty years in these heavenly practices, he desired to adopt the life of a solitary; and he set out and went to a certain mountain two miles from the city; and he passed the night at a certain spot. And there he prayed and traced the plan of some cabins for himself, and he began and built some huts there that were very marvellous, being supplied by many persons with all that he needed; and thereafter he used to carry out all the marvellous labours of his honoured course of life. But on account of the abundance of his charity and the love of strangers and poor men that burned in him he would not consent to make a court or gates for his huts, saying, « Thus it will be open to Christ my Lord when he comes to me to enter my dwelling in the person of his bondmen simply and without impediment; that so he may grant me the blessing of his favour ». And so much was this saint smitten with the love of God, and with the love of his brethren, that, when occasion called him to leave his huts, he did not close the door and conceal any one of the articles of furniture in his cell, but also he used to do a thing that is particularly great and splendid and marvellous to hear, when it happened that he was absent were it one day or two or three from his cell. Not only did he not trouble himself to bring in any one article of furniture in his cell, but also on the day on which he left his cell he would first cook food, and would lay a table, and moisten bread and temper wine, and put it out, and a tablet inscribed and laid on the top of it as follows (which we have also often read), on which were these words: «Welcome, our brothers, Christ's bondmen; come into your bondman's house confidently and refresh yourselves, and hesitate not. Since occasion has called me the sinner to go on necessary service, here is a present of what is required to satisfy need from the gift of our Benefactor set ready. For the sake of his true love, whether it is one or many whom Christ my Lord is preparing and sending to his bondman's house, shrink not from coming in and satisfying all your need, though I myself am absent in the body. If it be possible for him to wait till I come, I beg him to do so; if not, let him refresh himself out of our Lord's gift and bless the Giver, and leave us the blessing of his prayers, and thus go in peace; and, if he need anything else besides, lo! the whole cell is committed to Christ's hands, and at his hands let him satisfy all his need without restraint from everything that is in it. But let him leave this writing of ours in its place for the rest of our brethren who shall arrive in order to inform them also ». And so the fame of this saint's great charity was spoken of over the whole of the city and that district. But once two young men who were passing came, and they found the huts open, and no one was to be seen all round; and they went in and ate and drank, and the rest they put into their packs; and they loaded themselves, and started to go. And, when they had passed out of the door, their feet stuck there, and they stood still bearing their loads till the evening and standing erect; and they became incapable of moving, or of laying down their loads until the blessed man came. And on seeing them from a distance he understood what had happened; and they themselves cried with a loud voice and say, « Sir, have mercy on us for we have sinned against you, and forgive us ». But the blessed man immediately raised his eyes to heaven, and prayed, and said : « Lord, deliver thy creatures, and free them from the deceitful teaching of the enemy; and remove from them the teacher of evil who incited them to these things ». And the same hour they were released, and fell on their faces before him. And he on his side said these words to them : « Knew you not, my sons, that I had committed this cell to Christ my Lord, and him nothing escapes? or know you not that, wherever Christ's name is called, everyone who presumes to stretch out his hand and lay it upon anything has to deal with God the Judge of all? And now, my sons, go and beware ». And so he dismissed them'. And the fame of the saint's triumphs was spoken of everywhere. But afterwards the storm (ζημυρόν) of persecution was stirred up against the same blessed man also together with all the rest of the church; and he bravely and heroically contended in the conflicts (ἀγών), while all the convents were overcome and defeated by the persecution, and driven from the whole district². And he himself held firm; and thus he persevered and maintained a heroic contest; and he used to go about the city itself at the very height of the persecution, and give absolution and baptize night and day, while he had previously determined this also, that nothing should enter his belly except from the labour of his hands; but he used to labour with his hands in proportion to his own needs, and those of the other strangers whom he was in the habit of receiving in secret and relieving out of his labour. And thus he contended several years while occupied in this labour; and he ended his life with this reputation, in the triumph of heroism, while contending until death on behalf of the truth.

The history of the blessed Simeon the solitary is ended.

1. A similar story is told in Bithynus, Hist. Mon., 6. Dyakonov, p. 385. 2. This seems to mean that some convents were burnt and others went into exile.

INTRODUCTION

Si l'union promulguée à Florence, le 6 juillet 1439, demeura pour tout l'Orient à peu près lettre morte, on le doit principalement à l'opposition systématique du clergé inférieur et des moines, qui eurent pour porte-voix le seul des prélats qui eût obstinément refusé de signer à Florence, le célèbre Marc d'Éphèse. A son retour à Constantinople, le 1^{er} février 1440, Marc s'éleva vivement contre l'accord; il attaqua avec virulence tous les signataires du décret d'union et chercha à faire revenir à leurs premiers sentiments ceux qui s'étaient soumis moins par conviction que par entraînement et par nécessité politique. Il n'en fallut pas davantage pour faire de lui l'oracle et l'idole de la foule, aux yeux de laquelle il passa pour un héros et un saint. Pour ces motifs, il nous a paru qu'un fascicule, où seraient groupés, dans un ordre méthodique, tous les opuscules anticonciliaires du fanatique archevêque d'Éphèse, rencontrerait bon accueil auprès de nos lecteurs. Parmi ces violentes diatribes, au moyen desquelles il s'est acharné à étouffer dans l'âme de ses compatriotes toute velléité de réconciliation, il en est qui ont déjà vu le jour, mais en des éditions qui ne répondent plus aux exigences de notre temps; les autres paraissent ici pour la première fois. Dans toutes, d'ailleurs, se retrouve la même inspiration : haine farouche, aveugle, irréductible, de l'union et de ses adhérents. Sans craindre de se répéter, l'auteur ne cesse d'y produire jusqu'à satiété les mêmes arguments, eussent-ils été réfutés cent fois, fussent-ils dépourvus de toute valeur dogmatique. Tout homme de bonne foi en conviendra : si tel argument de Marc paraît sérieux, voire sérieux, la plupart sont d'une étonnante puérité, et l'on est surpris de voir l'auteur y revenir encore et encore, sans se soucier le moins du monde des solutions fournies, au cours du concile, par les théologiens latins, ou dans le passé, par les Grecs eux-mêmes, dont plusieurs ont répondu par avance à Marc d'Éphèse en réfutant les controversistes mis par lui à contribution. L'unique mérite de Marc, si mérite il y a, est d'avoir présenté les griefs de ses devanciers sous une forme concise, nerveuse, propre à faire impression sur les foules non familiarisées avec ces questions de haute spéculation. Nous reproduirons les textes de Marc, bons ou mauvais, sincères ou hypocrites, avec un soin égal, car il importe de bien connaître les sources délétères où vont puiser, depuis cinq siècles, les ennemis de l'union que l'Orient compte encore en si grand nombre.

Notre série s'ouvre par un discours au Pape Eugène IV, de facture étrange; il est aisé d'en fixer approximativement la date, grâce à une curieuse page de Syropoulos¹. Depuis la séance solennelle du 9 avril, à Ferrare, Grecs et Latins avaient continué de s'observer, sans aborder aucune discussion sur les points en litige, au grand déplaisir d'Eugène IV, dont le budget devenait chaque jour plus lourd, plus écrasant pour le trésor pontifical, auquel incomulait l'entretien des Orientaux. Pour charmer leurs loisirs forcés, certains cardinaux influents multipliaient les réceptions. Le patriarche, il est vrai, avait fait défense à ses subordonnés de répondre aux invitations des Latins tenues pour compromettantes, mais cette prohibition n'allait pas sans quelque exception, le Grec étant né curieux. C'est ainsi qu'un jour Marc d'Éphèse, son frère le nomophylax Jean Eugénikos, et Dorothee, métropolitaine de Mitylène, s'étaient rendus à un somptueux banquet donné en leur honneur par le célèbre cardinal Giulio Césarini, celui-là même que Marc devait avoir pour principal antagoniste dans les discussions publiques du concile. La conversation avait roulé sur divers sujets, principalement de philosophie, comme on aimait à le faire à cette époque. Au moment où ses invités allaient prendre congé, Césarini insinua à l'archevêque d'Éphèse de rédiger une adresse au Pape pour le remercier de ses efforts dans la convocation du concile et l'engager à persévérer dans la voie où il était entré, en dépit des apparentes difficultés. Marc, qui ne s'attendait pas à pareille proposition, hésita un instant; il finit cependant par accepter, et c'est précisément cette adresse, restée presque inconnue des historiens de l'Occident, que l'on trouvera plus loin, sous le n° VII. Césarini avait-il été bien inspiré en poussant son hôte d'un jour à cet acte de déférence envers Eugène IV, il ne m'appartient pas de le dire. Sans doute ne trouva-t-il pas entièrement de son goût cette page d'éloquence, car au lieu de la remettre à son auguste destinataire, il en donna communication à l'empereur. Celui-ci entra aussitôt dans une violente colère, dont le patriarche fut le premier à supporter les éclats. De quel droit, répétait-il, les évêques agissaient-ils ainsi à leur guise, et risquaient-ils de le compromettre auprès des Latins par des démarches inconsidérées? Il voulut même ouvrir une enquête contre l'archevêque d'Éphèse et le faire juger par le synode; mais il finit par se désister devant les remontrances de quelques prélats, de Bessarion en particulier. C'est dans les premiers jours de mai 1538, peu après les funérailles de l'arche-vêque de Sardes (24 avril), que doit se placer, au rapport de Syropoulos, ce curieux incident, et la composition du petit monument littéraire qui l'avait provoqué. C'est moins un compliment qu'une leçon hautaine donnée au Pape par le fougueux champion de l'orthodoxie grecque. S'il est venu au concile, ce n'est point assurément pour changer d'avis, mais bien pour guérir l'Occident de ses erreurs. Il n'en signale que deux, l'addition au symbole et l'emploi des azymes ; mais au ton qu'il y met, à l'audace avec laquelle il rejette sur le pontife de Rome toute la responsabilité du schisme, on devine sans peine les sentiments intimes qui l'animaient. A ce titre, le document méritait d'être mis en pleine lumière, dégagé des superfluités dont Calliste Blastos, son premier éditeur, l'avait surchargé.

Un érudit grec, l'archimandrite Audronie Démétracopoulos, dont les loisirs furent presque exclusivement consacrés à recueillir dans les bibliothèques d'Allemagne et de Russie les écrits de ses compatriotes hostiles à l'Église romaine, avait rencontré dans deux manuscrits de la bibliothèque synodale de Moscou l'opuscule suivant de Marc d'Éphèse¹ : Συλλογή χρήσεων γραφικῶν, ὅτι ἐκ μόνου τοῦ Πατρὸς ἐκπορεύεται τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, οὐχὶ δὲ καὶ ἐκ τοῦ Υἱοῦ, δοθεῖσα τῷ αὐτοκρατορῆτι καὶ θεοστέπτῳ βασιλεῖ τῷ Ηαλιπλόγῳ, καθὼς παρὰ τῆς ἁγίας αὐτοῦ βασιλείας προσετάγη. La compilation proprement dite y est précédée d'une lettre à l'empereur qui débute ainsi : Ἐπειδὴ μετὰ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου παντὸς φροντίδος καὶ τῆς ἐκκλησιαστικῆς εἰρήνης καὶ ὁμονοίας μέλει τῷ ἐνθῆφ κράτει σου, θεοφροῦνριτε, θεόσπεπτε, νέε Κωνσταντίνε, ἅγιε βασιλεῦ, καὶ ζήτησον ἡ ἁγία βασιλεία σου ἕθετο τοῦ ἐπιστοφρευθῆναι χρήσεις γραφικῆς, παριστώσας ὅτι τὸ θεῖον καὶ ζωαρχικὸν Πνεῦμα ἐκ τοῦ Πατρὸς μόνου ἐκπορεύεται κτλ. Pour s'adresser au souverain en termes si pleins de déférence, Marc ne devait pas encore avoir rompu avec lui. L'opuscule a donc été composé durant le concile même, avant le retour à Constantinople de l'empereur et des prélats qui l'avaient accompagné. Pour ce motif, l'opuscule devait figurer dans notre collection de monuments relatifs au concile. Mais la Russie nous demeurant fermée, il était impossible de consulter les manuscrits de Moscou, et les catalogues des autres fonds restaient silencieux sur cette œuvre de Marc d'Éphèse. Après avoir frappé en vain à la porte des principales bibliothèques, j'avais renoncé pour le moment à la publication de cette Sylloge, quand un manuscrit de l'Ambrosienne de Milan, le n° 653, vint heureusement fournir le document cherché. On n'y trouve point, il est vrai, la lettre d'envoi à l'empereur, mais il s'agit évidemment du recueil rencontré par Démétracopoulos dans les manuscrits de Moscou. Si le nom de Marc ne figure pas, à l'intérieur du manuscrit ambrosien, au début de l'opuscule qui nous occupe, il se lit, par contre, dans l'index placé en tête du volume. Le feuillet qui contient cet index est entièrement déchiré à l'angle supérieur de gauche; mais, par un rare bonheur, la partie conservée débute ainsi : ... Ἐφέσου κῶρ Μάρκου συλλογαί, ἧς συνέλεξεν ἐκ τε προφητῶν καὶ εὐαγγελίων, ἀποστόλων τε καὶ τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων, περὶ τῆς τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος ἐκπορεύσεως.

Ce libellé, qui est de la même main que le reste du manuscrit, levait tous les doutes, et à défaut des volumes de Moscou, celui de Milan venait de nous fixer une compilation, dont il ne faudrait pas exagérer l'importance, mais qui n'est pas non plus dépourvue d'intérêt : elle constitue en quelque sorte l'arsenal où Marc allait s'approvisionner dans ses tournois dogmatiques avec les théologiens latins. On y sent l'improvisation, l'opus tumultuarium, soit à la répétition de certains textes, soit au désordre dans lequel ils sont présentés. Incompatibles avec le travail soigné du cabinet, ces caractères s'expliquent aisément avec les nécessités des luttes quasi quotidiennes durant les séances oragenses de Florence. Aussi n'ai-je pas hésité, bien qu'il manquât de la lettre d'envoi qui en expliquerait l'origine, à insérer ici cet ouvrage sous le n° VIII, avec les références aux œuvres originales des Pères, hormis deux ou trois, que je n'ai pas encore réussi à retrouver. J'avais longtemps caressé l'espoir de rencontrer une copie des manuscrits de Moscou, avec le texte de la lettre à l'empereur, soit parmi les papiers de Démétracopoulos, soit parmi ceux de Nicéphore Calogéras, l'ancien évêque orthodoxe de Patras, qui avait lui aussi utilisé les manuscrits de Moscou. Mais en dépit de hautes recommandations, il m'a été impossible d'obtenir à ce sujet le moindre renseignement, hormis l'invitation à y aller voir moi-même. Une visite, je l'avoue, eût peut-être obtenu le résultat désiré; mais la distance était telle que je n'ai pas osé l'entreprendre, sans avoir la certitude qu'elle ne serait pas en pure perte.

Le lecteur trouvera, sous le n° IX, une compilation considérable, celle à coup sûr où Marc a mis en œuvre toutes les ressources de sa dialectique. Il se vantait d'être ferme sur les syllogismes, mais il avait, en ce genre de sport, trop de devanciers pour que nous retrouvions dans cette longue série d'arguments la moindre originalité. Depuis Photius et Nicéas de Byzance, on avait, durant tout le moyen âge byzantin, usé et abusé du système. Ce qui surprend chez Marc, c'est l'art, disons mieux la souplesse avec laquelle, au cours de ces pages, il ressasse cent fois les mêmes arguments sans avoir l'air de se répéter. Mais sa dialectique, malgré la richesse apparente des formules, est d'une infidélité extrême. Elle ne vit que de sophismes, de perpétuelles équivoques; seulement, tout est échafaudé de façon à donner l'impression d'une construction solide. Georges Scholarios d'abord, avant de reprendre pour son propre compte les sophismes de Marc, Bessarion ensuite, ont bien montré la fragilité du monument, en des pages où la science théologique se montre, comparée à celle de Marc, d'une écrasante supériorité. Joseph Hergenröther a édité, avec la réfutation de ces deux savants, une bonne partie de l'ouvrage de Marc : trente-neuf chapitres sur cinquante-six¹. Seulement, dans l'édition d'Hergenröther, l'ordre général des chapitres est entièrement bouleversé, l'éditeur ayant pris pour base, non l'œuvre de Marc lui-même, mais celle de ses contradicteurs, chez lesquels l'ordre original, pour des motifs que je n'ai pas à examiner ici, n'a pas été sauvegardé. Il était donc nécessaire de donner de cet ouvrage une édition nouvelle, qui comprendrait les chapitres omis par Hergenröther et respecterait l'ordonnance primitive de l'auteur. L'éditeur allemand aurait pu s'apercevoir des lacunes de son travail, s'il avait eu connaissance de trois éditions antérieures à la sienne, parues au cours du XVIII^e siècle². A Dieu ne plaise pourtant que je veuille lui faire grief de les avoir ignorées ; il est si difficile, aujourd'hui encore, en dépit des communications devenues plus fréquentes, de se renseigner sur les publications de l'Orient hellénique, et, une fois renseigné, de se les procurer ! Je relève le détail, moins pour critiquer Hergenröther, que pour montrer en quelle estime le monde orthodoxe a toujours tenu les Syllogismes de Marc. Du reste, les trois éditions dont je parle et qui seront signalées plus loin, sont devenues si rares que pour consulter tel chapitre de Marc non publié dans Migne, on avait plus tôt fait de recourir directement aux manuscrits. L'édition que nous présentons au public, tout en constituant un utile complément à la Patrologie de Migne, dispensera du même coup le lecteur de rechercher désormais les rarissimes imprimés de Séraphin de Pisidie, de Koutounios ou d'Eugène Bulgaris.

Migne a également publié, par les soins du même Hergenröther, le petit Dialogue de Marc sur l'addition du Filioque au Symbole, reproduit plus loin sous le n^o X ; mais par un procédé qui étonne chez un éditeur aussi grave qu'Hergenröther, il y est horriblement tronqué, sans que l'on saisisse bien le motif de pareilles mutilations. Si le traité de Marc, rapproché d'autres pages de l'auteur contenues dans le même volume de la Patrologie, ne fournissait aucun argument nouveau et formait double emploi, mieux valait le laisser dormir encore à l'ombre discrète des bibliothèques ; mais à le tirer de l'oubli, c'est dans son intégrité qu'il convenait de le reproduire. C'est ce que j'ai tâché de faire ici, à l'aide d'un bon manuscrit de notre Bibliothèque Nationale. Marc s'y répète sans doute, mais on peut en dire autant de chacun de ses opuscules. Cette constatation, loin de nous arrêter, doit nous inciter au contraire à les publier tous : on apercevra mieux, à travers les perpétuelles redites, la pauvreté des arguments.

Dans l'Introduction au premier fascicule de cette collection, j'ai écrit¹ que les dix syllogismes sur le Purgatoire, contenus dans un manuscrit de Moscou, devaient être identiques à ceux du deuxième discours de Marc à Ferrare, et ne constituaient pas une œuvre distincte. Cette assertion n'est vraie qu'en partie, comme le montrera, sous le n° XI, l'édition de ces dix syllogismes d'après une copie de Constantinople de M. X. Sidéridès.

Les ouvrages de Marc, mentionnés jusqu'ici, portent presque exclusivement sur la Procession du Saint-Esprit et sur l'addition au Symbole de la particule Eliouque: irritante question, qui absorba à elle seule toutes les séances publiques du concile de Florence. Dans l'opuscule reproduit sous le n° XII, Marc aborde un autre point de la controverse gréco-latine, celui de l'épiclèse, ou de la formule consécatoire du sacrifice eucharistique. On connaît le fond du débat. La transsubstantiation, ou la transformation du pain et du vin au corps et au sang de N.-S. J.-C. dans l'Eucharistie, s'opère-t-elle par les paroles mêmes du Christ : Ceci est mon corps, ceci est mon sang, ou seulement par cette invocation au Saint-Esprit, que les liturgies orientales placent après le récit de l'institution eucharistique. Contrairement à la doctrine catholique, qui attribue le changement aux paroles du Christ, les schismatiques de l'Orient estiment aujourd'hui que ce changement a lieu en vertu de l'épiclèse. Marc d'Éphèse n'a pas peu contribué à répandre cette erreur parmi ses compatriotes en composant son opuscule sur la consécration, plusieurs fois réimprimé depuis l'époque où Claude de Saintes le publiait pour la première fois à Paris, en 1560, dans sa précieuse collection des Liturgies primitives. Bien que déjà connu, cet opuscule de Marc devait trouver place ici, car il fut composé à Florence même, à la fin du concile, alors que cette question vint en délibération. C'est du moins ce qu'affirme Syropoulos, témoin oculaire, lequel ajoute même ce détail intéressant : c'est à la demande expresse de l'empereur que Marc écrivit son traité². Bessarion y fit une riposte pleine d'érudition : elle est encore méditée dans son texte grec, mais elle viendra, en temps opportun, prendre rang dans cette collection de monuments conciliaires. Car, on aurait tort de le croire, le concile de Florence ne compta pas, parmi les Grecs, que des adversaires. Si l'attaque dirigée contre l'auguste assemblée par l'archevêque d'Éphèse fut rude, passionnée, haineuse, la défense, même chez un Bessarion, se fit parfois bien vive et sans ménagements, l'adversaire étant manifestement atteint d'un mal incurable : l'entêtement. On brusque l'antagoniste, quand on a perdu l'espoir de le convaincre.

Dans les trois documents placés sous les n^{os} XIII, XIV et XV, Marc s'en prend avec une extrême violence, non plus seulement à tel ou tel point de doctrine défini à Florence, mais bien au concile lui-même. Il frappe fort et dur, sans souci des convenances, voire de la vérité. Il en veut surtout aux Grecs-Unis, pour lesquels il n'a pas d'expressions assez méprisantes; il les flétrit du nom de Gréco-Latins et de Latinisants; il va jusqu'à les appeler des hommes moitié bêtes, comme les centaures de la Fable. Du reste, à part les injures, on ne trouve rien dans ces virulents pamphlets que l'auteur n'ait déjà ressassé ailleurs.

Dirigés directement contre l'assemblée de Florence, deux de ces documents, les n^{os} XIV et XV, figuraient depuis longtemps dans les collections des conciles, mais divisés et sectionnés en quelque sorte en petites tranches, que séparait les unes des autres la double réfutation de Grégoire le Protosynecelle et de Joseph de Méthone. Quant au n^o XIII, déjà connu en Orient par sa publication dans des ouvrages anticatholiques, il n'avait été rendu accessible aux lecteurs occidentaux que par l'édition de Joseph Hergenröther dans la Patrologie de Migne, où il se trouve accompagné, fragments par fragments, de la réfutation de Grégoire le Protosynecelle, à l'instar des deux autres. Tous trois paraissent ici dans leur rédaction normale et continue, et non plus scindés en segments épars; de bons manuscrits nous ont aidé à en améliorer le texte, mais nous n'avons pu consulter tous ceux qui nous l'ont conservé, tant leur nombre est considérable. Le lecteur trouvera indiquées, en tête de chacun d'entre eux, les éditions antérieures à la nôtre, ainsi que les manuscrits utilisés par nous. Nous écartons à dessein dans cette Introduction tous les détails de bibliographie pure; ils seront mieux à leur place au début même de chaque document.

Par son caractère, le document XIII est strictement dogmatique. Dépourvu de toute allusion aux événements contemporains ou aux discussions conciliaires, il expose en formules trapues et condensées la croyance des Orientaux touchant la Procession du Saint-Esprit. L'auteur y fait appel à la plupart des Pères de l'Église grecque, dont il cite un bout de phrase ou un texte complet, mais il écarte à dessein toute citation empruntée aux Pères de l'Occident. Marc déclare avec morgue ne pas les connaître, puisqu'ils ont écrit en latin, comme si les Grecs n'avaient pas l'habitude d'écrire en grec; il ajoute que si leurs textes sont favorables à la thèse latine, c'est qu'ils ont été falsifiés par les Latins. Et voilà! Ce n'est pas plus compliqué que cela! Bien que composée au cours des orageuses délibérations particulières tenues par les Grecs durant les mois de mai et de juin 1439, cette profession de foi ne fut rendue publique qu'après le retour en Orient de l'archevêque d'Éphèse. Un récent biographe de Marc, le moine Calliste Blastos, nous assure qu'elle fut prononcée à Ferrare, le 8 décembre, dans la XV^e session du concile¹. Rien, dans les sources que nous possédons, n'autorise pareille assertion².

Dans le n° XIV, Marc, après avoir rappelé en peu de mots l'origine et l'histoire du concile, expose les motifs qui l'empêchent d'accepter le décret d'union. Puis il s'en prend aux latinisants, unique cause, à son sens, du triste dénouement d'une assemblée inaugurée pourtant sous d'heureux auspices, au dire de ce bon apôtre. Mais les Orientaux eurent tôt fait, assure-t-il, de démasquer les arrière-pensées des Latins, et le concile eût lamentablement échoué, s'il ne s'était trouvé, parmi les Orientaux eux-mêmes, des traîtres à l'orthodoxie, qui s'étaient rangés, sous prétexte d'accommodements, du côté des Latins. Lui seul, déclare-t-il avec son ordinaire modestie, avait su résister à ce vertige de latinisme et défendre jusqu'au bout la bonne cause. Et il conjure le peuple de juger entre lui et ses adversaires. Cette pièce n'est en somme qu'une auto-apologie, une justification du rôle joué par l'auteur à Florence.

Le document XV est, comme le n° XIV, une circulaire à tous les fidèles orthodoxes pour les engager à rejeter le pacte de Florence. Marc y attaque principalement les partisans de Rome, devenus assez nombreux dans les îles, une fois que l'union y eut été officiellement promulguée, en juin et juillet 1440, par le nouveau patriarche Métrophane. Il met surtout en garde les orthodoxes contre un soi-disant stratagème des unionistes : à les entendre, le décret de Florence ne modifiait en rien les usages établis, et il n'y avait par suite aucune difficulté à l'accepter dans toute sa teneur. Marc n'épargne rien pour détruire, surtout par le ridicule, cette manière de voir, et le tableau qu'il trace des prétendues contradictions des unionistes ne manque pas de verve. Il est fâcheux pour lui que la cause qu'il défend soit si mauvaise! Surtout, dit-il, pas de faux accommodement, pas de situation ambiguë, pas de transaction. Les Latins ne sont pas seulement des schismatiques, mais des hérétiques de la pire espèce; on doit les fuir comme la peste. Et il énumère les divergences dogmatiques et rituelles, qui constituent à ses yeux autant d'hérésies formelles. D'après le professeur Diamantopoulos, cette lettre aurait été écrite par Marc durant son exil à Lemnos, quelques mois après son retour en Orient¹. La chose n'est pas impossible, mais c'est une pure hypothèse. Il est bien question, au début du document, de captivité, mais ce n'est qu'une réminiscence historique, une simple allusion à la captivité de Babylone, comme la suite de la période le laisse clairement entendre.

2. Un Typicon manuscrit daté de 1444 et conservé aujourd'hui aux Archives Nationales d'Athènes, contient, à la suite de la profession de foi de Marc, de curieux chapitres, comme il les nomme, où le bouillant controversiste a condensé, à l'usage de l'empereur, sa manière de voir touchant l'union avec Rome et les difficultés dogmatiques qu'elle soulevait. Le dernier chapitre en particulier est comme une ébauche de notre n° XIII. À ce titre, le morceau eût mérité de figurer ici, à la suite de la profession de foi. Malheureusement, le texte en est si defectueux qu'il convient d'attendre, pour l'utiliser, une autre copie. Le lecteur pourra s'en faire une idée par le début (à peine un tiers) publié par A. Papadopoulos-Kerameus, dans l'Annuaire du Parnasse d'Athènes, t. VIII (in-8°, 1906), p. 22-23.

A côté des ouvrages généraux, traités didactiques ou lettres circulaires, composés par Marc contre le concile de Florence, notre recueil présente plusieurs lettres particulières de l'archevêque d'Éphèse relatives au même sujet. Le nombre n'en est pas considérable, mais elles ne manquent pas d'intérêt. Marc s'y montre, comme partout, adversaire irréductible de l'union, mais en termes plus modérés ou moins redondants, comme il sied au caractère d'intimité que doit présenter toute correspondance personnelle.

La plus importante de toutes est publiée sous le n° XVI; elle a pour destinataire le fameux Georges Scholarios, secrétaire impérial, dont nous aurons à nous occuper longuement dans la suite de la présente collection. A Florence, Scholarios avait pris rang parmi les modérés, ou, pour mieux dire, parmi les résignés. Tenant l'union pour une impérieuse nécessité politique, il avait prononcé une exhortation et trois discours remarquables, pour inviter ses compatriotes à la subir, comme une combinazione, un accommodement inéluctable. Il a plu à certains critiques modernes de nier l'authenticité de ces discours, lus par Scholarios, non en séance publique, mais dans ces réunions particulières que tenaient les Orientaux, presque chaque jour, tantôt chez l'empereur, tantôt chez le patriarche. Mais ces critiques ont tort, à moins de faire table rase des multiples témoignages des manuscrits, dont quelques-uns ont été écrits du vivant même de Scholarios. Nous avons aussi comme preuve subsidiaire la formule transactionnelle proposée par lui pour mettre fin au débat relatif à la Procession du Saint-Esprit, formule qui répond bien à l'inspiration générale des trois discours. Voici enfin la lettre de Marc, d'une indiscutable authenticité, et qui n'aurait aucun sens, si Scholarios n'avait gardé, même après son retour à Constantinople, une attitude réservée, plutôt conciliante. Et s'il fallait une dernière preuve après tant d'autres, nous la trouverions dans la réponse de Scholarios, conçue en termes très vifs, par laquelle il essaie de se justifier auprès de Marc. Au dire de Renaudot, c'est à Florence même que Marc aurait adressé à Scholarios la lettre qui nous occupe. C'est une erreur. Comme le prouve la suscription du manuscrit de la Laurentienne, c'est après son départ clandestin pour Éphèse que Marc écrivit à son ami cette véhémement objurgation. Et comme, au rapport de Syropoulos¹, Marc avait quitté subrepticement la capitale le jour même de la Pentecôte (15 mai) de l'an 1440, pour gagner Brousse d'abord, puis Éphèse, c'est de l'été 1440 qu'il faut dater cette lettre, dont on ne saurait méconnaître, malgré la détestable cause qu'elle défend, l'élevation du style et la profondeur du sentiment.

Après avoir reproché à Scholarios ses moyens termes, ses biais dans la question de l'union, comme s'il pouvait y avoir de milieu entre la vérité et le mensonge, Marc continue : « Tu t'es laissé prendre par l'appât de la vaine gloire, des richesses mensongères, des beaux et magnifiques vêtements et de tous les autres avantages qui forment la félicité de ce monde. Hélas! hélas! quels sentiments indignes d'un philosophe! Regarde derrière toi, et vois ceux qui, avant toi, se sont glorifiés de semblables honneurs! Demain tu descendras toi aussi aux enfers, laissant tout cela sur la terre. Mais de tous tes actes il te sera demandé un compte exact, de même qu'on demandera compte à ce prétendu synode du sang des âmes qu'il aura perdues, de tous ceux qui ont éprouvé un scandale dans le mystère de la foi, qui ont blasphémé sans excuse contre le Saint-Esprit, qui osent rapporter son existence à deux principes, qui se sont laissé entraîner à accepter les coutumes de perdition et d'impiété des Latins, de ceux qui ont attiré sur leur propre tête la malédiction et l'anathème pour avoir changé de dogme. » Il y a ici une calomnie évidente : le formulaire même de l'acte d'union porte que le Saint-Esprit procède du Père et du Fils comme d'une seule cause et d'un seul principe.

Que si Scholarios affecte de ne voir dans l'union conclue qu'un moyen de protéger et d'affermir la nation, Marc riposte sur un ton sarcastique : « Rien de plus vrai, en effet : ne vois-tu pas les ennemis de la foi mis en fuite, et l'un des nôtres chasser mille ennemis, deux des nôtres en disperser dix mille? Si Dieu ne garde notre cité, c'est en vain qu'ils veillent, ceux qui la défendent avec les écus d'or du pape. » — Et il termine par cette exhortation : « Courage donc : c'est le moment de te transformer toi-même. Laisse les morts ensevelir leurs morts. Laisse à César ce qui est à César. Rends à Dieu une âme qu'il a lui-même créée et dotée. Réfléchis de quels grands biens tu lui es redevable ;

rends-lui la reconnaissance qui lui est due. Mais surtout, mon ami, toi qui es si sage, fais que je puisse me réjouir de toi et rendre gloire à Dieu pour toi, et puisse-t-il te conserver toujours à l'abri de toute faute! »

Marc l'avait pris de haut avec Scholarios. La réponse de ce dernier ne se fit pas attendre. On la lira plus loin sous le n° XVII. Nous ne pouvions l'omettre ici, bien qu'elle ne fût pas de Marc lui-même, à cause de son étroite connexité avec le document dont il vient d'être question. Ne retenant de la lettre de Marc que les griefs personnels, Scholarios riposte du tac au tac, et il est difficile de dire laquelle de ces deux lettres est la moins hautaine, laquelle respire moins de dédaigneuse fatuité. Jugeant son amour-propre blessé, Scholarios, comme il sied à un incompris, s'engage à ne plus se mêler de théologie ni de controverse, sauf dans l'intimité, entre amis. Serment de joueur, qui sera fréquemment renouvelé dans la suite, et jamais tenu. Nous en verrons la preuve dans un des derniers documents du présent fascicule.

Bien distinct de Scholarios, malgré l'assertion de certains auteurs, est le prêtre Georges, à qui est adressée la lettre du n° XVIII. Marc y condamne, avec son étroitesse ordinaire, l'emploi par les Latins du pain azyme comme matière eucharistique. Incidemment, il y glisse contre ses adversaires de perfides insinuations, voire des assertions saugrenues, sur leur façon de célébrer la messe, de se tenir à l'église, de se raser la barbe : toutes choses constituant, aux yeux de ce fanatique intransigeant, d'irrémissibles prévarications. Tel Épimévide sortant de sa caverne, l'Oriental, au séculaire sommeil, demeure tout ébahi quand il rencontre des usages différents des siens, et, sous ce rapport, Marc d'Éplèse est bien le type le plus accompli de sa race. Un catholique de Méthone ayant eu connaissance de cette lettre, l'envoya à André, archevêque de Rhodes, l'un des adversaires de Marc au concile. André prit la peine de réfuter ce petit factum dans un long dialogue en latin, déjà signalé par Allatius, mais encore inédit, contrairement à l'assertion de Démétracopoulos, qui a dû mal comprendre le latin d'Allatius ou de Fabricius. L'ouvrage d'André est conservé dans le Palatinus latin 604.

Le post-scriptum de la lettre à Georges de Méthone permet de dater approximativement ce document. Il a été composé en 1440 ou 1441, à l'époque où la lutte contre l'union de Florence était déjà engagée à Constantinople, mais n'avait pas encore pris de grandes proportions.

C'est également vers le même temps qu'il convient de placer la rédaction de notre n° XIX. Le manuscrit de Vienne qui nous l'a conservé, ne contient, en guise de titre, que ces simples mots : Μάρκου πρὸς τὸν οἰκουµενικόν. Et un ancien bibliothécaire, Tengnagel, observe dans une note marginale que ce Marc est peut-être l'archevêque d'Éphèse. Cette hypothèse se change en certitude, si l'on a soin de rapprocher la finale de la lettre au patriarche de la dernière ligne de la Profession de foi de Marc : de part et d'autre il y a identité, non seulement de pensée, mais encore d'expression. Marc qui aime partout à se répéter, s'est ici copié lui-même. Quant au destinataire, on ne peut l'identifier qu'avec Métrophane de Cyzique, élu patriarche le 4 mai 1440 et mort le 1^{er} août 1443. A défaut d'allusion permettant de préciser davantage, il est permis de supposer que cette lettre date des débuts du patriarcat de Métrophane, c'est-à-dire d'une époque où l'attitude du nouveau chef de l'Église pouvait encore prêter à l'équivoque et provoquer les exhortations à la résistance que Marc lui adresse de sa lointaine résidence. C'est donc au second semestre de l'année 1440 que nous assignerons, jusqu'à plus ample informé, cette trop courte missive.

De la lettre placée sous le n° XX, il y a peu de chose à dire, car elle ne nous fournit aucun élément de contrôle, aucune allusion historique, hormis le désir exprimé par Marc d'aller rejoindre les moines de Vatopédi. La pensée de les voir bientôt et de partager leur vie le remplissait de joie; mais voilà que Satan, le perpétuel envieux, jaloux du bonheur qu'il allait goûter, l'oblige d'interrompre son voyage. Cette réflexion nous reporte naturellement à l'époque où Marc, rebuté par le mauvais accueil d'Éphèse, éprouvé par la maladie, découragé par l'attitude du nouveau patriarche, avait songé à se retirer dans les solitudes de l'Atlios. Et nous avons déjà dit que ceci s'applique fort bien au second semestre de l'an 1440 ou au début de l'année suivante.

Par une heureuse exception, le document n° XXI porte une date, celle du 16 juin, mais l'année n'est pas indiquée. J. Dräseke, dans son article sur Marc d'Éphèse¹, se prononce pour le 16 juin 1440, mais cette opinion n'est pas soutenable. On a vu plus haut que Marc s'enfuit de Constantinople le 15 mai 1440, jour de la Pentecôte, pour se rendre à Brousse, et de là gagner son diocèse par petites étapes, comme c'est encore l'usage aujourd'hui de voyager dans l'intérieur de l'Asie Mineure. Parvenu à destination, il y tombe malade, et, chose plus grave, il y est tracassé de mille manières par les Turcs, maîtres du pays, parce qu'il n'a pas en main le diplôme d'investiture de son archevêché. Abreuvé d'amertumes, il finit par s'en aller avec la pensée de se retirer au mont Athos. Il repasse donc la mer à Gallipoli; mais arrivé à Lemnos, il y est retenu prisonnier sur l'ordre de l'empereur. Telle est la longueur de cet itinéraire et la difficulté des communications, qu'il serait bien difficile, aujourd'hui encore, de faire tout ce trajet dans le court intervalle d'un mois (15 mai - 16 juin), comme le suppose Dräseke. La chose était encore plus malaisée au xv^e siècle, alors que les moyens de transport étaient plus rudimentaires que de nos jours, et le pays en état de guerre perpétuelle; et la maladie s'en étant mêlée, Marc subit encore de ce chef un repos forcé de plusieurs jours. Pour tous ces motifs, la date du 16 juin 1441 semble toute naturelle. Les événements auxquels Marc fait allusion au cours de sa lettre viennent encore confirmer cette hypothèse. L'élection et l'installation sur le siège d'Athènes d'un nouveau prélat favorable à l'union n'a pu avoir lieu qu'après la promulgation par Métrophane du pacte de Florence, et cette formalité fut accomplie durant les mois de juin et de juillet 1440 au moyen de circulaires aux fidèles, dont nous possédons encore deux exemplaires¹. Il a donc fallu à tous ces événements divers, d'abord le temps de s'accomplir, puis de parvenir, avec les inévitables lenteurs de l'époque, aux oreilles de Marc, dans sa solitude de Lemnos. Pour cette raison encore, la date du 16 juin 1440 me semble trop précoce.

De quel métropolitain d'Athènes s'agit-il dans la lettre de Marc? Feu Spiridion Lambros a cru en trouver le nom dans une lettre de Michel Kalophréas, dont il a publié le texte pour la première fois². Pour étayer sa thèse, il a mis en avant certains arguments, qui par malheur portent tous à faux. Kalophréas parle bien de son archevêque Fantinos; mais le titre même d'archevêque, et non de métropolitain, indique assez que l'auteur écrivait, non à Athènes, mais en Crète. Du reste, la circulaire de Métrophane, jointe à la lettre de Kalophréas dans le manuscrit de Londres utilisé par Lambros, est précisément adressée aux fidèles de Crète, et cette circonstance aurait dû donner l'éveil à un critique moins superficiel ou moins pressé que le directeur du Néos Hellénomnémon. Je ne suis pas en mesure pour le moment de fournir le nom du prélat visé par Marc; mieux vaut avouer son ignorance que d'encombrer l'histoire de personnages imaginaires.

La lettre n° XXII est d'une époque où Marc se trouvait à Constantinople. La question est de savoir si ce séjour dans la capitale de l'archevêque d'Éphèse coïncide avec son retour d'Italie ou avec son rappel de l'exil momentané de

Lenmos, Dräseke¹ et Diamantopoulos² se prononcent pour la première alternative, mais il m'est difficile de partager leur manière de voir. Rappelons d'abord les circonstances qui ont provoqué l'envoi de cette lettre. Un certain Théophane, moine de l'île d'Imbros, avait composé, comme tant d'autres, un petit traité contre l'union de Florence, qui nous a été conservé dans deux manuscrits : le n° 381 (347) fol. 59-68^r du monastère d'Iviron au mont Athos, et le n° 256 fol. 143-154^r de la bibliothèque royale de Munich. Dans les deux manuscrits, le traité proprement dit ou Synlogma est précédé d'une lettre à l'empereur déjà publiée par Mannel Gédéon d'après le manuscrit d'Iviron³. De plus, dans celui de Munich, on trouve, à la suite du traité, la lettre publiée plus loin sous le n° XXII. Théophane ayant prié l'archevêque d'Éphèse de mettre son traité sous les yeux de l'empereur, Marc lui répond que ce serait peine perdue. L'heure n'est plus, dit-il, aux paroles, mais à l'action. Et il parle en termes d'une extrême violence du nouveau patriarche, loup dévorant, et non pasteur des âmes. Cette allusion, à mon sens, date le document. Contrairement à l'opinion de Dräseke, qui en fixe la composition en 1440, entre l'Ascension et la Pentecôte, j'estime que Marc a dû l'écrire lors de l'avènement au patriarcat de Grégoire le Protosyncelle. Il y est question, d'une part, d'une récente élection patriarcale, dont le choix est tombé sur un prélat entièrement dévoué à l'union avec Rome, prélat « mercenaire et non berger, loup et non pasteur »; et il semble, d'autre part, que le nouveau patriarche devait être assez jeune pour que Marc ait pu lui appliquer le mot de Jéhovah dans Isaïe : Δόσω νεολέουτος ἄγγελος ἰσθῶν. Ces paroles, à mon avis, ne peuvent guère convenir au vieux Métrophane de Cyzique. En outre, si l'on admet la date de 1440 proposée par Dräseke, l'intervalle écoulé entre le retour dans la capitale des membres du concile (1^{er} février) et la fuite clandestine de Marc (15 mai), paraît bien étroit pour que Théophane ait eu le temps de composer son traité, de l'envoyer à Marc, et d'obtenir de ce dernier la réponse qui nous occupe. Et puis, n'avons-nous pas déjà une autre lettre de Marc, celle du n° XIX, adressée à Métrophane lui-même? Marc n'a pu s'exprimer simultanément, sur un même personnage, en termes si différents. Tout porte donc à croire que le patriarche visé dans la lettre n° XXII n'est autre que Grégoire le Protosyncelle.

Mais s'il en est ainsi, une autre difficulté se présente, celle de l'élection de ce même Grégoire. Peu d'événements ont donné lieu à plus de controverse. Le Quien, suivi encore par le P. Pierling⁴, place cette élection en 1446; Gédéon, Tryphon Évangélidès et Krumbacher la ramènent en 1443, tandis qu'Allatius, les Bollandistes, Fromman, Dräseke, Papaïoannou et la plupart des historiens modernes, conformément au témoignage de Phrantzès, la fixent en 1445¹. Phrantzès est un contemporain, sans doute, mais ce n'est qu'en 1477 qu'il écrivit sa Chronique. Son témoignage ne peut donc être accepté sans contrôle, et certaines autres données nous obligent à reporter au moins en 1444 l'élection du nouveau patriarche. Voici pourquoi.

Le manuscrit 127 du Pantocrator, au mont Athos, contient, du folio 212 au folio 342, le premier traité de Scholarios sur la Procession du Saint-Esprit². Au bas du folio 212 on lit cette intéressante note de la main même de Scholarios : Τοῦτό ἐστι τῶν πρὸς Λατίνους τὸ πρῶτον καὶ δεῦτερον γὰρ καὶ τρίτον τῶ αὐτῷ συγγράμματα ἕτερα : — Puis, un peu plus bas, toujours de la même main, mais avec une autre encre, cette seconde note : Συνεγράφη τούτου, ὁπότι ἔτσι πρὸ τῆς ἀλώσεως : τριὰ δὲ ἔτσι πρὸ τῆς ἀλώσεως ἐγένετο Γεννάδιος μοναχός : ~ C'est donc, au témoignage de l'auteur lui-même, huit ans avant la prise de Constantinople, c'est-à-dire en 1444-1445, que fut composé ce premier ouvrage.

On peut encore préciser davantage. Nous possédons du même Scholarios un petit traité adressé sous forme de lettre à Jean Basilikos à propos d'un texte de Théodore Graptos (Nicéphore le Patriarche). Migne l'a reproduit d'après l'édition du patriarche Dosithée, qui est horriblement tronquée; mais le Coislin 101 de la Bibliothèque nationale de Paris en contient une excellente copie exécutée par Silvestre Syropoulos au mois d'août 1445 : ἐτελειώθη τὸ πρῶτον βιβλίον δὲ χειρὸς τοῦ μεγάλου ἐκκλησιασάρχου τῆς ἀρχιεπισκοπῆς τοῦ θεοῦ μεγάλου ἐκκλησιαστικάρχου Σιλβέστρου τοῦ Συροπολίτου ἐν ἔτει ς' μ' π' κ' γ' μ' κ' αὐτῷ ἐνοικτωσίῳ ὁδοιπορίας ὁδοῦ. Or, dans un passage qui se lit au folio 286, Scholarios renvoie expressément à ses deux ouvrages antérieurs sur la Procession du Saint-Esprit : ὡς γὰρ ἔστι λέγειν τε καὶ ἐλέγχειν, ὃ δὴ καὶ ἔρχόντως ἐν ταῖς δεσφ. βιβλίαις ἡμῶν ἐκπεπνίται. Et comme le Coislin 101 n'est pas l'original de Scholarios, mais une copie, force nous est de reporter la composition de l'original lui-même au plus tard en juillet 1445. Par suite, les deux livres précédents, qui sont fort étendus, ne peuvent avoir été composés que dans le premier semestre de l'an 1445, et même, en ce qui concerne le premier, que durant l'automne de 1444. En remontant jusqu'au second semestre de 1444, nous restons d'accord avec les huit années indiquées par Scholarios; on ne doit pas oublier, en effet, que l'année commençait à Constantinople au mois de septembre. La huitième année avant la

2. Le titre exact, donné par Scholarios lui-même, est celui-ci : Περὶ τῆς ἐκπορεύσεως τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ἐν τριῶσιν ἔξ. Celui de Ὁρθόδοξου καταφύγιον, que porte ce traité dans la très défectueuse édition de Nicodème Métaξas, parue à Constantinople ou à Londres vers 1627, est de l'invention d'un copiste chiôte, comme la preuve en sera fournie ailleurs, au moment où nous publierons les ouvrages de Scholarios contre le concile de Florence.

Prise s'était donc ouverte le 1^{er} septembre 1444. Mais pourquoi remonter si haut? C'est que les deux ouvrages n'ont pas été écrits d'un seul trait, et un intervalle assez considérable a dû s'écouler entre la rédaction du premier traité et celle du second. En voici la raison. Jean Comnène, empereur de Trébizonde, ayant entendu parler du premier ouvrage, voulut en avoir une copie qu'il demanda à l'auteur, et celui-ci, au lieu de la lui envoyer, préféra composer un nouvel ouvrage mieux approprié à la compétence théologique de l'auguste destinataire. Pour tous ces motifs, dont la gravité n'échappera à personne, nous sommes ramenés à l'automne de 1444 pour la composition du premier traité.

Ce point une fois acquis, rappelons les circonstances qui ont donné naissance à ce premier ouvrage. Ici encore nous avons l'inappréciable avantage de pouvoir citer Scholarios lui-même. Son témoignage est enregistré dans une courte introduction placée, dans plusieurs manuscrits, en tête du traité. Renaudot l'a déjà publiée d'après le Parisinus 1290¹. L'original de cette intéressante préface, écrit de la propre main de Scholarios, se trouve dans la marge supérieure et latérale du manuscrit 330 du monastère de Dionysion, au mont Athos, où j'ai eu la bonne fortune de le rencontrer. Ça et là, le texte diffère de celui de Paris, car il s'agit d'un premier jet, transformé ensuite en une formule plus conforme à la syntaxe; mais le fond est identique. Voici donc le libellé du manuscrit de Dionysion, tel qu'il se lit au folio 67 :

à Modon le 17 juillet, et en était reparti le 20 pour Constantinople, où il prolongea son séjour jusqu'à l'automne de 1445. Enfin le patriarche Grégoire est l'ancien protosynecelle. Mais si celui-ci assistait aux conférences comme patriarche, on ne peut plus retenir la date donnée par Phrantzès pour son élévation au patriarcat. Nous avons, en effet, établi plus haut que le premier livre sur la Procession du Saint-Esprit avait dû être composé, au plus tard, au début de 1445, mais plus probablement à la fin de 1444; et comme ce traité est postérieur aux conférences, dont il résume la discussion, il faut placer celles-ci, au plus tard, durant l'automne de 1444. A moins donc de supposer, contre toute vraisemblance, que Scholarios ait donné à Grégoire le titre de patriarche par anticipation, il faut nécessairement en placer l'élection durant l'été de 1444. Je dis durant l'été, puisque Phrantzès indique cette circonstance. Au fait, à y regarder de près, le texte de Phrantzès peut parfaitement s'accommoder de notre synchronisme. Quand il mentionne l'élection de Grégoire, c'est après avoir parlé de la bataille de Varna, qu'il place sous l'année du monde 6953, laquelle va du 1^{er} septembre 1444 au 31 août 1445; et comme la bataille de Varna eut lieu le 9 novembre, l'année 6953 correspond, pour ce grave événement, à 1444. Une fois le récit de la bataille terminé, Phrantzès ajoute : Durant l'été de la même année etc. En toute rigueur de style, c'est bien de l'année 1445 qu'il devrait parler, l'été de 6953 correspondant en réalité à 1445. Mais rappelons-nous que Phrantzès écrivait en 1477, à Corfou, au milieu des Latins qui avaient une autre manière de compter; il a fort bien pu, dans un cas donné, se conformer à la façon de parler en usage autour de lui. Par suite, les mots durant l'été de la même année, venant après le récit d'un événement arrivé le 9 novembre 1444, pouvaient, dans l'esprit de Phrantzès, se rapporter à l'été de 1444. Quoi qu'il en soit, les synchronismes fournis par Scholarios nous obligent à placer en 1444, au plus tard, l'élection de Grégoire le Protosynecelle. Ajoutons une autre considération. L'empereur était sûrement prévenu de la prochaine arrivée du légat pontifical et du cardinal-neveu Condulmer, celui-ci ayant quitté Sienne, pour sa légation d'Orient, dès le 10 juin 1443. Il n'aura sans doute pas voulu que cette extraordinaire mission se trouvât, à son arrivée dans la capitale de l'empire, en face d'un siège patriarcal vide. L'année 1444, requise pour tous ces motifs, est d'ailleurs indiquée par un catalogue des patriarches postérieurs au concile de Florence¹. C'est donc pareillement en 1444 que se placera la rédaction de notre n^o XXII.

Nous nous sommes étendu un peu longuement sur cet événement, non seulement parce qu'il devait nous servir à dater le n^o XXII, mais surtout parce qu'il nous permet de mieux fixer la chronologie des derniers jours de Marc d'Éphèse, et par suite du n° XXIII, qui est comme le testament spirituel de l'irréconciliable ennemi de l'union avec Rome.

1. Byz. Zeitschrift, t. VIII (1899), p. 397.

En quelle année Marc est-il mort? Certainement avant le mois d'août 1445. Dans l'opuscule de Scholarios copié par Syropoulos à cette date, et composé, ainsi qu'il a été dit plus haut, en juillet 1445 au plus tard, Marc est déjà mentionné comme mort dans un passage du Coislin 101 fol. 286, qui se rencontre également dans l'édition de Migne¹. Et comme on sait, d'autre part, que le grand champion de l'orthodoxie mourut un 23 juin, la date du 23 juin 1445 est-elle admissible? C'est celle à laquelle s'est arrêté dernièrement M^{re} Giovanni Mercati, l'érudit préfet de la Bibliothèque Vaticane, dans ses remarquables *Appunti Scolariani*². Je ne puis, en ce qui me concerne, me ranger à cet avis, et je n'ai, pour justifier cette attitude, qu'à reprendre un argument de M^{re} Mercati lui-même. Comme il le fait observer avec juste raison, les dernières paroles de Marc d'Éphèse et la réponse qu'y fait Scholarios donnent clairement à entendre que celui-ci n'avait jusqu'alors ni écrit ni discuté en public en faveur de la foi dite orthodoxe.

Par suite, la mort de Marc est antérieure à la composition du premier traité sur la Procession du Saint-Esprit, c'est-à-dire à l'automne de 1444. D'autre part, Grégoire le Protosynecelle occupait déjà le trône patriarcal quand l'archevêque d'Éphèse rendit le dernier soupir, puisque, dans le discours suprême qu'il prononça sur son lit de mort, celui-ci écarte résolument de son convoi funèbre toute participation de Grégoire et des siens. Grégoire, il est vrai, n'est pas nommé, mais il s'agit évidemment de lui. Nous voilà, de ce fait, ramenés à l'été 1444, époque, on l'a vu, de l'avènement de Grégoire. Est-il possible de remonter jusqu'en 1443? Non sans doute, si, comme nous l'avons dit, le patriarche visé par Marc dans son discours suprême ne peut être Métrophane, car ce dernier, au témoignage de Syropoulos, n'est mort que le 1^{er} août 1443, c'est-à-dire postérieurement au 23 juin, jour de la mort de Marc. Et d'ailleurs on concevrait difficilement que le même Syropoulos, à qui nous devons la date de la mort de Métrophane, n'eût rien dit de celle de son héros préféré, Marc d'Éphèse, si celle-ci avait précédé celle-là. Tel est aussi l'avis de M^{re} Mercati. Il ne faudrait pourtant pas appuyer trop fort sur cet argument. Ainsi, l'arrivée à Constantinople, vers la fin de juillet 1444, du cardinal Condulmer, se trouve enregistrée dans l'ouvrage de Syropoulos, et M^{re} Mercati en tire précisément la preuve que Marc n'a pu non plus mourir en 1444. Mais on a vu plus haut, par les notes autographes de Scholarios, que cette date de 1444, celle de 1443 une fois écartée, est la seule possible. Syropoulos ne signale pas davantage l'élection de Grégoire le Protosynelle au patriarcat, élection qui a dû cependant, comme nous l'avons observé tout à l'heure, précéder l'arrivée dans la capitale byzantine du cardinal Condulmer. Ces spécieuses difficultés, tirées de l'histoire de Syropoulos, s'évanouissent d'elles-mêmes, si l'on veut bien se souvenir que la mission de Condulmer est rappelée par Syropoulos dans un dernier chapitre qui ne fait pas partie de l'histoire proprement dite, mais où l'auteur résume, en une série de considérants, les causes qui ont fait échouer à Constantinople l'union promulguée à Florence. Il est clair que la mort de Marc ne pouvait figurer parmi les motifs invoqués.

Contre cette même date de 1444 pour la mort de Marc, M^{sr} Mercati met en avant un dernier argument : Marc a composé un ouvrage sur les évêques, qui date précisément de cette même année 1444, comme le prouvent les exemples empruntés à l'année en cours. J'ai consulté à mon tour ce traité encore inédit. Marc y parle, en effet, à deux reprises de l'année courante, 6952 du monde, 1444 de J.-C., mais en se servant chaque fois du mot ἐπιστήμιον ἔτος, l'année commençante. Il a donc composé son opuscule durant les premiers mois de cette même année, et le renseignement, pour précieux qu'il soit, ne nous oblige nullement à descendre, pour la mort de Marc, jusqu'en 1445. L'année 1444 semble donc, pour tous ces motifs réunis, la seule plausible.

Quant au jour même de cette mort, à savoir le 23 juin, nous n'aurions de motif pour l'écarter que si nous devions prendre à la lettre un passage de saint Antonin de Florence. Au dire du saint évêque, Barthélemy de Florence, c'est-à-dire Lapacci, évêque de Coron (sic!), s'étant rendu à Constantinople avec le cardinal-légat vénitien (évidemment Condulmer), y fit un long séjour, durant lequel, par ordre de l'empereur, il eut une discussion publique avec Marc d'Éphèse. Celui-ci eut le dessous, et le chagrin que lui causa sa défaite fut tel, qu'il en mourut quelques jours après. Le renseignement, dont on ne peut suspecter l'authenticité, ne manque pas d'être embarrassant, si l'on songe que le 23 juin 1444, Condulmer était encore à Venise.

On pourrait tourner la difficulté en supposant que saint Antonin a fait erreur. Par le fait, Barthélemy de Florence ne devint évêque de Coron qu'en juin 1449. Au moment de la mission de Condulmer, le titulaire de Coron était Christophe Garatoni, non moins célèbre que Barthélemy, et tout aussi connu des Byzantins, puisqu'il avait tenu la chancellerie de Venise à Constantinople dès 1423. Le texte de saint Antonin présente donc un lapsus manifeste. Toute la question est de savoir si ce lapsus affecte le nom du prélat ou celui de l'évêché. Je suis persuadé, pour ma part, qu'Antonin a voulu parler de Christophe Garatoni, envoyé à Constantinople comme légat pontifical dès 1440, et aux instigations duquel Métrophane avait fait proclamer l'union dans les diverses provinces relevant de l'autorité de Venise. Dans cette hypothèse, le texte de saint Antonin ne ferait plus difficulté; mais j'avoue que l'amendement proposé devrait d'abord être vérifié sur les manuscrits, chose que je ne suis pas en mesure de faire. Si le texte authentique de la Chronique porte réellement Corouensis, saint Antonin a voulu parler de Garatoni, et rien n'empêche dès lors de fixer la mort de Marc au 23 juin 1444.

Avec la leçon Cortonensis, il faut, au contraire, appliquer le passage de saint Antonin à Barthélemy Lapacei, dont l'arrivée dans la capitale est postérieure au 23 juin 1444. Quoi qu'il en soit, en présence du témoignage de Scholarios, il est impossible de descendre au-dessous de 1444. Cette dernière date est donc celle qui présente le plus de vraisemblance, et nous la retiendrons, jusqu'à ce qu'un élément nouveau vienne apporter à ce petit problème d'histoire une solution définitive.

Ainsi se trouve fixée, au moins provisoirement, la chronologie de notre n° XXIII. La scène que nous présente ce document ne manque pas, en soi, de grandeur. Marc est sur le point de mourir. Toute sa vie, il a lutté pour le triomphe de ses idées; mais au moment de disparaître, il se demande avec angoisse qui va désormais porter le drapeau de l'orthodoxie. Parmi tous ceux qui l'entourent, il ne voit qu'un homme capable de mener le combat à sa place, et cet homme, c'est Georges Scholarios. Il fait donc appel à son dévouement, et le supplie en termes émus de ne point faillir à la tâche qui lui incombe. Renonçant alors à sa politique de transaction, Scholarios accepte. « Toujours, dit-il, en s'adressant au mourant, je me suis comporté envers Ta Sainteté comme un fils et comme un disciple, et ton propre témoignage me prouve bien que tu n'en doutes pas... Que si quelquefois je n'ai pas pris part ouvertement aux combats que tu livrais toi-même, je passerai sous silence les raisons qui m'ont fait agir ainsi, car personne ne les connaît mieux que Ta Sainteté. Bien souvent, je t'ai avoué avec confiance quelles avaient été alors mes dispositions d'esprit; je t'en ai demandé pardon, et tu m'as pardonné. Mais, avec le secours de Dieu, je renonce désormais à ces sentiments, je me déclare publiquement le champion le plus sincère de la vérité, et je prêcherai sans aucune dissimulation, selon le vœu de Ta Sainteté, les dogmes de nos pères et la vérité de la foi orthodoxe. »

Marc était rassuré : le flambeau de l'orthodoxie ne s'éteindrait pas après lui, les mains qui le recevaient de lui étaient capables de le porter. Ainsi, sa dernière parole aura été une parole de haine contre l'union avec Rome; et sa consolation suprême, que cette haine se perpétuerait après lui. Et il mourut le 23 juin, après quatorze jours d'atroces souffrances causées par l'iléus ou « lésion intestinale, au rapport de son frère, Jean Eugénikos, qui décrit ainsi ses derniers moments : « Il fut malade pendant quatorze jours. Cette maladie, disait-il lui-même, produisait sur lui absolument le même effet que ces instruments de torture en fer appliqués par les bourreaux aux saints martyrs, instruments qui entouraient leurs flancs et leurs entrailles, les pressuraient et y demeuraient attachés, leur causant d'insupportables douleurs. Ainsi, semble-t-il, ce qui manquait de la part des hommes à ce corps de saint et d'athlète, la maladie l'accomplissait, par un jugement ineffable de la divine Providence. » Il ne manque à cette énergique description que le nom technique de la maladie. Un italien de Brescia, Hubertin Pasculo, qui vécut à Constantinople au temps de Marc d'Éphèse, fait écho au frère de ce dernier, et raconte la mort du prélat en quelques vers qui valent d'être cités, leur édition étant d'accès difficile¹. Le passage en question se trouve au second chant de la Constantinopolis :

Haeresis et princeps Marcus manifesta rependit Supplicia, exemplum cunctis. Nam putrida vivus Pectore concepta ut mendacia fuderat olim Foeda nefasque omne tetro eructaverat ore, Sic moriens, quibus ora suus delluxus ad una Ventris erat corrupta vomit per pectus anhelum Mansa, et sic stomachi tetro internectus odore est.
 O vere immemores Graii! o virtutis inanes!
 Non igitur clarum vobis pro crimine poenam Infando hanc habuisse fuit; non terruit et te, Constantina polis, genus hoc dum videras horrens Mortis inauditae? Christi infensissimus hostis Impius et pestis mundi, mysteria contra Crimina commentus fidei, dum perstat, et acri Audacique nimis verbo convellere certat Arius fundata Dei incommota potenti Fundamenta manu, verae sanctaeque per orbem Religioni inhians, Christum dum pernegat ipsum Esse Deum, fusa effluxerunt viscera tota, Et corpus vacuum mansit vitalibus, ut quis Infandum usque imum reserata per ora videret, Quem natura dedit cursu tamen hauriit alvum.
 Hic contra horribili poena, quod sumpserat ore Per multosque dies victum revocavit ab alvo Corruptum, vomuitque animam tetrum inter odorem.

Ces témoignages concordants de deux auteurs contemporains, dont l'un est le propre frère de Marc, nous dispensent de justifier Joseph de Méthone d'avoir fait état du caractère de cette maladie dans sa polémique contre l'archévêque d'Ephèse¹. Libre à chacun d'y voir ou non un châtiment du ciel, mais la maladie elle-même n'a été inventée ni par Joseph de Méthone ni par les catholiques, comme certains écrivains orthodoxes se plaisent encore à le répéter. En soi, l'orthodoxie constituerait-elle une immunité contre les atteintes de l'occlusion intestinale?

Le lecteur ne trouvera point, dans le présent fascicule, certains ouvrages de Mare, que leurs titres appelleraient à y figurer. Ces titres, les voici d'après Fabricius, reproduit par Migne² :

a) Apologia de fuga sua; — b) Contra encyclicam Bessarionis; — c) Antirrheticum contra Andream Colossensem. Or ces trois ouvrages, il faut le dire bien haut, n'ont jamais existé ailleurs que dans l'imagination ardente et féconde d'un faussaire érètois, Nicolas Comnène Papadopoli, dont les Praenotiones mystagogicae forment un salmigondis de textes fabriqués pour les besoins de telle ou telle thèse avec une rare effronterie. Que de savants, durant plus de trois siècles, s'y sont laissé prendre, et, de nos jours encore, cet imposant in-folio continue à faire des dupes dans les milieux où l'on aime les travaux tout faits et les textes accommodés à point. Hergenrother lui-même mentionne gravement ces trois ouvrages parmi les sources à consulter pour l'histoire du concile de Florence, et il laisse entendre qu'il les a rencontrés. Où donc? Dans la liste dressée par Fabricius, peut-être, mais assurément pas ailleurs, et je mets au défi n'importe quel conservateur de manuscrits de nous montrer l'un ou l'autre de ces prétendus écrits, que Papadopoli est le premier à signaler, parce qu'il est le premier à en avoir inventé les titres et les quelques lignes qu'il en cite, pour donner le change, avec cet art consommé de la fraude littéraire, que nul n'a possédé au même degré. Quant à l'Epilogus adversus Latinos, cité également par Fabricius, c'est à dessein que nous l'avons écarté; ce n'est qu'un extrait d'un grand discours prononcé par Mare en plein concile et reproduit in extenso dans les Acta. Nous le retrouverons donc dans l'édition critique des Acta, que nous comptons bien donner un jour, car leur texte présente des problèmes littéraires encore insoupçonnés.

Démétracopoulos³ attribue encore à Mare d'Ephèse un traité inédit sur la Procession du Saint-Esprit, et il en donne l'incipit suivant d'après le n° 280 de la Bibliothèque impériale de Vienne : Καὶ τὴ τὴν ὡς ἀληθῶς καὶ ἀλόγιστος, ἦν ἰσομεν ἐν τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι πνεύματι πνεύματι. Je possède une copie de cette incubration d'après un manuscrit de l'ATHOS, et je dois dire, après l'avoir lue, qu'elle ne présente aucun des caractères des autres œuvres de Mare. Elle est d'ailleurs anonyme dans le manuscrit de Vienne, et son attribution à l'archevêque d'Éphèse est une pure hypothèse. Démétracopoulos lui-même l'avait enregistrée, un peu plus haut¹, sous le nom de Nicétas Choniates, avec une légère variante dans le titre², qui ne suffit pas pour nous faire douter de l'identité des deux copies. Aussi ne pouvions-nous la comprendre parmi les œuvres anticonciliaires de Marc.

Notre fascicule se termine par un traité souvent mentionné, et parfois vanté par certains historiens, qui ne l'ont assurément jamais lu. Je veux parler de l'œuvre de Manuel le Grand Rhéteur Sur Marc métropolitain d'Éphèse et le concile de Florence et contre Gémiste et Bessarion. Peut-être la lecture de cette élucubration laissera-t-elle quelque déception, car elle donne bien moins que ne semble promettre le titre. C'est à peine si la biographie de Marc et l'histoire du concile y sont ébauchées. Aussitôt le premier feuillet tourné, on est tout surpris de se trouver en face d'une virulente diatribe contre Pléthon et Bessarion. Passe encore pour Pléthon, dont le christianisme laissait fort à désirer; mais traiter Bessarion d'impie, d'athée, de païen endurci, à propos de quelques lignes écrites dans le goût des humanistes du temps, voilà qui surprendra certainement plus d'un lecteur.

En dépit de cette fâcheuse impression, j'ai tenu à comprendre dans ce recueil l'ouvrage de Manuel, d'abord pour épargner aux historiens de l'avenir d'inutiles regrets sur l'impossibilité de le consulter, et aussi parce que, tout compte fait, ce traité constitue un curieux échantillon de la controverse théologique aux xv^e et xvi^e siècles. Pour ne rien dire du fond même du débat, qu'il n'y a pas lieu d'examiner ici, on trouve chez Manuel un emploi fréquent de la Somme contre les Gentils de saint Thomas d'Aquin, que l'auteur n'aura sans doute pas consultée de première main, mais par l'intermédiaire de son maître préféré, Georges Scholarios, dont il s'est approprié sans scrupule des pages entières. D'ailleurs, le nom de saint Thomas ne se rencontre jamais sous sa plume, non plus que celui de Scholarios.

Un autre sujet d'étonnement, pour qui consultera l'opuscule de Manuel dans la recension du manuscrit de Paris, c'est son étrange façon de traiter les textes des Pères latins qu'il apporte à l'appui de sa thèse, et je suis moins surpris, après l'avoir lu, qu'un moine de l'Athos ait pu me soutenir fort sérieusement, au mois d'août 1904, que saint Augustin avait été un adversaire irréductible du Filioque. C'est que le traducteur grec a audacieusement travesti le texte même du grand docteur d'Hippone. Mais cette partie du manuscrit de Paris étant empruntée à une autre composition du même genre de Manuel, nous avons dû l'omettre ici.

Dans la réfutation du système religieux de Pléthon, l'argumentation de Manuel ne manque ni de verve ni de logique; mais ici encore l'originalité fait défaut. Ses meilleures pages sont empruntées, mot pour mot, à la réfutation de l'Institution théologique de Proclus par Nicolas de Méthone, dont le nom n'est d'ailleurs pas cité. Il est vrai que Nicolas de Méthone, dont on a tant vanté la science théologique, n'était lui-même qu'un plagiaire de profession. C'est à qui, parmi ces bons théologiens de Byzance, tuera le volé. Aussi le traité de Manuel ne constitue-t-il, en dépit d'une apparente érudition, qu'une mosaïque de textes empruntés de-ci de-là et ajustés avec plus ou moins de bonheur, un peu comme une chronique de presse dans nos grands quotidiens. Je n'ai rien négligé pour reconnaître et retrouver ces divers emprunts, laissant à d'autres le soin de compléter, sur quelques points, cette partie de mon travail. Il faut bien se résigner, en byzantinisme surtout, à ne pas tout savoir.

De l'auteur lui-même, nous connaissons bien peu de chose. On l'a parfois confondu avec Manuel Holobolos, auteur du xiv^e siècle¹; mais cette identification, déjà combattue par Hase en 1813², ne supporte même pas l'examen. À défaut d'autre argument, le texte même du traité publié ici suffirait à la faire écarter. Ulysse Chevalier, dans sa Bio-Bibliographie, fait vivre Manuel aux environs de l'an 1450. Cette date est encore trop ancienne. Dès 1840, en effet, Constantin Oeconomos³ avait reconnu notre Manuel dans le personnage de ce nom que signale la Chronique de Malaxos⁴ à propos de la mort du patriarche Joachim (1498-1502). D'autre part, Théodose Zygomalas, dans une lettre écrite en 1581⁵, compte Manuel au nombre des disciples de Matthieu Camariotes, disciple lui-même de Georges Scholarios. Manuel vivait encore en 1547, car sa signature figure à cette date au bas d'une pièce synodale⁶. En plaçant sa mort en 1551, le patriarche Constantios I^{er}⁷ ne doit pas être loin de la vérité, bien qu'il ne nous dise point à quelle source il a puisé ce renseignement. On ne saurait, en toute hypothèse, descendre au-dessous de 1555, puisque le titre de Grand Rhéteur était déjà porté, à cette date, par Jean Zygomalas⁸. Deux témoignages cités par A. Papadopoulos-Kerameus, dans son excellent article sur notre Manuel¹, lui donnent le nom de Galésiote. Était-ce son patronymique, ou ne s'agit-il pas plutôt d'un simple surnom provenant de quelque relation de Manuel avec les moines de Galésios ou leur église de Sainte-Anastasie à Constantinople? Il est difficile de le dire. Dans le premier cas, il serait sans doute le fils de ce Galésiote, que Georges Scholarios avait emmené comme secrétaire en Italie, lors du concile de Florence. On s'expliquerait, dès lors, pourquoi il a si souvent mis à contribution les œuvres de Scholarios. Autre détail bon à enregistrer : en 1482, à la mort du patriarche Maxime, c'est Manuel qui prononça, au nom du clergé de la capitale, l'éloge du défunt². Il occupait donc déjà à cette époque un certain rang parmi les fonctionnaires du patriarcat, et il devait avoir atteint, sinon dépassé, sa vingtième année. On peut donc, sans risque de s'écarter de la vérité, fixer sa naissance vers l'an 1460.

Manuel le Rhéteur a beaucoup écrit, ou tout au moins beaucoup copié, si l'on juge de son activité littéraire sur l'imposante liste de ses œuvres que Papadopoulos-Keramens a dressée avec beaucoup de soin³. Mais cette longue énumération ne doit point faire illusion. Les traités proprement dits ont peu d'étendue, celui que nous publions plus loin étant un des plus considérables; et le reste du bagage littéraire de Manuel est surtout composé de pièces liturgiques, dans cette invraisemblable langue des hymnographes byzantins, où les mots l'emportent toujours sur la pensée. Encore faut-il remarquer que plusieurs des pièces enregistrées sous le nom de Manuel, ne sont pas de lui : c'est le cas, par exemple, de la plupart des prières métriques fort admirées de Papadopoulos-Keramens. Manuel les a simplement copiées dans un recueil encore inédit de Georges Scholarios, comme j'en fournirai la preuve ailleurs. Qu'il me suffise ici de signaler, avant de finir cette trop longue introduction, celles des œuvres de Manuel qui intéressent plus directement la controverse religieuse.

1° Traité du Purgatoire, contenu dans le n° 1293, fol. 254-263, de la Bibliothèque nationale de Paris, sous le titre suivant : Μανουήλ τοῦ σωφωτάτου καὶ λορωτάτου μεγάλου ῥήτορος τῆς ἁγιωτάτης μεγάλης ἐκκλησίας Κωνσταντινουπόλεως ἕως Ῥώμης, τοῦ ἐκ Πελοποννήσου, λόγος περὶ τοῦ ὅτι οὐκ ἔστι μετὰ θανάτου πῦρ ποικιλοτρόπου ἤγρου καθαυτήρου. ὡς τινες ὑποθέτουσι καὶ πρὸς τινὰς εἰπόντας ἁμαθῶς, ὡς ἰουδαϊσμός ἐστι τὸ τερρεῖν τινὰ τοῦ παλαιῦ νόμου. Une autre copie de cet opuscule doit se trouver à la bibliothèque du Vatican, car Allatus en cite un passage, d'ailleurs peu étendu, dans sa dissertation sur le Purgatoire.

2° Sur la Procession du Saint-Esprit. En voici le titre : Τοῦ αὐτοῦ κυροῦ Μανουὴλ τοῦ μεγάλου ῥήτορος εἰς δύο συλλογισμῶς λατινικοῦς ἀποδεικνύοντας καὶ ἐκ τοῦ Υἱοῦ τὸ Πνεῦμα, ἀνασκευαστικῶς μὲν αὐτῶν, κατασκευαστικῶς δὲ ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ Πατρὸς· ἐβρέθη δὲ πρὸς τὸν κύριον Γερμανιον τὸν ἐνεργούντα αὐτῶς. On trouve cet opuscule dans les manuscrits suivants : N° 348 du Métrochion du Saint-Sépulchre à Constantinople, f. 6 sq.; n° 42 des mss. Selden à Oxford, f. 110; n° 585 de la Bibliothèque publique de Pétersbourg, f. 62; n° 13.13 de la bibliothèque Synodale de Moscou, f. 79; n° 420 (393) du même fonds, f. 115; n° 112 du monastère d'Iviron au mont Athos. — Le n° 1377 du même monastère d'Iviron contient le morceau suivant : Τοῦ αὐτοῦ Μανουὴλ τοῦ μεγάλου ῥήτορος λόγος ἐπιλόγιον τινὰς ἀπορίας, τινὲς κωλύσαντος τούτου. Il s'agit sans doute du même traité.

5° Sur la mort du Christ : Λόγος ἀποδεικτικῶς πότε τεθῆσεται ἡ τοῦ Κυρίου σὰρξ καὶ πῶς νεκρῶν δεδωξῆσθαι. Conservée dans le manuscrit 512 d'Iviron et 324 (311) de Moscou, cette pièce a été publiée, d'après le manuscrit de Moscou, par l'archimandrite Arsénij en supplément au tome XXVII des Lectures de la Société de formation religieuse, et en une plaquette à part (Moscou, 1889).

6° Sur Marc d'Éphèse et le concile de Florence. C'est l'ouvrage publié ici. Papadopoulos-Kerameus le range gravement parmi les œuvres historiques : c'est peut-être lui faire beaucoup d'honneur, l'opuscule n'étant qu'une diatribe philosophico théologique dirigée contre Pléthon et Bessarion. Les maigres pages consacrées à la mémoire de Marc d'Éphèse ont été reprises textuellement par Manuel lui-même pour être transformées en synaxaire de l'acolythie ou office liturgique composé par lui en l'honneur du champion de l'orthodoxie au concile de Florence. Papadopoulos-Kerameus, qui a publié cet office¹, ne s'est pas aperçu de ce procédé assez répandu en Orient qui consiste à tirer deux montures du même sac. Ne pouvant insérer sa dissertation dans une pièce liturgique, Manuel prend la précaution de nous y renvoyer expressément au cours de son synaxaire².

cet opuscule de Manuel, en l'accompagnant d'une traduction russe, dans le bulletin de l'Académie ecclésiastique de Saint-Petersbourg intitulé Christianskoe Chlénie ou Lecture chrétienne, tome II de l'année 1886, p. 102-162. Le procédé d'Arsénij, dans l'établissement du texte grec, est assez étrange. Comme il avait obtenu du directeur de la revue, Ivan Troïtskij, une copie du traité de Manuel d'après un ancien manuscrit du Sinâï passé depuis à Pétersbourg, il prit de son côté une copie du manuscrit de Moscou; mais au lieu d'amender l'un par l'autre ces deux exemplaires d'un même texte, il imprima religieusement la copie reçue de Pétersbourg en rejetant systématiquement en note les variantes du codex de Moscou, quoiqu'elles fussent, le plus souvent, bien préférables aux leçons venues de Pétersbourg. J'ai signalé, dans mon édition, les unes comme les autres, non d'après les manuscrits eux-mêmes, que je n'ai pu consulter, mais d'après Arsénij et Troïtskij, dont la responsabilité seule est engagée. Mais j'ai pris pour base, dans la constitution du texte, le n° 1293 de la Bibliothèque nationale de Paris, copié en 1511, du vivant même de Manuel, par un certain Paul Kolybas, originaire de Modou, en Morée. A part certaines graphies provenant de l'itacisme et du redoublement de la même consonne, cette copie est d'une remarquable correction; mais elle présente, çà et là, de regrettables lacunes, que l'édition d'Arsénij m'a heureusement permis de combler.

S'il m'a fallu, dans la traduction, recourir parfois, sous peine de trahir la pensée de l'auteur, à l'emploi de certains termes d'une latinité douteuse, le souci de la fidélité sera mon excuse. Aussi bien tout traducteur d'ouvrages de ce genre peut-il faire sienne la maxime de Creuzer, le courageux éditeur de Proclus : « Neque Prochum eiusque similes philosophos quisquam latine vertere possit, qui dicendus sit simia Ciceronis. »

2. Atque haec quidem mihi in praesentia optanda dixi. Nunc iam ad te, beatissime Pater, verba faciam. Quid est, quod tantopere contendimus de innovata istiusmodi additione, quae corpus Christi concidit ac divulsit, eosque, qui eius discipuli vocantur, hactenus opinionum dissensione disiunxit? Quid istuc longi ac diuturni iurgii atque infelicis fratrum despicientiae, eorumque, qui scandalum patiuntur, abalienatio? Equid Patres damnamus, dum praeter communes eorum traditiones alia sentimus ac dicimus? Cur illorum fidem mancam reddimus, nostram vero quasi perfectiorem inducimus? Quid praeter evangelium, quod accepimus, aliud evangelizamus? Quis malevolus daemon nostrae invidit concordiae atque unitati? Quis amorem fratrum nobis ademit, diversum substituendo sacrificium, quod haud legitime offertur utpote citra divisionem? Suntne ista animi apostolici et paternae benevolentiae et fraternae caritatis? An contra hominis scaevi, morosi, haud aegre ferentis, quod omnes percat? Equidem arbitrari, eum, qui dissidium hoc inexit, tunicamque Dominicis corporis olim uno tenore contextam laceravit, acerbiorē subiturnum esse poenam, quam qui Christum cruci adixerunt et omnium aetatum impii atque haeretici. At vero tibi e contrario las est, beatissime Pater, dummodo volueris, disiuncta coniungere, *medium patrietem maceriae*¹ convellere, divinae dispensamus scandalo sit minusque ad sacrificium idoneus reputetur, et imperfectus et mortuus, panisne nequitiae? in Scriptura appelletur, cur non suscipiendus fermentatus, azymus vero repellendus? Quoniam unus panis unum corpus multi sumus, ait divinus apostolus^b, nam omnes de uno pane participamus. Ubi igitur de uno pane haudquaquam participamus, constat ne unum quidem nos corpus esse, neve alios cum aliis conspirare, neve eodem motu cieri Obsecro vos, ut idem ait^c, per nomen Domini nostri Iesu Christi, ut idipsum dicatis omnes, et non sint in vobis schismata. Cum ergo non idem dicamus, haud immerito magnum istud insanabileque schisma ad hanc usque diem inter nos habetur. Ubinam non idem dicimus? Non in occulto et clanculum et in privatis congressibus, quo res vulgus latere possit, sed in publico fidei symbolo, in baptismatis confessione, in christiana tessera. Porro si quis regium nummum adulterat, gravissima censetur poena dignus, is qui commune professionis christianae signum corruperit, quomam tandem iure censuerit, se leviolem tanto facinore poenam soluturum?

3. Rem vero, ut se habeat, considera. Olim dicebamus plane idem, neque in nobis erat schisma, et tunc patribus ipsis utrique profecto conspirabamus. Nunc autem, cum non idem dicamus, quomodo, quaeso, utrique habemus? Ac nos quidem eadem certe dum dicimus atque olim, et nobiscum ipsi conspiramus et cum Patribus nostris et vobiscum etiam, si vera dicere velletis; vos autem cum recentiora adsciveritis, primum quidem a vobismetipsis, deinde a communibus Patribus, tandem a nobis etiam dissentiatibus necesse est. Quidni ad optimam illam concordiam redeamus, quae nos et nobismetipsis et invicem et cum Patribus plane consentientes ostendet, et de universorum Deo neque de Spiritu sancto affirmari potest. Spiritus sanctus communio-nem habet cum Patre et Filio in hoc, quod est increata natura praeditum esse : nihilominus a Patre et Filio propriis suis notionibus distinguitur. Notio enim illius et signum maxime proprium est, ut nihil eorum sit, quae Patri et Filio inesse ratio dicat. Nam quod non sit ingenuus et non unigenitus, et tamen vere sit, hoc ipsius peculiarem proprietatem, quae a praedictis distinguitur, repraesentat. Spiritus enim Patri coniunctus est, secundum quod uterque increatus est; rursus ab eo distinguitur eo quod non est Pater, prout ille est; Filio vero et secundum quod uterque increatus est et secundum quod uterque ex primo principio suam subsistentiam habet, coniunctus, distinguitur ab eo sua proprietate, quae est, quod nec ut unigenitus ex Patre productus est, et quod per ipsum Filium sit manifestatus.

43. Eiusdem ex eodem libro, capite XXXVII : In qua (natura) Pater principii expers et ingenuus et semper Pater concipitur : ex ipso autem ingenitus Filius sine ulla interruptione et divulsione una cum Patre intelligitur ; cum ipso vero et per ipsum, antequam nescio quod inane et quiddam non subsistens tanquam medium interveniret, statim etiam et coniunctim Spiritus sanctus concipitur, non posterior Filio secundum suam subsistentiam, quasi possit aliquando unigenitus Filius intelligi absque Spiritu sancto, qui et ipse ex universorum Deo sui subsistentiae originem habet, a quo etiam unigenitum illud lumen est de vero lumine resplendens, neque diversitate durationis, neque natura a Patre vel Unigenito separatur.

44. Eiusdem ex eodem libro, capite XXXVII^b : Quin potius non radium ex sole, sed ex ingenito sole alium solem mente atque cogitatione apprehendemus, qui simul cum primo per generationem existerit, in omnibus primo aequalis, pulchritudine, potentia, splendore, magnitudine, fulgore, breviter, omnibus aliis, quae in sole insunt : et rursus aliud tale lumen ad praedictum modum constituemus, nullo temporali intervallo a lumine genito abscissum, sed per ipsum quidem effulgens, principium vero suae hypostasis a primaevo lumine accipiens : lumen quidem et ipsum est ad similitudinem praconcepti luminis lucens et illuminans, et omnia alia, quae luci competunt, elliciens.

15. Et in fine eiusdem libri : Quemadmodum enim Patri Filius coniungitur, et cum ex illo originem ducat, hypostasi tamen posterior non est, sic etiam Spiritus sanctus ad Filium se habet: nam in sola principii ratione Filius priusquam Spiritus sancti hypostasis concipitur. Temporales autem dimensiones in illa omni saeculo antecessa vita non inveniuntur, ita ut excepta principii ratione sanctissima Trinitas in omnibus probe sibi consonet.

16. Eiusdem ex oratione eius catechetica^b : Ut cum Dei verbum audimus, huiusmodi arbitramur verbum quod voluntatis delectu sit praeditum, efficaxque et omnipotens: sic etiam cum Spiritum Dei didicerimus, qui Verbum comitetur, eiusdemque efficaciam manifestam reddat, non flatum subsistentia destitutum animo concipimus, sed vim essentialem, quae ipsa per seipsam in peculiari hypostasi consideretur, ex Patre progrediatur et in Verbo requiescat.

17. Eiusdem ex libro de sancta Trinitate : Consubstantialem tribusque personis constantem unam Deitatem prohemur, quia vetus ac novum Testamentum unum Deum cum Verbo et Spiritu praedicare novit. Itaque de divina natura ita sentiendum est, ut Pater maneat Pater quin Filius fiat: item Filius maneat Filius nec Pater sit: Spiritus vero maneat Spiritus, quin Filius Paternae sit, sed Spiritus sanctus. Nam Pater generat Filium et Pater est: Filius vero qui gignitur, Verbum est manetque Filius: item sanctus quoque Spiritus, qui a Patre procedit, manet Spiritus sanctus ex Patre procedens.

18. Et post pauca : Est proprium Patris sine principio esse, quod quidem de Filio mi-nime dici potest nec de Spiritu sancto. Nam et Filius exivit a Patre, ut ait Scriptura, et Spiritus ex Deo Patre procedit.

49. Eiusdem ex commentario in illud: In principio erat Verbum^a: Verbum unum novit principium, non duo, ut aiunt Manichæi, neque primum aut secundum aut tertium principium, ut asserunt Plato, Basilides, Marcio, Arius, Eunomius, sed secundum rectam fidem principium dicitur Pater, et principium Filius, et principium Spiritus sanctus, propter coæternitatem, non quod tria habeantur principia. Item et Patrem dicimus Deum et Filium Deum et Spiritum Deum, non quod tres deos colimus, sed propter unius Deitatis triumque personarum consubstantialitatem. Etenim Pater nulla alia ratione principium est Filii ac Spiritus, quam ut est id, ex quo; nam ratione causæ Pater prior concipitur, non autem existentia prior consideratur.

59. *Ex oratione in episcoporum Aegyptiorum impulsus*¹: Vocatur autem illa (natura) quidem, Deus, et in tribus maximis consistit, in causa, in opifice, in perfectore; hoc est in Patre, Filio et Spiritu sancto. Qui quidem nec ita inter se distracti sunt, ut in tres diversas atque alienas dividantur naturas; nec rursus ita in arcum redacta natura, ut in unam circumscribatur personam.

60. *Et post pauca*²: At si omnia, quae habet Pater, Filii sunt, praeter principium; omnia vero quae habet Filius, Spiritus sunt, excepta filiatione.

61. *Ex oratione de dogmate et constitutione episcoporum*³: Cuius enim, quaeso, Filius fuerit, nisi ad Patrem, tanquam ad principium, referatur? Nec Patri principii dignitatem imminuere, quam ut Pater et genitor habet; parvorum etenim certe ipsoque indignorum principium fuerit, nisi deitatis eius, quae in Filio et Spiritu sancto consideratur, causa sit. Sic enim, mea quidem sententia, Deus unus retinebitur, si Filium et Spiritum sanctum ad unam causam referamus, non autem componamus neque commisceamus, et si unam atque eandem divinitatis identitatem intelligamus.

62. *Ex eadem oratione*⁴: Proprietates vero, Patris quidem, ut principii experti et principium cogitetur ac praedictur; principium, inquam, ut causa et fons et lumen sempiternum.

63. *Et rursus ex eadem oratione*⁵: Audis generationem? Modum curiosius ne inquiras, Audis Spiritum ex Patre procedere? Id. quomodo fiat, ne anxio studio perscrutaris.

64. *Eiusdem ex oratione in Pentecosten*⁶: Tametsi ad primam causam, ut omnia ea quae Unigeniti sunt, ita etiam quae Spiritus sancti sunt, referantur.

65. *Et paucis interiectis*¹: Omnia quae habet Pater, Filii sunt, praeter innascentiam; omnia quae habet Filius, Spiritus sancti sunt, excepta generatione.

66. *Eiusdem ex oratione de moderatione in disputando*²: At unum Deum Patrem agnoscere oportebat principii expertem et ingenitum, et unum Filium ex Patre genitum, et unum Spiritum ex Deo substantiam habentem, concedentem Patri ingentit proprietatem, Filio vero generationem; de cetero autem eiusdem omnino naturae, dignitatis, honoris, gloriae. Haec, inquam, agnoscere oportebat, haec confiteri, hic gradum figere, prolixas autem nugae ac profanas verborum novitates ad otiosos homines amandare.

67. *Eiusdem ex oratione in Heronem philosophum*³: Unus Spiritus sanctus, a Patre procedens aut etiam prodicens.

68. *Et post pauca*⁴: Ut nec Patri principium triluamus, ne quid primo prius inducamus, ex quo etiam id, quod primum est, perire necesse sit; nec Filium et Spiritum sanctum principii expertes esse adstruamus, ne Patri id, quod ipsi proprium est, adimamus. Illi quippe et principio minime carent et quodam modo carent: quod sane dictum mirum est. Non enim quantum ad causam principio carent: ex Deo enim sunt, licet non post ipsum, quemadmodum ex sole lumen; sed quantum ad tempus principii sunt expertes.

69. *Et post pauca*⁵: Hoc enim Patri et Filio et Spiritui sancto commune est, quod minime creati sunt, atque ipsa divinitas; hoc autem Filio et Spiritui sancto, quod uterque eorum ex Patre est. At vero Patris proprietates haec est, quod ingentus sit; Filii, quod genitus; Spiritus sancti, quod procedat.

70. *Ex libro ad Evagrium*⁶: Haud secus etiam Patris velut radii quidam ad nos demissi sunt, tum splendidus Iesus, tum Spiritus sanctus. Ut enim lucis radii mutuum relationem natura individuum habentes, nec a luce disjunguntur, nec a se invicem discinduntur, lucisque beneficium ad nos usque traiciunt : eodem modo Salvator quoque noster et Spiritus sanctus, geminus ille Patris radius, simul et ad nos usque veritatem lucem ministrant et Patri uniti sunt.

71. *Eiusdem ex prima oratione de Filio*³ : Et quomodo non sunt simul cum Patre principii expertes, si coaeterni sunt? Quia inde procedunt, etsi non post illum sunt. Quod enim principio caret, aeternum est; quod autem aeternum est, non profinus caret principio, quoad ad Patrem velut ad principium referitur. Ergo illi, quantum ad causam, non caret principio. Perspicuum autem esse causam non continuo antiquiorem esse eis, quorum causa est; neque enim sol lucem tempore antecedit. Quantum autem ad tempus, principii expertes sunt.

72. *Damasi papae Romani ex actis secundae synodi*⁴ : Si quis non dixerit Spiritum sanctum de Patre esse vere ac proprie, sicut Filius de divina substantia, et Deum verbum⁵, anathema sit.

73. *Sancti Cyrilli ex tertia ad Nestorium epistola*⁶. Quamvis enim Spiritus in subsistentia propria sit, eatenusque in seipso consideretur, quatenus Spiritus est, et non Filius; non est tamen ab eo alienus, quandoquidem Spiritus veritatis nominatur, Christus autem veritas est. Profunditur autem ab illo, non minus profecto quam ex Deo et Patre.

74. *Eiusdem ex libro ad Theodosium imperatorem*⁷ : Peccata namque iis qui illi adherent condonans, suo mox ungit eos spiritu, quem quidem ut Dei Patris Verbum ipse immittit, et ex propria natura in nos quasi ex fonte quodam transfundit; quin etiam facultate hac propter unionem et incarnationis oeconomiam cum homine communicata, corporaliter quoque ut homo inspirabat; insufflavit enim in sanctos apostolos, dicens⁸ : Accipite Spiritum sanctum. Sed neque ex mensura dat Spiritum⁹, iuxta Ioannis vocem, sed ex se non secus ac Pater eundem infundit.

tribuit (Christus) tanquam alienum, ut servus et minister, sed ut Deum secundum naturam cum summa potestate et auctoritate, ut qui sit ex ipso et per ipsum. Per hunc quoque divinus character nobis imprimitur.

76. Eiusdem ex interpretatione sacri symboli^a: Post absolutum de Christo sermonem, sancti beatissimique Patres Spiritus sancti mentionem faciunt. Credere enim se in illum dixerunt, simili modo videlicet ut in Patrem et Filium; et profunditur quidem, sive procedit tanquam a fonte a Deo et Patre, tribuitur autem creaturae per Filium. Unde insufflavit in sanctos apostolos dicens: Accipite Spiritum sanctum. Igitur ex Deo et Deus Spiritus est.

77. Eiusdem ex epistola ad Iovannem Antiochenum^b: Nullo autem modo patimur, ut ab aliquo fides illa sive fidei symbolum concutatur, quod editum est: neque enim aut nobis aut ulli omnino alteri vel unam voculam ibi positam immutare, aut unam etiam syllabam praeterire permittimus, memores eius qui dixit: Ne transferas termines antiquos, quos posuerunt patres tui. Non enim ipsi locuti sunt, sed ipse Spiritus Dei ac Patris, qui procedit quidem ex ipso; est autem non alienus a Filio, secundum essentiae rationem.

78. Eiusdem ex libro de sacrosancta Trinitate^c: Sanctae huius adorandaeque unitatis tres agnoscuntur et creduntur personae: Pater principii ac causae expers, non genitus, aeternus; tum unus Filius unigenitus, ineffabili modo ac citra passionem atque inenarrabiliter ante omnia saecula e substantia ipsius Patris genitus, atque propterea eiusdem ac Pater substantiae et dignitatis, eique per omnia similis et aequalis, excepta paternitate, principium autem et causam Patrem habens per generationem; denique Spiritus sanctus vivificans et adorandus, qui ex Patre procedit, id est ex substantia Patris, non per generationem, sicut Filius, ne duo in Trinitate filii habeantur, sed procedens, ut dictum est, e Patre solo, ut flatus ab ore; manifestatus autem per Filium ipse locutus est in omnibus sanctis prophetis et apostolis, praeterquam quod est, ut dixi, ex essentia ipsius Patris et Filii, eandem habens substantiam ac Pater et Filius, incommunicabilis et ipse omni creaturae non secus ac Pater et Filius secundum essentiae rationem.

79. Eiusdem ex libro primo contra Iulianum: Genitus est enim Filius ex Patre, estque in ipso et ex ipso naturaliter; procedit etiam Spiritus, proprius existens Dei et Patris et similiter Filii; sanctificat enim Deus Pater per ipsum id quod sanctificari aptum est.

80. Et in fine eiusdem libri: Procedit enim ex ipso Patre Spiritus secundum naturam, et per Filium creationi subministratur.

81. Eiusdem e libro secundo contra Iulianum: Ipsam elementorum naturam non posse vi sua corruptionem effugere, sed, ut consistat, opus esse manu continentis illam Dei, docuit propheta, cum *Spiritum Dei dixit ferri super aquam*⁶. Nam a Spiritu Dei cuncta vitam accipiunt, cum ipse quoque secundum naturam vita sit, utpote ex vita Patris et ex illo procedens.

82. Eiusdem e libro Thesaurorum: Christus Iudaeos alloquens ita alicubi loquitur⁷: Si vero in digito Dei ego eiicio daemonia, venit ergo in vos regnum Dei. Digitum Dei hic Spiritum sanctum vocat, qui quodammodo ex divina essentia oritur, et naturaliter ex ea dependit, sicut digitus ex humana manu. Brachium enim et dextram Dei sacrae Scripturae Filium vocant, iuxta illud⁸: Salvavit eum dextera eius, et brachium sanctum eius. Et rursum⁹: Domine, sublime est brachium tuum, et nesciverunt; ubi autem cognoverint, confundentur. Quemadmodum igitur brachium natura-lier coaptatum est integro corpori, omniaque operatur quae menti placent, et inungere solet, digito utens : ita et Verbum Dei ex ipso et in ipso naturaliter coaptatum, ut ita dicam, atque emanantem existimemus, et in Filio naturaliter atque essentialiter procedere a Patre Spiritum, per quem omnia ungens sanctificat. Quocirca non est alienus vel extraneus a divina natura Spiritus sanctus, sed ex ipsa et in ipsa naturaliter. Sicut digitus in manu eiusdem naturae atque ipsa est, et vicissim manus in corpore nequaquam diversae substantiae ab ipso corpore est.

83. Et post pauca^a : Ostendit aperte non alienum esse ab essentia Filii Spiritum sanctum, sed in ipso et ex ipso, ac veluti vim quamdam naturalem, quae omnia quaecumque velit, praestare possit.

84. Eiusdem ex epistola ad monachos^b : Spiritus profunditur quidem, sive procedit, tanquam a fonte, a Deo et Patre: tribuitur autem creaturae per Filium.

85. Eiusdem ad Palladium^c : Mutabilis autem nullo modo Spiritus est, aut si mutationis morbo laborat, ad ipsam Dei naturam haec labes pertinebit; siquidem est Dei et Patris et Filii ille, qui substantialiter ex utroque, nimirum ex Patre per Filium, profluit Spiritus.

86. Et in responsione nona haec habet^d : Proccedit enim ex Deo et Patre Spiritus sanctus secundum Salvatoris vocem, sed non est alienus a Filio : omnia enim habet cum Patre, et hoc ipse edocuit dicens de Spiritu sancto : Omnia quaecumque habet Pater, mea sunt. Preterea dixi vobis, quia de meo accipiet, et annuntiabit vobis. Ergo clarificavit quidem Iesum Spiritus sanctus admirabilia operans, verumtamen ut spiritus eius, non ut aliena virtus, et eo praestantior, secundum quod intelligitur Deus, 87. Haec quidem divus Cyrillus dum certaret contra Nestorium dicentem, aliena virtute Christum miracula patrasse, ac si simplex aliquis homo fuisset unusque ex prophetis. Atqui Theodoretus, cum sentiret ac videret Spiritum vocari proprium Filii in Cyrilli operibus, dixit⁴ : « Proprium autem Spiritum Filii, si quidem ut eiusdem atque ille naturae et ex Patre procedentem dixit, simul confitebimur et tanquam piam suscipiemus vocem : si vero tanquam ex Filio aut per Filium existentiam habeat, hoc ut blasphemiam et impium recitemus. Credimus enim Domino dicenti^b : Spiritus veritatis, qui a Patre procedit ; sed et sacratissimo Paulo dicenti similiter^c : Nos autem non spiritum mundi accipimus, sed Spiritum qui ex Deo Patre est ». Cyrillus, cum haec audivisset probeque intellexisset, haud ullam responsionem dedit, sed edito de sancta Trinitate libro, dixit, ex solo Patre procedere Spiritum sanctum.

88. Sancti Iohannis Chrysostomi e primo libro contra Anomoeos, qui habetur in Margaritis^d : Deum enim ubique esse novi, totum item ubique esse novi ; quomodo autem, nescio. Scio ipsum genuisse Filium ; quomodo autem, ignoro. Novi Spiritum ex ipso esse ; quomodo autem ex ipso sit, nescio.

89. Eiusdem e libro de sancta Trinitate^e : Credo in unum Deum, Patrem omnipotentem. Credo, non inquiri ; credo, non persequor incomprehensibilem ; credo in unum et solum verum omnipotentem.

90. Et post pauca^f : Credo etiam in Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum, Filium eius unigenitum, qui ex illo genitus est ante omnia saecula, prout solus novit ipse qui genitus est.

91. Et iterum^g : Credo etiam in Spiritum sanctum, Spiritum veritatis, qui a Patre procedit, qui Trinitatem complet. Ipsi confido meam sanctificationem ; ipsi confido resurrectionem ex mortuis.

93. *Eiusdem ex sermone de Spiritu sancto*² : Ut igitur, sicut dicebam, ne quis audiens Spiritum Dei, putet familiaritatem quamdam significari, et non communitatem naturae, Paulus dicit³ : Vobis autem non datus est spiritus mundi, sed Spiritus qui ex Deo est. Iterum dicitur Spiritus Patris, sicut Salvator apostolis dicit⁴ : Ne solliciti sitis, quomodo vel quid loquamini ; non enim vos estis qui loquimini, sed Spiritus Patris vestri qui loquitur in vobis. Sicut autem dixit Spiritus Dei, additque Scriptura qui ex Deo est, sic iterum dictus est Spiritus Patris. Et ne putetis hoc secundum familiaritatem dici, Salvator id confirmat⁵ : Quando venerit Paracletus, Spiritus veritatis, qui a Patre procedit. Illic ex Deo, hic a Patre dicitur. Id quod sibi ipse tribuerat dicens¹ : Ego a Patre exivi, hoc et Spiritui sancto adscribit dicens² : Qui a Patre procedit. Quid est procedit? Non dixit gignitur. Quod enim non est scriptum, non est sentiendum. Filius a Patre genitus est, Spiritus a Patre procedit. Quaeris a me differentiam, quomodo genitus ille, et quomodo processerit iste? Quid igitur rei est? Cum didiceris Filium genitum esse, didicistine et modum comprehendisti? Numquid censes, te, dum Filii nomen audis, ipsam generationis modum intelligere? Nomina sunt haec, dilecte, tum fide honoranda tum pia cogitatione conservanda.

ritus sanctus ex Patre procedit, non tamen generationis, sed processiois modo. Qui alius est existentiae modus, non minus comprehensionem et notitiam superans quam Filii generatio.

106. Ex eodem libro^a: Solus Pater est ingenitus (ex alia enim hypostasi suum esse non habet), et solus Filius genitus (ex Patris enim essentia sine principio et tempore genitus est), et solus Spiritus sanctus ex Patris essentia procedit, non generatione, sed processione.

107. Eodem^b modo etiam credimus in unum Spiritum sanctum, Dominum et vivificantem, qui ex Patre procedit et in Filio requiescit, qui cum Patre et Filio simul adoratur et simul glorificatur.

108. Ex eodem libro^c: Per omnia Patri Filioque similis: ex Patre procedens et per Filium impertitus et ab omni creatura perceptus.

109. Ex eodem libro^d: Inseparabilis et nequaquam egrediens a Patre Filioque, et omnia habens quae Pater habet Filioque, excepta innascentia et generatione.

110. Spiritus vero sanctus est et ipse quidem ex Patre, non tamen gignendi, sed procedendi modo. Et quidem generationis et processiois differentiam esse intelligimus, at modum differentiae ignoramus. Simul autem et Filii ex Patre generatio, et Spiritus sancti est processio. Quaecumque igitur habet Filius et Spiritus sanctus, omnia ex Patre habent, adeoque hoc ipsum quod sunt. Atque si Pater non sit, neque Filius est, neque Spiritus: itemque nisi Pater aliquid habeat, neque Filius habet, neque Spiritus; atque propter Patrem, hoc est propterea quod Pater est, Filius est et Spiritus: et propter Patrem, hoc est, quod Pater habet, Filius et Spiritus habent quidquid habent, exceptis ingeniti et geniti et processiois proprietatibus. In his enim solis hypostaticis proprietatibus sacrosanctae tres hypostases differunt.

111. *Et rursum*¹: Sciendum est, nos Patrem ex aliquo esse non dicere, sed ipsum Filii Patrem confitemur. Filium autem neque causam neque Patrem dicimus, sed ipsum ex Patre et Filium Patris pronuntiamus. Denique Spiritum sanctum et ex Patre pronuntiamus et Spiritum Patris nominamus. Porro ex Filio Spiritum non dicimus, sed Spiritum Filii nominamus, et per Filium nobis patefactum et impartitum esse confitemur. At Filium nec Spiritus nec ex Spiritu esse dicimus.

113. *Eiusdem ex libro XIII*²: Cum autem mutuum respectum personarum animo verso, illud compertum habeo, Patrem superessentialem solem esse, bonitatis fontem, essentiae, rationis, sapientiae, potentiae, luminis, divinitatis abyssum, occulti in se boni genitricem productricemque scaturiginem. Ipse quoque mens est, rationis abyssus, Verbi genitor, ac per Verbum manifestantis Spiritus productor.

113. *Et rursum ex eodem*³: Pater fons est et auctor tum Filii tum Spiritus sancti: solius tamen Filii Pater ac Spiritus sancti productor. Filius autem Filius est, Verbum, sapientia, potentia, imago, splendor, Patris figura et ex Patre. At Spiritus sanctus non Patris Filius, sed Spiritus Patris, ut qui ex Patre procedat: nullus enim impulsus est sine Spiritu. Quin Filii quoque Spiritus dicitur, non velut ex ipso, sed per ipsum ex Patre procedens.

114. *E libro VII*⁴: Deus quoque Spiritus sanctus, vis sanctificans, subsistens, ex Patre absque scimentione procedens atque in Filio quiescens, Patri et Filio consubstantialis.

115. *Eiusdem ex epistola ad Iordanem*⁵: Nobis unus Deus est, Pater et Verbum ipsius et Spiritus ipsius. Verbum porro genitum quiddam est per se subsistens, ac proinde Filius. Spiritus item per se subsistens processio est atque emanatio, ex Patre quidem, per Filium vero, sed non ex Filio, utpote Spiritus oris Dei Verbum emittans. Quod quidem os mem-

Spiritu sancto commune sit, ut non ingenito modo existant, ne qua in subiecto confusio spectetur, rursus incommunicabilem in eorum proprietatibus differentiam invenire possumus, ut et quod commune est servetur, et quod proprium est non confundatur. Etenim unigeni-tus Filius ex Patre in Scriptura sacra dicitur, et hactenus eius proprietatem illius doctridicitur et ex Filio esse perhibetur. Si quis enim, ait, *spiritum Christi non habet, hic non est ip-Christi spiritus est. At Filius, cum ex Deo sit, non iam Filius Spiritus aut est aut dicitur, neque haec relativa consecutio convertitur, adeo ut pari ratione per analysim oratio reciprocari possit, et quemadmodum Spiritus Christi dicitur, ita quoque Christus Spiritus nominetur.

hypostasibus, aut ut ex communi eorumdem natura, aut ex vi emissiva. Iam vero si ut ex duabus hypostasibus, duo profecto erunt principia in divina Trinitate et duae causae et duo emissores; tollitur unitas principii atque illud effatum, "solum superessentialis Deitatis fontem esse Patrem". Sin autem ut ex communi eorum natura, in primis nunquam hucusque auditum fuit, ut cum ex duabus hypostasibus tertia progreditur hypostasis, haec non ex illis, sed ex communi natura dicatur esse; deinde vel hoc pacto rursus in idem recidimus. Etenim hypostasis nihil aliud est nisi natura cum proprietatibus; unde quod ex natura cuiusdam vel quorundam est, id etiam ex hypostasi vel hypostasibus sit oportet.
 Praeterea, ne simpliciter quidem divinae naturae competit facultas emittendi; secus enim Spiritus ipse, cum eiusdem naturae sit particeps, alterum ac seipsum emitteret. Deni-que, si ex vi emissiva, quaeritur, quanam sit haec vis emissiva, utrum scilicet alia sit ac natura, an eadem. Quod si eadem ac natura, eadem redeunt argumenta ex quibus eadem absurda inferuntur. Sin autem alia ac natura, iam concedunt aliud quidpiam in Deo inesse praeter eius naturam, quod quidem, dum alias disputant, potius abiecerint linguas quam pro confesso habeant; deinde nome absurdum est, aliud quid admittere praeter divinam naturam, quod perficiat ipsam divinam naturam sive hypostasim? Imo ne sic quidem duo principia effugient. Nam quod ex patre et matre gigni-tur, id ex eorum generandi facultate prodit vel per generandi facultatem, quae utrique com-munitis est, licet modis differat; nihilo tamen secius ex duabus est hypostasibus duoque habet generationis suae principia, ut nemo prorsus ininitias iverit. Quare ipse Spiritus sanctus, si ex Patre Filioque per virtutem emissivam progrediatur, duo habebit suae existentiae principia.

At res creatae, inquam, quae oriuntur ex Patre et Filio et Spiritu sancto per creatricem eorumdem virtutem, ex uno sunt Deo et conditore unumque habent principium. Patrem et Filium et Spiritum sanctum. Quid igitur prohibet, quominus Spiritus sanctus, dum ex Patre Filioque procedit tanquam ex uno Deo ac prolatore, unum etiam habeat principium Patrem et Filium?

Expedis nos, o bone, omni negotio, dum Spiritum sanctum in rebus creatis numeras, teque ipse Pneumatomachum aperte declaras. Si enim eadem plane ratione ex Patre et Filio et Spiritu sancto creatura oriatur ac Spiritus sanctus ex Patre et Filio, quid aliud erit Spiritus sanctus nisi creatura? At ego contrarium in te retorquens dicam verendum, cum semel ita se habeat creatio, non ita se habere Spiritum sanctum. Nam quod per creationem ex duobus multise producit, id tanquam ex uno produci dicere licet, si spectes creationis rationem, non solum in divina rerum productione, in qua una eademque habetur et voluntas et mens et sapientia et virtus et efficientia, verum etiam in ea quae inter nos homines efficitur. Etenim una eademque est in multis diversisque artificibus ratio artis: quatenus artifices, omnes unum sunt, atque ideo quod a multis efficitur, id ab uno effici unumque habere principium recte dixeris. At vero quod naturaliter ex duobus existentiam habet, id nemo prorsus unquam dixerit ex uno esse: nequit enim fieri, ut ambo eodem plane modo ad existentiam producendam conferant. Quare Latini ipsi fatentur, aliter ex Patre, aliter ex Filio procedere Spiritum, ab hoc nimirum immediate, ab illo mediate. Quocirca nullo prorsus pacto effugient dualitatem principii, nisi in multa alia absurda velint incidere.

Sed quidam, aiunt, impedit quominus duo sint principia, alterum tamen ita subter alterum, ut ex duobus unum fiat? Id ipse Gregorius Theologus alibi divisse comperitur: « Ex principio principium ».

Si eo modo dicis principia, ut alterum sit propius, alterum remotius, haud scio an potius unum futura sint, eo quod alterum sub altero habeatur, quam duo, propterea quod alterum ab altero valde differt. Rem diligenter considera. Alterutrum eorum alterius principium erit et magis et minus, partim quidem magis, partim vero minus. Ac propius quidem magis erit principium eo ipso, quod est propius; remotius vero item magis, quia in se continet propius. Quae igitur sic differunt, quomodo unum erunt principium? Quis unquam dixerit Adamum et Seth unum esse principium Enos? Quamquam horum uterque principium est, alter propius, alter remotius. Quomodo igitur ex his duobus unum erit principium? Ecquid eorum tolerabimus blasphemiam, qui Spiritum tam procul a paterna hypostasi collocant, ut quasi nepotem eum asserant? Et tamen de eo dicitur: *Qui ex Patre procedit*²⁸; item: « Spiritus qui ex paterna hypostasi procedit »²⁹. Ceterum quod Theologus dixit, id dixit comparate ad creaturas, sicut dicimus lumen de lumine, Deum de Deo, bonum de bono: quae omnia cum ipse sit perinde ac Pater, unus cum eo Deus est, unum lumen, unus bonus, unum principium rerum omnium. Omnia enim, ait³⁰, per eum facta sunt, et sine ipso factum est nihil quod factum est. Quare quod factum non est, id profecto ex ipso non est, neque per ipsum: id autem Spiritus est sanctus. Hanc esse significationem eorum quae Theologus dixit, ex his constat, quae idem alibi dicit:

« Quod principii expers est, et principium, et id, quod cum principio est, unus est Deus ». Non dixit quod ex principio, sed quod cum principio, id nimirum quod ex eo prodit, quod caret principio. Et sane si plane existimasset Filium esse Spiritus principium, ubinam opportunius id dixisset, o impudentissimi omnium mortalium? Verum neque hunc neque alium quempiam theologorum nostrorum id docuisse constat, licet vos cavillando tempus omne consumatis.

2. « Spiritus », ut ait theologus Nyssenus¹, qui ex paterna procedit hypostasi ». Quod si ille etiam ex Filii hypostasi procedat, quid aliud quam ex duabus procedit hypostasibus? Quod vero procedit ex duabus hypostasibus, quid aliud, nisi quod duo habet suae existentiae principia? Non igitur principii dualitatem Latini effugient, quamdiu Spiritum sanctum etiam ex Filio procedere affirmaverint.

3. Si ut ex Patre Filius, sic Spiritus etiam ex Patre, quidni Spiritus fuerit etiam Filius? Quod differat existendi modo secundum theologos : quippe non Filii more, nec per generationem Spiritus ex Patre prodit. Si ergo Spiritus ex Patre procedens Filius non est, quamnam aliam distinctionem ista accuratorem quaeremus inter Filium et Spiritum, tum respectu ad Patrem, tum mutuo inter se? Nam si id quod ex eodem prodit, aliud Filius est, aliud non Filius, sed aliud quiddam, liquet ambo distingui a Patre quidem habitudinibus ratione perinde ac se ad principium habent ea quae ex principio sunt: a se invicem vero, oppositione contradictionis. Perspicuum enim est et Filium esse et Filium non esse sibi contradictorie opponi. Non ergo ad istos distinguendos, Filium inquam ac Spiritum, requiritur oppositio relationis, si modo per oppositionem contradictionis satis distinguantur.

4. Latini nolentes sequi theologiae principia passim apud omnes pro confessis habita, sed alia excogitantes, quibus suam ipsi tuentur causam, non eadem qua nos ratione ea distinguunt quae Deo congruunt, dicendo nimirum alia esse communia, alia vero propria divinarum personarum; sed alio quodam modo nuper inducto alia dicunt esse propria, alia communia, alia communissima: scilicet quae uni personae competunt, ea vocant propria; quae duabus, communia; quae tribus simul, communissima. Atque haec quidem insolita esse et a Latinis more suo novissime creata, ex ipsis vocibus liquet. Sed videamus quaeenam sint quae ab eis dicuntur communia, non communissima. Ac Filio quidem et Spiritui commune esse aiunt esse a Patre, nimirum esse a causa; item mitti ab eo, et alia quaecumque huius generis; Patri vero et Filio, Spiritum mittere et profundere et scaturire, et si quid est eiusmodi; quae verba, ut asserunt, idem significant atque essentialiter emittere Spiritum.

Rem igitur penitus perpendamus. Si quidem esse a causa, cum de Deo dicitur, aliud quiddam denotaret praeter gigni et procedere, liceret sane dicere hoc commune esse duabus illis personis; sin autem nequeamus, ne cogitando quidem, de alterutra earum sumere illud esse a causa, quin originis modus intelligatur (altera enim est a causa per generationem, altera per processionem), eo fit ut esse a causa nomine quidem unum, re vero ipsa duo signi-ficet, tum id quod generatione, tum id quod processione productum est : quae quidem propria etiam utriusque dicimus. Non igitur duae illae personae aliud quidpiam commune habent respectu ad Patrem praeter suam cuiusque propria, quibus ipsae tum a Patre, tum inter se distinguuntur. Quod vero spectat ad mittendi vocabulum et ad alia eiusmodi, eo potissimum quidem beneplacitum denotatur secundum Gregorium Theologum¹, tum ut ad primam causam omnia, quae ipsius sunt, referantur, tum ne Dei adversarii videantur. Deinde cum temporale quidpiam significet quod aliquando et ad aliquid fit, illud haud recte in divinis proprietatibus numeraverimus, quas et principii et temporis expertes esse oportet. Idipsum etiam dicendum est de vocabulo mittere, videlicet cum et ipsum temporale aliquid innuat, quod aliquando et ad aliquid et propter aliquid fit, haud scio an recte ad notandum quidpiam Patri et Filio proprium respectu ad Spiritum usurpari possit; multum vero abest ut idem sit atque illa Spiritus proessio, quae principio et causa caret. Praeterea ne ipse quidem Spiritus mittendi facultate privatur, prout liquet ex his, quae propheta Filii nomine dicit²: Domini misit me et Spiritus eius. Quod si Filium, qui homo erat, a Spiritu missum esse dixeris, undenam id demonstras? Aut proba, aut sophisticae ne disputes. Quamquam sane divus Chrysostomus in homilia de Spiritu sancto ostendit ex ipsis prophetae Isaiae verbis locum illum a Patre ipso usurpari, huncque missum esse a Filio ac Spiritu contendit³. Ergo mittere res est commississima, non communis, ut videtur Latinis; neque igitur sempiterna Spiritus sancti prolatio Patri Filioque communis est. Insuper minime mirandum est, quod Filio ac Spiritui commune quid congruat respectu ad Patrem. Hic enim non est principium tantum, verum etiam principio et causa caret; illi vero principium habent Patrem, et ambo quidem. Patri vero et Filio undenam tribuerimus quidpiam commune quod Spiritū quoque non competat? Hoc enim non patitur magnus Dionysius qui clara voce clamat: « Quae Patri et Filio communes sunt, ea et copulatum et coniuncte sancto Spiritū sermo divinitus traditus adscribit », et Gregorius Theologus^b: « Omnia quaecumque Pater habet, Filii sunt, excepta causa; quidquid item Filius habet, idem quoque Spiritus est, si generationem excipias ».

Sed de missione accuratius est disquiren-dum. Cognitus quidem fuerat Pater in Testamento veteri; oportebat autem et Filium cognitum fieri in novo. Quare illud sibi vult Filium missum fuisse, nimirum quasi mani-festatum a Patre in mundum. Rursus, Filio cognito, oportebat cognitum fieri etiam Spiritum sanctum. Quare a Patre et Filio, qui iam praeogniti fuerant, missus esse dicitur, id est manifestatus. Quoniam enim alia Dei missio legatiōve esse poterit, cum ille ubique adsit nec locum mutet? Propterea ait: Si abiero, mittam eum ad vos. Id vero nequam aeter-nam processionem significat; non enim dicit: « Si ego non abiero, non producam Paracle-tum; sin autem abiero, tunc eum producam »; sed dicit: « Cum ipse e conspectu vestro dis-cessero, gratiam ac virtutem illius vobis mani-festabo ».

Item, cum a Deo alienum sit se loco movere (id enim proprium est corporum), si Filius quidem mitti dicitur, id corporalem eius in mundo praesentiam declarat (Misit enim, inquit, Deus Filium suum in mundum, factum ex muliere); si vero Spiritus sanctus, id gratiam ipsius indicat et efficientiam, non ipsam sub-

Hanc autem ab illa differre testatur divus Chrysostomus, qui in suis in Evangelium secundum Iohannem homiliis ita dicit¹: « Spiritus gratiam Scriptura modo ignem, modo aquam vocat, demonstrans, non essentiae esse haec nomina, sed efficientiae ». Et rursus: « Per Spiritum hic operationem intelligit. Ipsa enim est, quae dividitur, ipsa igitur et quae mittitur. Mittitur autem a Patre per Filium in sancto Spiritu, cum Trinitati sit communis, seu potius una eademque ». Nihil ergo Patri et Filio commune inest, quod non congruat etiam Spiritui sancto, prout inelytus Dionysius edisserit.

5. « Spiritus », ait theologus Nysenus², « qui ex Patris substantia procedit ». Quis exinde non videt Spiritum emittere Patris esse hypostaticam sive personalem proprietatem? Quemadmodum enim dum dicimus ab Unigeniti hypostasi carnem fuisse susceptam, ostendimus Patrem et Spiritum susceptae carnis participes non fuisse; ita quoque, dum dicimus a Patris hypostasi emitti Spiritum sanctum, haud iure id etiam Filio tribuerimus. Aut ergo Latini ostendant unum theologum qui asserat, etiam ex Filii hypostasi fieri eiusmodi emissionem, aut plane exinde perspicuum fiet, ex solo Patre Spiritum sanctum procedere.

6. Latini, dum tertium post Patrem et Filium esse Spiritum sanctum pro confesso habent, hoc ordine ostendi arbitrantur, etiam ex Filio Spiritum sanctum procedere. Si enim, aiunt, non haberet ordinem etiam ad Filium pro ea habitudine, qua ad illum refertur, non tertius diceretur, nec post eum veniret. Verum, o viri praestantes, ego ad eos dixerim, si a Patre secundus est Filius (id enim habitudo mutua postulat), neque aliud quidquam intercidit, quid sane aliud fuerit Spiritus sanctus nisi tertius? Etenim primus procul dubio non erit; secundus autem ex necessitate Filius est; ter-beatam illam Trinitatem integram facit. Qua-propter etiam hic ordo, ut opinor, a theologis adhiberi solet, ne Spiritus, si post Patrem

7. Magnum aliquid sibi conferri arbitrantur Latini ad suam causam stabilendam, quod Spiritus sanctus dicatur Spiritus Filii; ego vero adiciam eundem dici proprium Filii et non alienum a Filio, et cetera eiusmodi. Num igitur eapropter ex eodem etiam procedit? At id non patitur primum quidem Theodoretus, qui blasphemam et impiam huiusmodi opinionem existimat¹; deinde et ipse divinissimus Cyrillus, dum dicit²: « Nullo modo patimur concuti « fidem a sanctis Patribus nostris definitam « vel fidei symbolum; neque etiam nobis aut « aliis permittimus vel unam vocem earum « quae ibi positae sunt, immutare; non enim « ipsi locuti sunt, sed Spiritus sanctus, qui « procedit quidem ex Deo Patre, non alienus « autem est a Filio secundum essentiae ratio- « nem ». Audiscne, quam ratione dicatur Filii Spiritus et proprius eiusdem et non ab illo alienus? Secundum essentiae, ait, rationem, nimirum ut consubstantialis Filio. Dicit autem et Basilius Magnus capite XVIII ad Amphilo- chium³: « Quin et Spiritus Christi dicitur, tanquam illi natura coniunctus ». Quos igitur praestantiores divinis istis theologis interpretes cum apostolicorum tum propriorum suorum verborum assignabimus?

Spiritus sanctus tum advenerat. Si enim, inquit, non abiero, Paraclitus non veniet ad eos. Idem testatur divus Chrysostomus in Commentariis ad Evangelium secundum Ioannem his verbis³: « Quidam dicunt, Christum « non Spiritum dedisse, sed illos per insulla« tionem ad eum recipiendum idoneos fecisse.
 « Nec tamen aberraverit quis si dixerit illos « multiplex donum ». Nec quidquam mirum, quandoquidem et a Moysse Deus de Spiritu de-trahens ceteris donavit⁴. In Domino autem Christo omnis Spiritus gratia requievit; non enim ad mensuram dat illi Deus Spiritum⁵: ideo et ex ea aliis donavit et per eam divina prodigia operatus est. In Spiritu enim Dei, inquit, eicio daemonia.

 Etenim Filius ipse imago Patris dicitur, non tam quod ad illum ut ad causam referatur, quam quod in seipsum Patrem praeinestet et exprimat, ut aliquo in loco ad Philippum ait⁶: Qui videt me, videt et Patrem. Est itaque Imago Filii etiam Spiritus sanctus, non quod originem ab eo sortiatur, sed quod Filius aliunde cognosci non possit nisi per Spiritum sanctum. Nemo enim, ait⁷, potest dicere Domi-

 Chrysostomus², « id est, inquit, verbis meis eo ipso Patrem clarificavit, qui veterem illam legem considerat (nam *ego te, inquit³, clarifi-

 Filii opus similiter perfectit. Multa enim habeo, Patre ponitur, sed ex Patre, ut aiunt, per Filium conficitur. Patet ergo illud per Filium aliud quiddam significare atque illud ex Filio: quanquam sane ne de processione quidem, sed de largitione illud dicitur. Ait enim Ioannes Damascenus: « Porro Spiritum « Filii quidem Spiritum nominamus, ex Filio « autem non dicimus; per Filium vero mani-« festatum esse et nobis impertiri confitemur ».

 Quo discrimine clare ostendit, aliud quiddam profecto dictione illa per Filium significari quam quod Latini volunt. Quod si id interdum de essentiali etiam Spiritus processione dica-tur, rursum ipsos theologos invitabimus ad sua verba interpretanda. Dicit enim in libris adversus Eunomium Gregorius Nyssenus^{*}: « Spiritus sanctus per Filium coniunctum « intelligitur, quin Filio posterior existat, ita « ut aliquando Unigenitus sine Spiritu cogite« tur; sed ex Deo universorum et ipse princi-« pium suae existentiae habens, unde et « unigenitum lumen est, qui per verum lumen « eluxit ». Quo in loco verba illa quin posterior existat, idem plane sibi volunt quod illa per Filium, quae idem significant atque cum Filio, prout alibi diserte tradit^{}: « Per ipsum vero « et cum ipso, antequam velut medium inter« veniat nescio quod inane et non subsistens, « Spiritus sanctus procedit ». Et Chrysostomus explanans apostolicum illud dictum^{}: Ut innolescat nunc principatibus et potestatibus per Ecclesiam multiformis sapientia Dei, illud per Ecclesiam pro locutione cum Ecclesia accepit^{*}; neque enim Ecclesia angelos docuit.
 Eodem igitur modo et hic illud per Filium accipiendum est: sic enim se res habet: Cum Spiritus sanctus ex Patre essentialiter pro-cedere dicatur, ne pro altero filio habeatur (nam Pater respondentem sibi filium requirit), idcirco illud per Filium additum est, cum Fili interpositio, ut rursus sanctus Gregorius alibi ait¹, et proprietatem ipsi servet Unigeniti, et ab naturali ad Patrem habitudine Spiritum non excludat. Propterea etiam Filium alibi dicit *proxime a primo*², nam Filii appellatio infert Patrem; sanctum vero Spiritum hauquaquam dixit non proxime a primo (sic enim posterior existeret), sed per illud quod proxime est a primo; hoc autem tum communionem et mutuam habitudinem, ut dictum est, ostendit, tum amborum pari honore parique natura ex Patre processionem. « ita substantiae cognitionem omnis exper« tem differentiae demonstrarent ». Hic quasi ex industria Latini contraria eximio Maximo via incedunt. Nam hic quidem cum illius temporis Romanis et cum ipso papa voculam ex ad voculam per transfert, haecque substantiae cognitionem quovis discrimine vacuam decla-rari statuit; illi vero cum Patrum dictis non parere, ne dicam plane contraria iisdem sentire parvi reputant, illud per Filium idem sibi velle atque ex Filio arbitrantur, Spiritusque causam Filio tribuunt, quam ab eo viri illi persus segregarunt. Quid hac contentione possit fieri inverecundius?

II. Quae divinae naturae congruunt, alia singulariter dumtaxat semper dicuntur, licet in tribus personis intelligantur, ut Deus, con-ditor, rex, bonus, et si quid huiusmodi (unum enim dicimus Deum, unum conditorem, unum regem, unum bonum, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum sanctum); alia vero pluraliter sem-per, licet duabus tantum personis communia, ut esse a causa, ubi de Filio ac Spiritu sermo est: duo enim esse a causa, non unum dicimus. Quae cum ita se habeant, quoniam Latini etiam deitatis principium duabus personis, Patri scilicet et Filio, tribuunt, quaeramus ab eis, ex duabus istis utri illud adscribitur.
 Quod si dixerint posteriori, per se apparebit absurdum: nam duo erunt principia, ut duo ea quae ex principio sunt, et ita principii dualitati aditus patebit et celeberrima principii unitas e medio tolletur. Sin autem priori, primo quaeritur, quoniam pacto? Cum enim illa sint et communia et naturalia, ad tres personas ex aequo pertinent: deinde vel hac ratione iterum in idem incommodum reci-dent: nam unum illud principium, qua est genitor et prolator, id est Pater solus, non idem numero est atque unum illud principium, qua est prolator tantum, id est Pater et Filius, ut ipsi asserunt. Duae ergo vel hoc pacto habentur causae et duo principia, et unde-quaque eos circumstat principii dualitas.

12. Deitatis principium, ut ipsi concesserint Latini, aliter atque aliter congruit Patri et Filio, non vero uno eodemque modo, sed Patri quidem, quatenus est genitor et prolator, Filio vero, qua prolator duntaxat. Differentia autem secundum Patres numerum secum invehit: duo ergo dantur deitatis principia, atque ita principii unitas a Latinis submovetur.

13. Thomas Latinorum doctor, cum existimet aliquam oppositionem requiri ad personas divinas distinguendas, quia, inquit, materialis distinctio in divinis locum non habet, oppositionem relationis solum rationem distinguendarum personarum esse vult, cum alia oppositio nequaquam habeatur. Quare ostendendum est nobis magis idoneam ad eas distinguendas esse oppositionem contradictionis, qua sola secundum theologos omnes divinae personae inter se discernuntur. Ac primum quidem illud perspicuum est in divinis, personae cuilibet existendi modum satis esse, ut ipsa ab altera distinguatur. Porro existendi modos in divinis personis theologo statuunt ingenuum et genitum et procedens, seu, ut universalis dicam, principio carere et a principio esse, quae sibi invicem, ut patet, contradictorie opponuntur: nam habere principium et non habere principium contradictoria sunt. Itaque Pater a Filio et a Spiritu hoc pacto contradictorie distinguitur, Filius vero et Spiritus aliter ab altero propriis itidem existendi modis. Nam oriri per generationem et oriri non per generationem, sed per processionem, ipsis sunt subsistendi modi et sibi mutuo contradictorie opponuntur, idque de Spiritu affirmat Gregorius theologus¹: « Προhuic vero processione competit), differentia autem secundum Patres numerum secum infert, duo certe erunt a principio, nimirum Filius ac Spiritus. Eodem plane modo, si dei-tatis principium non perinde Patri ac Filio competit (alter enim est genitor et prolator, alter vero prolator tantum), duo utique erunt deitatis principia, cum differentia sit causa numeri, id est dualitatis, ex theologorum sententia.

15. Si Deo praestantius est causam esse deitatis, quam rerum creatarum esse causam, quomodo Spiritus sanctus, ut qui eius, quod in Patre ac Filio praestantius est, particeps non sit iuxta Latinos, inferior non erit dignitate et divinitate? Si enim deitatis esse causam res est plane communicabilis, cur ipse Spiritus in huius partem non venit? Sin autem prorsus est incommunicabilis, utpote Patris proprietates, perinde atque ab nullo principio esse, Filius igitur ne ullo quidem modo eius particeps fiet, licet Latini id summe contendunt.

16. Nos quidem dnm Filio adimimus Spiritus causam esse, cum neutiquam minore Deo ac Patre dignitate facimus: neque enim deitatis causam esse quidquam communicabile asserimus, ut nec Patris proprietatem principio carenti ipsamve paternitatem. Latini vero, cum illud communicabile putent, idemque dein Spiritui abdicent, hunc profecto necessitate coacti inferioriorem reddunt Patre et Filio deitate ac dignitate: atque tum propter hoc, tum propter alia, in Spiritum sanctum blasphemare multifariam coguntur.

17. Spiritus sanctus, si a Patre et Filio oriatur, ab eis oritur aut quatenus sunt distincti, aut quatenus sunt uniti. Quod si quatenus sunt distincti illi duo ab ambobus procedat, cum distincti sint et duo secundum hypostasies, ex duabus igitur hypostasibus Spiritus sanctus procedit, ac proinde, ut plane necesse est, ex duobus principiis. Sin autem quatenus sunt uniti, primum quidem iam non ab illis prodit idem Spiritus, quatenus sunt distincti: neque igitur ex eorum hypostasibus prodit, nec scilicet ex hypostasi Patris, neque ex hypostasi Filii. Atqui hoc verum esse, illud vero falsum, Gregorius Nyssenus alicubi ostendit: haec enim totidem verbis habet: « Spiritus qui ex hypostasi paterna procedit », Deinde quidam fuerit illud, quatenus sunt riter; item Filius dicitur Filius et solum et solus et proprie et singulariter; ac Spiritus eadem ratione dicitur Spiritus sanctus. Pari modo et principii expers Pater sive ingenitus dicitur solum et solus et proprie et singulariter; itemque principium simili ratione; reliquae ergo personae sunt tantummodo a principio et solae et proprie et singulariter. Cum enim duo dumtaxat sint, principium et id quod a principio est, si rationem principii solus Pater habet, profecto esse a principio solae habebunt reliquae personae et solum et singulariter. Nota enim, vocem solum semper dici comparate ad attributum; namque Pater solum est Pater, non autem etiam Filius; item Filius, solum Filius, non autem etiam Pater; et Spiritus sanctus, solum Spiritus, non vero Pater vel Filius. Ac solum principii expers Pater, non vero a principio et causam habens : quapropter solus etiam causa erit, non vero a causa. Reliquae ergo personae erunt solum a principio, quin ulla earum principium sit. Si enim alterutra sit etiam principium, illud solum tollitur, neque iam habetur solum et proprie principium, neque solum et proprie id quod est a principio, contra ac prorsus necesse esse antea demonstratum est. Namque oppositio causa est distinctionis fatentibus ipsis Latinis, et ambo opposita in unam divinarum personarum cadere prorsus nequeunt. Alterum enim eorum non proprie erit, ac propterea ne plane quidem erit. Cum his consentanea sunt sanctorum dicta, Damasceni videlicet in capitibus operis theologici dicentis : « Solus causa est Pater »; Theodori itidem Studitiae carentis^b : « Solius solus genitor unigeniti Filii Pater, et « solum solus lumen luminis splendor, ac « solummodo lumen Dei sanctus Spiritus, « Domini Dominus, is qui revera est ». Non ergo Filius rationem causae habebit, cum solum a causa debeat quidem esse, ac dumtaxat Filius, perinde ac Spiritus sanctus solum solius Dei Patris Spiritus.

19. Queramus a Latinis : Si quaecumque Patris sunt, Filium habere vultis, cur non etiam Patrem eundem facitis? Quia, aiunt, id oppositum rationi Filii; oppositio vero eiusmodi est, ut personas secernat, non coniungat, ne confusio in eis oriatur. Si igitur ratione oppositionis divinae personae distinguantur, ut vos putatis, o sapientissimi, quin ambo opposita in unquamque earum convenire simul possint, profecto neque causam esse neque esse a causa in eandem cadet (haec siquidem sunt etiam opposita), nec Filius simul erit a causa et causa, ut ne Filius quidem simul est ac Pater. Nos vero ab illis postulabimus, ut evidentissime ostendant, num ne etiam alicubi repererint per Patrem prodire seu procedere Spiritum sanctum. Namque si idem valeat utraque dictio ac promiscue usurpetur, hoc quoque dici oportuit, quemadmodum, ubi de creatione agitur, passim occurrit^a: Paulus apostolus Iesu Christi per voluntatem Dei. Et rursus^b: Paulus apostolus non ab hominibus, neque per homines, sed per Deum Patrem et Dominum Iesum Christum. Et alio loco^c: Poscedi hominem per Deum. Et iterum^d: Nonne per Deum explicatio eorum? In summa, si quaecumque de divino Spiritu dicuntur, ad Patrem et Filium aequae referrentur, deberemus omnia utrique ex aequo attribuere, processionemque ex ambobus pariter profiteri; sin autem alia Patri, alia Filio seorsum attribuan-

21. Quando verba considero, quibus sancti constanter utuntur, dum de divino Spiritu sermonem habent, mihi videntur Latinorum fautores ne logicum quidem nexum orationisve contextum percipere, nedum divinorum dogmatum peritiam Patrumve mentem, qua illi res Spiritus ipso Spiritu favente investigarunt. Quid enim dicent, cum sancti doctores Spiritus sancti relationem ad Patrem et Filium coniunctionibus distinguant? Cum alius quidem dicat: « Ex Deo universorum et ipse existentiam habet, per Filium vero spectandum se « praebuit » videlicet hominibus; alius: « Ex « Patre quidem procedit, in Filio vero manet »; alius: « A Filio quidem dependet, quocum sine « ulla distantia mente comprehenditur: ex Patre « vero, ut principio, suspensum habet esse, unde « et procedit »; alius: « Procedit quidem ex « Deo ac Patre, verum non est alienus a Filio « secundum substantiae rationem. » Num adhuc asserere audeant, unam solum ex ambobus esse Spiritus processionem? foret, si idem valeant dictiones, eas conjunctionibus disiungere, ac si quis dicat, caelos a Deo et Patre quidem fuisse firmatos, per Filium vero compactos? Enimvero qui tali per partes figura utitur, profecto alterum removet ab me : per illud quidem declarans creationem et ortum secundum carnem, per hoc vero sempiternam generationem. Item, cum in evangelio Patrem suum vocasset solum verum Deum (dicit enim¹ : Ut cognoscant te solum Deum verum, et quem misisti Iesum Christum), ne videretur sese a vera deitate excludere, Ioannes, is qui haec scripserat, in sua epistola ait de Filio² : Hic est verus Deus et vita aeterna. Similiter, quia Spiritus Patris dicitur secundum naturalem cognationem ac donationem nobis conferendam (dicit enim³ : Non enim vos estis qui loquimini, sed Spiritus Patris vestri, qui loquitur in vobis), ne quis arbitretur eum a Filio esse alienum nec pariter ab eo itidem dari, Spiritus etiam Filii dicitur. Nam dicit Apostolus⁴ : Misit Deus Spiritum Filii sui in corda vestra. Itaque, si illud Ex Patre procedere, eiusmodi fuisset, ut etiam ex Filio eundem procedere subintelligendum esset, profecto non omisisset id alio in loco edicere dictionemque corrigere, qui hominum saluti prospicere solet; sed aut per seipsum omnino aut per suos discipulos id manifesto patefecisset. Nunc vero, cum nihil dixerit, liquet, cum eum idcirco id non dixisse, quod non ita res se habeat. Quapropter Ioannes Damascenus ait⁵ : « Spiritum Filii Spiritum nominamus; sed eum ex Filio non dicimus ». Et divinus Apostolus ait⁶ : Etiam si angelus de caelo evangelizet vobis praeter id quod accepistis, anathema sit.

lator nominatur iuxta Scripturam dicentem: τὸν τῷ Πατρί luminum. Si igitur Filium non reddidit patrem patris nominis, ne spiritaliter quidem proprietatem cum eodem communicabit, ne Filius appareat simul et filius et pater, ut nos homines solemus, atque ideo Spiritus ipse nepos censeatur.

24. Patrem et Filium unam esse causam Spiritus sancti asserunt Latini. Quaeramus igitur ex illis: Ut Pater solus una est causa Spiritus sancti, sic Pater et Filius sunt una causa, an secus? Quod si ita dixerint, cum Pater solus una sit persona, una etiam et Pater et Filius persona erunt, atque irreperit contractio Sabelliana. Sin autem alio modo Pater solus una dicatur causa, alio modo Pater et Filius, ne eos lateat, se vel invitos duas causas principiaque duo clam inferre.

25. Universalem quamdam distinctionis rationem omnibus quae distingui possunt aptare se iactant Latini, dum ea asserunt aut secundum materiam aut secundum unam ex oppositionibus secerni. Ac quidem, licet in rebus creatis comprobaretur huiusmodi doctrina, utrumne ex necessitate esset ad res divinas transferenda (neque enim iisdem et haec et illae rationibus subiiciuntur), nunc quidem mittamus dicere, ac pro suscepto consilio demonstrare, ne de rebus quidem quae nos attingunt quarumque aliquam notitiam habemus, de rebus inquam creatis, necessariam esse hanc doctrinam neque plane veram, non solum quia quod non est universale tanquam universale proponit, verum etiam quia in iis rebus, in quibus materialis vel oppositionis distinctio consideratur, non ipsa materia vel oppositio causam infert distinctionis, sed utraque res iam distincta veluti connexum quiddam sequitur, non inuitur, res distinctas etiam secundum illud distingui, quin pro distinctionis ipsius causa ullo modo haberi possit.

En quomodo se res habet.

Materia per se est indivisibilis; ut enim sine qualitate, sic etiam sine quantitate est; quod vero quantitate caret, indivisibile est; quod autem non potest dividi, id distingui nequit; quod autem suapte natura non dividitur nec distinguitur, id quomodo alteri causam praeberit distinctionis? Quod autem diversitatem non admittit (etenim quaelibet materia cuilibet materiae suapte ratione indifferens est), id quomodo in causa erit ut alia a se invicem diversa sint? Praeterea, si corpus ex materia constans, secundum ipsam materiam in partes quantas dividatur, quarum unaquaeque sumatur ac seorsum ponatur ad ostendendam eandem hanc esse substantiam, non autem illam alteram, id materialis distinctio appellatur. Ex eo tamen neutquam efficitur, ut materia sit causa distinctionis (quomodo enim, cum illa per se sit indistincta?), sed oritur materialis divisio, ex qua ipsa quantitas ad ea, quae distincta sunt, accedit. Similiter, forma non causae est corporibus, cur operentur (qui enim id fieri possit, cum illa suapte natura operatione careat?), sed eius cum materia copula. Neque enim si quid composito competat propter aliquod elementorum quibus constat, id ipsi elemento proprie competet. Non ergo forma principium est operationis, licet corporibus congruat operatio propter formam, neque materia, distinctio, quamvis secundum ipsam compositis sit distinctio. Non ergo si materiae tribuamus causam distinctionis, id recte ei tribuerimus, siquidem pro causa habenda est divisio materialis, in iis rebus, quae materia constant.

Item, in iis rebus, quae materia carent, videndum est num oppositio necessaria sit ad distinctionem efficiendam. Quae in eodem genere dividuntur, contra divisa inter se dicuntur, omnia quidem fortassis, praesertim vero ea quae plurimum inter se distant, vel quae a plurimum distantibus secerantur; verbi gratia, in colore maxime distant album et nigrum, quae etiam contraria appellantur; in animali vero secerantur a maxime distantibus bus, scilicet a rationali et a rationis experte, et homo et equus. Num igitur ea duntaxat inter se distinguuntur, in quibus est oppositio vel contrarietas, an etiam ea quae in medio posita cum ipsis dividuntur? Profecto illa quoque, nam a communi genere omnia pendent, distinguuntur vero suis quaeque discernentibus rationibus, quamvis non plurimum a se invicem distent, aut etiam alterutrum contrariorum potius participant. Et enim quatenam est oppositio fuscii ad rubrum in colore? quatenam equi ad bovem in animali? Verum quoniam ab eodem dividuntur genere, quatenus ab illo dividuntur, eatenus a communi distinguuntur; quatenus vero inter se contra dividuntur, eatenus quoque mutuo inter se haud dubie distinguuntur suis rationibus, quamvis istae haud facile a nobis possint omnes assignari. Non ergo oppositio pro distinctionis causa habenda est ne in hac quidem parte (qui enim id esse possit, cum in plurimis ne locum quidem illa habeat?), sed praecit ipsamet divisio, quae ab eodem genere unumquodque suis rationibus dividit. Quam quidem si quis pro oppositionis causa habuerit, ad veritatem plane accedit.

Inmo vero in individuis eadem omnino distinctionis est ratio. Quid enim aliud, si ne materia quidem illa constent? Quid vero, si ne oppositionem quidem in eis reperire liceat? Num idcirco indistincta nobis erunt unumque numero cuncta evadent? Multa sane istiusmodi monstra ediderit Latinorum ratiocinatio. At ibi etiam divisio unumquodque suis rationibus ab eadem specie discernendae distinctionem infert. Quod vero huiusmodi rationes ignoremus, nihil mirum, ut qui plurimarum quoque specierum rationes haud facile possimus assignare; at vero illud in confesso est, plura ab eodem dividi: quod fieri non posset, nisi tum mutuo inter se, tum ab eo ex quo dividuntur distinguerentur. Proxima ergo ac praecipua distinctionis causa divisio est, non materia vel oppositio, quae quidem neque in omnibus neque proprie per se ad distinguendum aptae sunt. Quin etiam nomen ipsum divisionis, cum affine sit distinctionis nomini, aperte ostendit, huius illam esse causam.

Quid amplius? Eorum quae sunt ad aliquid oppositionem, quam relativam vocant, ad distinguendum aptissimam esse dicunt. Id autem plane inane esse, ne demonstratione quidem indiget. Nam in primis illa origine posterior est ipsa natura: primum enim aliquis homo est, deinde pater: item primum habetur quantitas, postea duplum. Deinde eiusmodi sunt relativa, ut se invicem inferant; quod quidem potius est coniungere quam distinguere. Deinde in idem vel ambo, licet non eadem ratione, convenire possunt: quod profecto a distinctione quam longissime abest. Frustra ergo ac temere tritissimam illam rerum distinguendarum rationem ex materia vel oppositione Latini contorquere solent.

Agedum transferamus nunc doctrinam nostram ad res divinas, in quas, prope dicam, melius quadrat, quam ea quae a Latinis propugnatur. Divisionis perquam similis est diversa ab eodem progressio: nam ipsa divisio quaedam est progressio. Ac quemadmodum ibi ea, quae ab eodem dividuntur, licet nondum ad oppositum locum pervenerint, protinus cadunt in rationes segregantes, quibus distinguuntur tum mutuo inter se tum ab eo, ex quo divisa sunt (secus enim neutiquam dividerentur): sic etiam hic, videlicet in personis divinis, Filius et Spiritus, quod alia atque alia ratione ab eodem Patre procedunt, eo ipso et a Patre et inter se secerantur: ab Patre quidem, quia ex illo sunt (omne enim quod prodit ex aliquo, aliud utique est quam illud, ex quo prodit); ac se invicem vero, quia alio et alio modo, licet is plane nobis ignotus sit atque ineffabilis. Neque igitur oppositione nobis opus est ad distinguendos Filium ac Spiritum, ut Thomas arbitratur, qua ne in rebus quidem creatis opus fuerit: satis est enim ad eos distinguendos diversa utriusque progressio. Idque tum rebus ipsis consentaneum est, tum sanctorum doctrinis, quandoquidem plene illi distinctionem tra-diderunt. Dicit enim theologus Damascenus capite octavo operis thelogici¹ : « Quamquam « Spiritus sanctus ex Patre procedit, non ta-« men generatione, sed processione : alius hic « existendi modus, incomprehensibilis atque « ignotus, ut et Filii generatio. » Gregorius vero theologus² : « Proprietates vero sunt, « Patris quidem, ut intelligatur et dicatur « principii expers et principium; Filii, ut sit « genitus; Spiritus, ut procedat ».

26. Ut nihil Patri suppeditant divinae personae ex eo procedentes ad suam cuiusque existentiam (siquidem totum ab illo perfec-tumque esse habent), sic ne alterutra quidem ad alterius productionem quidquam illi sup-peditat. Neque igitur cum Patre ad Filium generandum particeps et socius est Spiritus sanctus, neque Filius cum Patre ad Spiritum emittendum : perfectissima enim est generandi emittendique actio et una sola ab uno solo utrinque manans ad unum producendum.

27. Ut id quod operatur definite, definitam etiam manifestat actionem, ita quoque definita actio ad definitum aliquod agens refertur.
 Quare, si generare simul et emittere unius Patris definita actio est; emittere vero, non autem generare, definita unius prolationis actio Patris et Filii, quae Latinorum est sententia; generari autem definita itidem Filii actio, perinde ac procedere, Spiritus sancti; quatuor erunt in divinis personis, quae definite agant : unus Pater, unus prolator, alter ab altero numero distinctus, unus Filius, unus Spiritus sanctus. Quatuor vero definite ac distincte agentes quid aliud product nisi quaternitatem personarum loco trinitatis? Frustra ergo Latini suam in Trinitatem venditant fidem, qui eandem ita suis placitis lacerant.

28. Deitatis principium proprium est aut hypostaseon Patris et Filii iuxta Latinos, aut eorum naturae aut actionis cuiusdam. Quod si hypostaseon sit proprium, quomodo non duo erunt principia (duae enim habentur hypostases), eodem plane modo, quo effectum, si duabus hypostasibus competat, duo etiam effecta plane inducit? Sin autem eorum naturae, profecto cum ea adaequabitur, quin quiddam amplius sit: Spiritus enim non est principium. Si ergo quidpiam est Patris et Filii natura, id erit deitatis principium: ac vicissim, si quidpiam deitatis principium, id Patris et Filii natura erit. Ergo Spiritus sanctus sic erit alienus a natura Patris et Filii, ut a ratione principii alienus est. Et Latini Macedonium adhuc arguunt? Si denique actionis cuiusdam, videndum utrum una numero ea sit, an duplex. Si duplex, iterum necesse est, ut duo sint principia: sin autem una, item quaerendum est, utrum personalis ea sit, an naturalis. Quod si naturalis, Spiritus a naturali aliqua actione alienus erit, ac proinde etiam a natura: sin vero personalis, ad unam personam definite referetur: siquidem prorsus necesse est, ut una numero personalis actio, si ad unum quiddam efficiendum tendat, ex una sola persona emanet. Frustra igitur Latini unam numero spirativam actionem proprietatemque Patri ac Filio tribuant.

29. Una numero ac simplex actio, quae ad unum tendit effectum, ad unum quoque inter utrumque una numero actio, nimirum AC. Dico agens A unum quoque esse numero. Ne sit sane, sed fac duo esse, AB. Istud B aut pars erit ipsius A, aut seorsum positum. Quod si pars eius, non aliud erit praeter illud ipsum, sed unum cum illo, atque ita totum illud iterum erit unum numero. Si vero seorsum ponatur, finge primum illud infra esse. Actio ab A ad C fluens aut aequabilis et continua erit, aut inaequalis. Quod si aequabilis et continua, cum una numero sit, manifestum est, nihil subsidii ipsi allaturum illud B in medio positum, sed aut nihil acturum, aut saltem non acturum in C, sicut A. Sin vero inaequalis, plane liquet, eandem incrementum quoddam suscepturam, ubi cum B coiverit, ac fortio-rem evasuram quam prius, ut fluvius aliquis, in quem alterum flumen confluxerit. Iam vero id non est unius solius ac continuæ actionis proprium, nam abruptio fit inter agendum et accessio actionis a B exeuntis, atque ita duplex actio efficitur, non autem simplex neque una. Idem quoque, si B supra A ponatur, eveniet. Etenim ponatur ex obliquo illius A : tum multo evidentius perspicuum fit, duas esse actiones, alteram quidem ab A in C, alteram vero a B in idem C. Itaque fieri nequit, ut una numero actio ad duo agenda referatur, perinde atque impossibile est unius lineae duos ex alterutra parte haberi terminos. Una igitur numero actio ad unum numero agens refertur. Finge modo agens A esse et Patrem et prolatorem: deinde C, in quod fertur actio, Spiritus sancti subsistentiam; tum in medio inter utrumque, actionem illam spiritalivam, unam, simplicem, sempiternam; demum B esse Filium. Patet ergo ad unum Patrem, non autem ad Filium referri unam illam personalem actionem, qua emittitur Spiritus. Hoc ipse Aristoteles libro quinto Naturalis auscultationis disertis verbis enuntiat. Ait enim: « Una numero actio unius est numero ». Et in nono eiusdem operis: « Ubi unus motus, ibi quoque unus movens unumque mobile; si quam enim rem aliud atque aliud moveat, totus motus non est continuus ».

30. Ex Patre esse Filio ac Spiritu communitur competit, ut Gregorius Theologus docet. Atqui si Filius quidem immediate sit ex Patre, quin ullam aliam habeat causam, Spiritus vero non immediate, sed alteram summetipsius causam habeat Filium, iam non commune eis erit ex Patre esse, cuius non aequaliter participes fiant. Itaque aut Theologus mentiatur oportet, aut, si secus dicendum, plane omnino mentiuntur Latini, dum Spiritus causam Filio tribuunt.

31. Spiritus sancti modum existendi ac proprietatem theologi asserunt non simpliciter procedere, sed ex Patre procedere. Iam vero si is est illius existendi modus eaque proprie-tas, illud quo dicitur ex Filio procedere, aut in cassum ei congruit, aut aliquid addit ad existentiam, duplicemque reddit eius proprietatem: critique, cum proprium oporteat in id recipiari, cuius est proprium, quin abundet nec deficiat, et ipse duplex. Ergo ex solo Patre Spiritus sanctus procedit.

32. Quando unum dicimus rerum creatarum principium Patrem et Filium et Spiritum sanctum, exploratum est id a nobis dici per comparationem divinae naturae cum reliquis, nam illa una est, haec vero multae ac diversae. Eodem plane modo, quando unum dicimus Deitatis principium, constat nos id dicere habito respectu unius personae ad ceteras. Ac quemadmodum nulla res creata in unum principium propter creationem assumitur, ita neutra ex duabus personis in unum principium ratione Deitatis assumenda est. Namque satius est unum plurium esse principium, quam plura unius. Solus ergo Pater unicum est principium Filii ac Spiritus, ut sola etiam Trinitas unicum est principium omnium rerum creatarum. Quod quidem divus ipse Dionysius aperte dicit: "Solus fons superessentialis deitatis est Pater".

effectum. Sit idem agens ubi A, actiones vero eiusdem eodem tempore emissae altera quidem in B, altera vero ab hac diversa in C. Dico, etiam C diversum esse a B. Nam si idem esset, admissum cum illo congrueret; et actio, quae in ipsum fertur, conveniret cum actione in B; ergo una eademque esset. At vero eas fingebamus duas esse atque inter se diversas; ergo ipsum C diversum erit a B. Fac modo A esse Patrem, qui semperiter ac naturaliter operatur; B vero, Filium; C, Spiritum sanctum; ex actionibus vero inter se diversis eam quidem, quae in B fertur, Filii generationem esse; quae autem in C, divini Spiritus processionem. Patet diversum esse a Filio Spiritum sanctum, quia actiones, quae ad alterutrum constituendum natae sunt, inter se differunt; neque iam nobis opus erit alia distinctione inter Filium ac Spiritum sanctum, cum ipsae diversae operationes ac processionis per sese queant eos distinguere.

3]. Querunt a nobis qui cum Latinis sentiunt, utrum cum sua virtute et sapientia Pater emittat Spiritum sanctum, an sine sapientia ac virtute, eo fine, ut si alterum negantes primum affirmaverimus, ad suam nos opinionem adigant: nam si Filius sapientia est ac virtus Patris, Pater profecto cum Filio emittit Spiritum sanctum, non autem ipse solus. Ac Patrem quidem cum Filio emittit Spiritum sanctum, id est cum Verbo et sapientia et virtute, ne nos quidem negabimus. Etenim Spiritus sanctus una cum Verbo prodit, ut aiunt divi Patres, simul eum comitans ac patelaciens, adeo ut nec Verbum sit absque Spiritu, nec Spiritus prodeat sine Verbo. Verumtamen non ita, ut Filius ipse causa sit existentiae Spiritus, sicut ne Spiritus quidem est Filii causa. Quae enim simul et eadem ratione ex quopiam prodeunt, horum alterum alterius causa esse non potest. Non ergo necesse est, Spiritum sanctum, ut cum Filio prodire, sic etiam ex Filio prodire; sin secus, nihil erit discriminis inter eum et res creatas quae itidem per Dei Verbum et virtutem ac sapientiam conditae sunt. Omnia enim, inquit¹, per ipsum facta sunt, et sine ipso factum est nihil, quod factum est. Quod ergo factum non est, id non magis per ipsum esse habeat necesse est. Deinde Filius non perinde sapientia est et virtus Patris, ut est Filius vel Verbum. Sic est enim Filius et Verbum Patris, ut Pater ipse non sit nec Filius nec Verbum (siquidem filius ad patrem refertur, verbum vero ad dicentem): sapientia autem et virtus Patris sic est, ut Pater etiam sit sapientia et virtus, non autem sapiens dumtaxat ac potens. Est enim sapientia de sapientia et virtus de virtute, ut Deus de Deo et lumen de lumine; dicitur autem sapientia ac virtus Patris, quia tota huius sapientia virtusque penes illum est, ut penes imaginem exemplar. At vero nec Spiritus sanctus minus est sapientia ac virtus, quod nemo Scripturarum peritus negaverit. Haec siquidem nomina communia esse atque essentialia divinarum personarum, non secus atque illae testatur divus Augustinus in opere *de Trinitate*². Cum igitur Spiritus sanctus ex Patre et sapientia et virtus de sapientia et virtute procedat, supervacaneum est atque inane quaerere, utrum cum sua sapientia ac virtute Pater emittat Spiritum sanctum, nisi si quis hunc in creaturam convertere voluerit, prout scriptum est: Deus in sapientia firmavit terram, praeparavit caelos in prudentia. Neque vero sapientiae virtutisque ope Pater devenit ad Spiritus processionem, ut ne ad Filii quidem generationem, neque omnino totius divinitatis ope. Id enim creaturarum proprium est.

Summa theologiae, parte I, q. 49, a. 5, ad 1. — c) Prov. III, 19.

ut aiunt theologi. Immediate igitur atque ex ipsa essentia Patris ambo aequaliter progrediuntur, Filius inquam ac Spiritus sanctus, alter quidem una cum altero, non autem alter ab altero, nec plane alteruter ab alterutro.

35. Si quid de pluribus singulariter in divinis personis dicitur, id aut essentia omnino est aut quiddam essentialia. Ut enim unum plane illud est, quo quaelibet persona a ceteris secernitur, sic etiam unum omnino est, quo illae tres uniantur. Id vero una est numero essentia, aut eorum aliquid, quae eidem essentialiter competunt, verbi gratia, una voluntas, aut una virtus, aut una actio. Filium enim dicimus Deum de Deo, et ambo Deum unum, lumen de lumine, et ambo unum lumen, sapientiam de sapientia, et utrumque unam sapientiam, virtutem de virtute, et utrumque unam virtutem. Neutiquam ergo unum esse possunt divinae personae, nisi quatenus unum quid in ipsis insit, quod sit essentialia. Si igitur ipsum emittere unum est in Patre et Filio, aut huius particeps etiam fiet Spiritus sanctus, utpote rei essentialis, et emittet ipse etiam aliam utique personam; aut si re quadam essentiali careat, nulli dubium, quin ipsa quoque essentia careat. Ex his duobus barathris utrumlibet voluerint, eligant Latini: sin vero utrumque respicere velint, suam prius deserant sententiam, ex qua pressus necesse est haec inferri.

36. Si ex essentia Patris Filius et Spiritus, ex essentia vero Patris et Filii solus Spiritus, ut Latini censent, non eadem producit essentia Patris, et eadem, essentia Patris et Filii. Quae vero non eadem producant, ne eadem quidem ipsa prorsus sunt. Ergo aliud est essentia Patris, aliud essentia Patris et Filii; ac prorsus necesse est, ut aliud quoque sit essentia Spiritus

tus. Multae igitur erunt in divina Trinitate essentiae, quod impium est atque absurdum.

37. Si Pater quidem principium si Filii et Spiritus sancti, Filius vero principium dumtaxat Spiritus, cum ea quae non eorumdem sunt principia, ne eadem quidem plane sint, neque igitur unum idemque principium erit in divina Trinitate, sed duo principia, ac frustra Latini principii dualitatem fugiunt.

38. Filii appellatio duo haec significat, habitudinem nimirum ad Patrem, quatenus ab eo habet ut sit, et eandem atque ille substantiam; omnis scilicet filius patri suo consubstantialis est. Idem innuit et generationis nomen, quod causa unde habet esse, tum consubstantialitas aptissime declaratur. Non item Spiritus sancti, nec processionis appellatio, sed si quando audimus Spiritum Patris, donum quoddam Patris intelligimus, quod nobis confertur, usque sanctificat et in nobis operatur. Dicit enim Dominus⁴; Spiritus Patris vestri qui loquitur in vobis. Unde et Spiritus Filii idem dicitur; cum commune amboꝝ donum est.

ut ipse beatus Augustinus ait. Quoties autem audimus Spiritum, qui ex Patre procedit, tum causam, unde habet esse, et ipsam hypostasim accipimus, neque vero consubstantialitatem, quam nec Spiritus, nec processionis vox innuere valet. Quo lit ut theologi, quoties simpliciter causam, unde esse habet, significare voluerint, dicant : Spiritum, qui ex Patre procedit, ab ipso Domino id edocti, quin mutila ac quasi decurtata enuntient, neve principium proprius praetermittant (apage istiusmodi absurditatem!); quotiescumque autem simul et consubstantialitatem indicare voluerint, tunc et illud per Filium addunt, dicendo : Qui ex Patre per Filium procedit, ac si dicerent : Non absque Filio, neque ex alia ac Filii natura, sed una cum generatione intelligitur etiam processio. Quare divinus Maximus ait¹ : « Qui per Filium genitum ineffabili modo procedit »; sane non addidisset genitum, nisi hoc voluisset intelligere. Ceteros autem eadem sentire, testatur idem theologus in epistola ad Marinum Cypri presbyterum dicens², illius aetatis Romanos « non causam Spiritus agnoscere » Filium, sed ut ostendant, inquit, cum per « Filium procedere, et ita substantiae cognitionem omnis expertem differentiae demonstrationem ». Recentior vero eaque ridicula Latinarum theologia dum ex voce per Filium proprius principium intelligit, Patrem vero principium remotius non proximum hypostasis Spiritus sancti statuit, ut Enos per Seth ex Adamo dicitur, venerandi Gregorii Nyssemi verba non audit, quibus dicit³, « ipsa Filii interpositione » et unigeniti conditionem ei conservari et « Spiritum ab naturali, quam ad Patrem habet, naturaliter progreditur, pro principio non habet id per quod progreditur. Ego vero cum invicem interrogavi, num omne id quod ab aliquo per aliquid naturaliter procedit, duo non habeat suae existentiae principia, alterum scilicet ex quo, alterum vero per quod procedit. Etenim homo ex viro per mulierem natus, ut ait Apostolus¹, duo habet principia, patrem nimirum et matrem: Iacob vero ex Abraham per Isaac procreatus duo habet principia, unum propius, alterum remotius, videlicet patrem et avum. Si ergo ductis ex iis quae apud nos sunt exemplis suam studeant obfirmare theologiam, confiteantur etiam duas causas et duo principia, neque ea negent quae necessario ex eorum argumentationibus colliguntur.

41. Et quomodo, ait, rerum creatio, cum ex Patre per Filium in Spiritu sancto acceperit ut sit, non tria habuerit principia, sed unum principium unumque opificem? — Rerum creatio, o eximie, ei dixi, non attribuitur neque essentiae Patris et Filii, neque eorum hypostasi, sed communi voluntati eorum ac virtuti, quae una eademque est in tribus: quo fit, ut unum Deum principium habeat unumque opificem. At Spiritus sanctus ex Patris hypostasi dicitur: quare si idem ex Filii quoque procedat hypostasi, ut vos putatis, cum duas hypostases pro causa habeat, duas etiam causas duoque principia utique habebit, nisi insanimus. Nolite ergo exempla incongruentia iterum adhibere: siquidem rerum creatio a Deo est non per essentiam, sed per opificium.

3. Latini, dum proximum et non proximum principium de Patre ac Filio dicunt, atque primum, secundum, tertium, naturali quodam necessarioque ordine statuunt, manifestissime Spiritum sanctum intervallo quodam a Patre disingunt, gradus disparilitatesque in sanctam Trinitatem inferunt, Patrem quidem Filio, Filium vero Spiritu sancto maiorem asserendo. At a quinta generali synodo discant, haec esse Origenis placita: dicit enim beatae memoriae Iustinianus imperator in sua adversus illum lustratione isthaec: « Qui autem omnia in ipsam « sanctam et consubstantialem Trinitatem « blasphemias ausus est dicere: Patrem maio- « rem esse Filio, Filium Spiritu sancto ». Quapropter illum in eodem tractatu multorum deorum cultorem appellat. Ac recte quidem; dicit enim Gregorius theologus: « Nobis « Deus unus est, quoniam una deitas, atque ad « unum ea quae ex ipso sunt referuntur ». Itaque si ii, qui ad unum referunt ea quae ex illo procedunt, in unum Deum credunt; qui non duo ad unum, sed unum referunt ad duo, procul dubio non in unum Deum, sed in multos credunt. Quid ergo adhuc gentiles vituperant?

4. Si Spiritus sanctus ex Filio quidem proxime procedat, ex Patre vero non proxime secundum Latinos, constat, eundem ex Filii hypostasi procedere, ex Patris vero hypostasi nequaquam: qui enim id fieri possit, cum non proximam ab eo existentiam habeat? Neque enim Iacob, qui non proxime ex Abraham procreatus est, dixerimus esse ex Abrahae hypostasi, nisi quis dicere velit ex natura, quia omnes nos homines, origine ab Adamo ducta, e natura quidem Adami esse dicimur, minime vero ex eius hypostasi. Atqui sancti doctores plane contrarium de Spiritu sancto asserunt, dum hunc docent ex Patris esse hypostasi, ut divinus Gregorius Nyssenus, maximus revera Maximus, ceterique omnes; ex Filii vero hypostasi eundem esse, nemo dixit, saltem quod sciamus. Ergo frustra Latini Filii hypostasin ut proximam Spiritus causam ponunt.

¶ 5. Quoties Latini dixerint Patrem non esse proximum sancti Spiritus principium, ab eis quaeramus, utrum quod Filii sit principium, eo dicant illum etiam Spiritus principium, an quod ipse nonnihil conferat ex sese ad hoc ut Spiritus sit. Quod si dixerint, quia Filii est principium, perspicuum fit, eum non proprie esse Spiritus principium: huius enim remotum, non proximum est principium: ex quo lit, ut Pater Filii quidem proprie sit principium utpote proximum, Spiritus vero non proprie, quippe non proximum. At vero eiusmodi theologiam, seu potius theomachiam nondum haecenus audivimus, verum illud quidem audimus, nimirum, ut Filius ex Patre, sic et Spiritus ex Patre; ac frustra nobis ii vitio vertunt illud ex solo Patre, qui Spiritum sanctum ex Filio solo affirmant. Si vero asserant Patrem quiddam Spiritui tribuere ad hoc, ut sit, quidnam quis dixerit itidem prae copia ineptiarum hinc pullulantium? Siquidem inde lit, ut duo sint principia, quoniam ipsae hypostases duae, ac partiaria sit Spiritus essentia, altera parte a Patre, altera a Filio communicata, et compositus sit Spiritus utpote ex ambohus habens existentiam, ac quaecumque alia ex monstris istiusmodi consequuntur doctrinis.

46. Porro Latini hisce coarctati ad creationis argumentum iterum recurrunt, eo scilicet ut apertos sese pneumatomachos ostendant ac Spiritum sanctum ut rem creatam manifestissime arbitrentur. Dicunt enim vel ipsam rerum creationem dici ex Patre per Filium hoc habere ut sit, nihilominus tamen unum principium opificemque habere censetur, non duo tresve auctores, neque unum proprie, alterum non proprie, neque alterutrum alteram partem eidem conferre ad existendum. Quod si haec dicant, aut confiteantur se liquido Spiritum sanctum pro creatura habere, aut probe sciant, extra quidem suam naturam hypostasinque duas personas etiam apud nos posse una actione unaque ratione artificiose efficere quidquid voluerint; ut vero ex sua hypostasi unaquaqueque naturaliter producat unam personam per unam solam actionem, fieri non potest, nisi partem, ut dictum est, existentiae conferat, adeo ut duo sint principia, actiones itidem duae, resque effecta composita. Unde ergo illi unam personalem duabus personis operationem tribuant, unumque principium illa duo asserant, licet mirari.

47. Ipsa mens nostra, humanam dico, rationem ex seipsa gignit spiritumque emittit, illam veluti nantium motuum suorum ac cogitationum, hunc ad corpus animandum ac movendum, ipsamque rationem manifestandam et exprimendam. Producutur ergo una simul a mente cum ratio tum spiritus, quorum altera nuntiat extrinsecus quae genitoris sunt, alter animat agitque corpus, quocumque prolator voluerit. causamque habere, nemo sanus unquam dixerit; quorsum enim, cum ipse socius verbi sit ad huius manifestationem, vicissimque a verbo ipse manifestetur? Eodem modo sempiternum Verbum una cum Spiritu producitur a prima mente, nimirum a Patre, non tamen illud huic causae est, ut sit, ut neque ipsam ab hoc eandem accipit. Haec perinde ac nos atque ante nos docet plane divinus Maximus imaginem mirum in modum accommodans exemplari. Et enim verbum in nobis nuntius est et interpret motuum mentis, sic et divinum Verbum magni consilii Patris angelus nuncupatur; ac quemadmodum spiritus in nobis vitae motusque corporis principium est, ita quoque divinus Spiritus, quippe cum vis ipse sit qua vivunt, moventur, conservantur, sanctificantur creaturae, vita appellatur. At igitur divus ille vir, capite tertio tertiae Centuriae Capitulum quæstivorum: « Neque erat, neque est, neque erit verbum Verbo antèrius: Verbum autem est, non mentis aut vitae expert, sed quod mente polleat ac vivat, quippe cum « gignentem Mentem essentialiter subsistentem, Patrem habeat, vitamque essentialiter subsistentem, quae illi coexistat, Spiritum sanctum ». Nofa quomodo mentem quidem gignentem nominet Deum ac Patrem, Verbum vero ex ea genitum Deum ac Filium, vitam demum Spiritum sanctum, Filio coexistentem, non ex eodem existentem. Atque id ipsum est quod alius theologus ait¹: « Ex « Patre procedit et in Filio manet. »

¶ 8. Quod si divinarum personarum processionem ratione principii remoti et proximi duntaxat inter se differant, iuxta Latinos, eo quod Filius ex solo Patre sit, Spiritus sanctus ex Patre per Filium, idque sit processio, ut aiunt, idem igitur processio erit ac generatio, idem vicissim generatio ac processio. Duo ergo erunt in Trinitate Filii, unus ex solo Patre genitus, alter ex Patre per Filium, itemque unus Patri proximus, alter Filio quidem proximus, a Patre vero remotus, nepos scilicet. At vero istiusmodi de Deo ratiocinatio, seu potius deliratio, hactenus nondum audita est.

19. Aut idem est principium Filii sanctique Spiritus, aut aliud et aliud. Quod si idem, cum solus Pater sit Filii principium, profecto etiam Spiritus solus Pater principium erit; sin autem aliud et aliud, quomodo non duo principia habebuntur?

20. Patris hypostasis principium est sancti Spiritus; est autem et altera hypostasis, Filii nimirum, sancti Spiritus principium secundum Latinos. Ergo altera et altera hypostasis, id est duo hypostases, duo sunt Spiritus principia iuxta illorum doctrinam. Duo igitur ponunt Spiritus principia.

21. Pater et Filius sic unum sunt sancti Spiritus principium ut alteruter solus, aut secus. Ac si quidem ita ambo, quemadmodum alteruter solus, cum alteruter solus sic unum sit principium, ut est una persona, profecto ambo ita sunt unum principium, ut sunt una persona, atque sic reviviscit Sabellius. Si vero aliter quidem ambo unum principium, aliter vero alteruter solus, quomodo non duo erunt principia? Siquidem aliter et aliter atque differentia nulli dubium quin numerum etiam inferat.

22. In divinis personis aut unum est principium, aut non unum. Atqui si una quidem persona principium est, habemus quod quaeritur, nam Pater proculdubio solus erit. Sin autem non unum, duo sane omnino erunt principia, ut duo sunt ea quae oriuntur ex principio. Id autem absurdum esse, res ipsa per sese loquitur.

53. Si causa proxima potior sit ac propior mediata, qui fit, ut cum toties dicatur Spiritus ex Patre procedere, raro admodum verba per Filium apponantur? Quid est, cur potior propiorque causa sileatur, minor vero ac remotior semper exprimatur? Ac quo pacto non duo erunt principia, ubi et potius et minus, propius et remotius locum habent?

54. Filius causa est sancti Spiritus aut ratione naturae aut ratione hypostasis. Quod si ratione naturae, cum natura tribus eadem sit, communis tribus erit causa, sicut Spiritus ipse se emittit vel alterum. Si vero Filius causa est ratione hypostasis, cum alia sit eius hypostasis, alia vero Patris, alia itidem ipse erit causa atque Pater aliudque principium. Ergo duae hypostases erunt causae, ac proinde duo etiam principia.

55. Vis illa producendi Spiritum in Patre et Filio una eademque cum sit secundum Latinos, essentialis profecto erit ac naturalis: huius vero expertus erit Spiritus sanctus, quippe qui nullam aliam producat personam. Atqui ut ea quae eiusdem virtutis sunt, eiusdem naturae sint oportet iuxta theologos Patres; sic vicissim quae non eandem essentialem virtutem habent, prorsus necesse est, ut ne eandem quidem naturam habeant, atque ita Spiritus sanctus excluditur a communi Patris Filiique essentia utpote a communi quadam essentiali virtute exclusus. At vero nos, ut eiusdem essentiae, sic etiam eiusdem virtutis esse sanctam Trinitatem probe scimus, unamque trium personarum potentiam praedicamus, quemadmodum et unam essentiam, novos istos pneumatomachos valere multa dicentes.

56. Patris proprietates sunt, secundum theologos Patres, quod inginitus sit, quod gignat, quod emittat. Quod si haec una, emittendi nimirum, Filium participat, quae est Latinorum sententia, Spiritum vero penitus privet, maiorem Pater societatem cum Filio habebit quam cum Spiritu sancto, ideoque, ut quoad verba immutatum; verumtamen quod Patribus illis symbolum immutare utique licuerit, non ideo id tibi licere censemus.

Latinus. Quid ita, quaeso?

Graecus. Primum quidem, quia illi synodus oecumenica erant, tibi vero id neutiquam competit, licet quam maxime Papam vendites eiusque primatum. Deinde tum utique licuit, cum nondum erat vetitum; tibi vero, qui additionem molitus es, cum iam rescesset prohibita, nihil omnino prohibet quin obnoxius sis executionibus a Patribus pronuntiatis.

Latinus. Quandonam, obsecro, id prohibitum fuit, et cuius rei gratia?

Graecus. Ego totam tibi rem accurate dicam. Post illam fidei expositionem a prima synodo factam, multae variaeque fidei expositiones a diversis synodis conditae sunt ad abrogandam consubstantialitatem, quae quidem irritae factae sunt. Secunda vero synodus, quae et oecumenica fuit et primae sententiam accurate servavit, peculiarem excudit expositionem, hanc nimirum, qua nunc nos quidem sine additione utimur, vos vero cum additione; ex his tamen duabus synodis neutra illo decreto prohibuit ne immutatio fieret. Quare in tertia oecumenica synodo fidei symbolum prolatum est a Nestorii sectatoribus conditum, haereses pravitate imbutum, quo uti non verebantur in quibusdam per Lydiam baptizandis. Quod perfectum cum Patres audivissent ac iudicassent non iam tolerandum esse, ut a quolibet symbolum immutaretur, decretum illico tulērunt, ne quis deinceps auderet immutare fidem a Patribus delinitam seu fidei symbolum. Quapropter beatus Cyrillus data ad Joannem Antiochenum epistola, cum ea quae decrevisset, probe sciret ipse enim magnae illi synodo praefuit, « Nullo modo », inquit, « patimur quam de uno locuta est. Sed audi quae sequuntur : « De Patre enim et Filio et Spiritu sancto perfectissime docet ». Audisne perfectam ab ea tradi doctrinam? Nihil igitur eorum, quae ad sanctum Spiritum spectant, mancum est, nihil quod additione indigeat. Sed quo tandem pacto hoc servandum sit symbolum, ipsi circa finem declarant : « His ita a nobis concinne definitis ac constitutis, statuit sancta haec et universalis synodus, alteram fidem nemini licere proferre, id est conscribere aut componere, vel docere vel offerre. * f. 155. « Qui autem ausi fuerint aut conscribere fidem alteram, aut componere vel proferre, hos quidem, si sint episcopi aut clerici, alienos esse, episcopos, ab episcopatu, et clericos, a clericatu decrevit; si vero laici fuerint, anathemati subiciit ». Atqui hoc in loco per fidem fidei symbolum ab ea intelligi, perspicuum est, opinor, iis qui mentis composites sunt : neque enim omnino de qualibet definitione loquitur, quandoquidem multae etiam postea definitiones sunt conditae. Hanc autem fidem alteram prorsus reddunt non multa modo verba, verum unum dumtaxat additum aut demptum aut immutatum. Nam illud conscribere et componere et proferre ad verborum compositionem liquido spectat, eamque prohibet.

Latinus. Non, sed alteram eam dixit fidem quae pristinae repugnet, quae dogmata Ecclesiae contraria contineat; nam ea fides, quae explicationem et declarationem exhibet, altera profecto non est, sive uno, sive multis differat verbis.

Graecus. Miror quod non ex verbis eorum qui locuti sunt explores sententiam, sed potius verba trahas ad tuum proprium arbitrium. Nam arbitrari alterum idem significare atque contrarium, viri est nec sapientis, nec bene periti ad accommodandam rerum naturae vocem cuilibet consentaneam. Nam latius certe patet alterum quam contrarium, neque omne id quod alterum est ab aliqua re, etiam eidem contrarium est. Siquidem homo specie quidem alterum est ab equo, contrarium vero nequaquam : essentia enim nihil ab eo differt. Non ergo per aliam fidem contrariam intellexerunt, ut nemo per animal intelligit hominem. Alteram autem per totum orbem divulgata vestra interpolare verba, tantumque in Ecclesias excitare tumultum? Homines duri et agrestes, « ergo ferreus » « vobis intra praecordia animus est », qui fratres scandalum patientes et a vobis segregatos despicitis, eo dumtaxat ut vestrum arbitrium novitatemque neutiquam missa faciatis! Quid praeterea? Post septimum synodum altera rursus coadunatur, regnante Basilio Romanorum imperatore, a sanctissimo Photio patriarcha coacta. Haec synodus tum legatos habuit Iouannis beatissimi papae senioris Romae, Paulum et Eugenium episcopos, ac Petrum presbyterum et cardinalem. Haec etiam septimum confirmavit synodum restituitque suae sedi beatissimum Photium, eos vero qui auderent in posterum hanc additionem in symbolo recitare, anathemate mulctavit. « Si quis, ait⁶, praeter hoc » « sacrum symbolum aliud conscribere ausus » « fuerit, aut addere vel detrudere aliquid, » « istudque definitionem proterve appellaverit, » « is damnatus esto et ex finibus christianae » « societatis exterminetur ». Eadem ipse Iouannes papa ad sanctissimum Photium scribens uberius clariusque dicit, dum de huiusmodi in symbolo additione loquitur. Haec synodus canones quoque condidit, qui in omnibus canonicis libris reperiuntur. Nonne ergo iure nos ipsi a vobis disiungimus, qui tot tantosque Patres, qui synodos oecumenicas easque bene multas pro nihilo ducitis?

Latinus. Equidem nondum hucusque talia audiveram; nunc vero iam miror quod qui olim additionem perpetrarunt, cum tot essent prohibitiones, nihilominus tamen neutiquam veriti sint eam proferre posterisque tradere.

TUR PURGATORIUM IGNEM NON ESSE.

1. Qui Dei gloriam vident, alius alio perfectius videt, illeque perfectius videt, qui magis fuerit purgatus. Quod autem quispiam magis purgatus sit, eo ipso infertur alium minus purgatum esse, eum scilicet qui minus visione fruatur : nam si res maior maiori, etiam minor minori consequens est. Quo fit ut qui aliquas, leves tamen culpas secum trahit, Deum et ipse videat, quin purgatorio indigeat igne, cuius locum supplet Dei misericordia secundum peritissimum rerum divinarum Dionysium asserentem^b « iis, qui sancte vixerint, pro « cuiusque meritis divinam clarissimamque « vitam ab aequissimis istis lancibus retribuī, « divina nimirum clementia pro bonitate sua « maculas ex humana fragilitate contractas « dissimulante, quod nemo, ut sacra eloquia « tradunt, mundus sit a sorde ».

2. Item, si quae secundum unum quid et idem eadem sunt invicem, ea secundum illud nihil inter se different; quae autem inter se secundum aliquid minime differunt, neque secundum illam, qua eadem sunt, efficientiam inter se different, ac propterea neque finis illi efficientiae propositus alius et alius erit, sed unus et idem. Atqui illi quidem purgandi efficientiae, quae tum in aversione a peccato tum in conversione ad virtutem huiusque exercitatione consistit, Dei visio respondet. Sed purum inter et purum nihil est discriminis. Quod si omnes, qui spreto peccato multa opera bona perfecerint, vel nihil boni egerint, morte praeventi, obierint tamen cum recta voluntate, per purgatorium purgantur, hi omnes, sive purgati fuerint, sive puri, a se invicem nihil differunt, neque ab iis quidem qui ex vita decesserint et cum recta voluntate et cum virtutum exercitatione : nam quod ad voluntatis rectitudinem attinet, iidem sunt; quod vero actibus deficit, per transitorii ignis purgationem suppletur, reliquum plane est, ut nec quoad ipsorum efficientiam nec quoad finem illi propositum vita functi inter se differant, verum eandem illi, quatenus puri sunt, efficientiam habeant, atque uno et eodem modo eundem finem consequantur. Aequa igitur sorte Dei gloriam videbunt omnes. Verum enim vero contrarium tenet Ecclesia, multas mansiones ponendo in Dei contemplatione^a, ex quibus ordinum graduumque oritur diversitas.

3. Item in animabus purgatis malum illud propter quod igne opus fuit, non amplius consideratur, quippe quod purgatio necessario efficiat liberationem a malo. Sed malum et bonum sibi invicem opponuntur ut privatio et forma. In quibus autem nihil privationis consideratur, in iis perfecta forma habeatur oportet, cum imperfectio non proveniat nisi ex privatione. Ergo anima purgata perfectum consequetur bonum, prout exigit beatitudinis ratio. Sed si multa occurrant perfecta in eadem specie, ea inter se in bono non different nisi iuxta numerum; et quia finis propositus, id est beatitudo, non datur nisi pro purgationis ratione, sequitur omnes defunctorum animas Dei visionis, in qua beatitudo consistit, aequae participes esse. Id autem falsum est : Dominus
 enim dicit in evangeliiis multas esse in domo Patris mansiones^b. Quibus verbis sancti haud pauci, quorum testimoniis fidem negare non decet, beatae illius vitae gradus significari censuerunt. Consequitur ergo.

4. Item aversio a peccato conversio est ad Deum virtutisque studium qua ad Deum ascendimus. Sed si voluntatis rectitudinem etiam virtutis exercitatio accedat, iam nihil deest. Si vero voluntas immunis sit a lapsu, virtutum autem exercitationem mors praecidendo cohiberit, eiusmodi anima nullo alio discrimine ab illa anima, cui utraque suppetiverint, secernitur, quam quod exercitationes, virtutis scilicet, ei defuerint. [Si igitur isto modo beatitudinis citra quamlibet poenam et ipsa compos reddatur, plane necesse est, ut non iisdem atque perfectae praemiis donetur, atque ita mansionum diversitas omnino salvatur: sin autem eo quod quidpiam defuerit, crucialur ac per purgatorium transeat, tandem aliquando perfectae par omnino redderetur, supplicio supplente quantum deficit, atque hoc pacto omnes aequaliter Deum videbunt, quod ut inconueniens reiectum est.

5. Item ad consequendam beatitudinem requiritur tum voluntatis rectitudo, qua proprie fertur in bonum universale, tum ea quae elicit opera bona ac mercede digna. Sed tum voluntatis tum operum exercitatio hac vita necessario includitur, prout vos quoque arbitramini: nam animarum, quae in purgatorio detinentur, voluntatem immutabilem esse asseritis. Atqui ubi nullus voluntatis motus in nullam omnino rem fertur, ibi quoque alius alio dignior nequaquam habetur. Ergo animae, licet purgatorio igne non fuerint purgatae, non minus dignae sunt Dei visione, modo ut cum recta voluntate migraverint, quae ad beatitudinem principaliter ac potissime requiritur. Elenim si per purgatorium voluntas ex prava recta non reddatur ac voluntatis rectitudo requiratur ad beatitudinem, nihil igitur ad eam conferri purgatorium. Atqui quod nullum omnino effectum habet, frustra ponitur: sed nihil omnino frustra Deus facit. Non ergo.

6. Item aeterni supplicii aequitas in hoc maxime ostenditur, quod immutabilem habeant ii qui peccarunt pravam voluntatem: nam voluntati perpetuo pravae perpetua etiam debetur poena. Ac vicissim eodem plane modo si is qui immutabilis in patiendo malo perpetuo manet, perpetua poena punitur: qui non perpetuo castigatur, is neque immutabilem voluntatem habebit. Nam qui immutabilem eandem habuerit, si in malo quidem, aeternae poenae servatur; sin in bono, quid supplicio ei opus est, cui coronae debentur? Atqui eos, qui eiusmodi igne purgantur, voluntatem immutabilem habere vos ipsi contenditis. Non ergo igne purgantur.

* 1. 178. 7. Item rectae voluntatis immutabilitatem sequitur impeccabilitas in homine: nam si

a) Ps. XXXI, 5 bonorum amor eorumque vehemens cupiditas causa sit cur mala non velimus, eius autem quod quis cupit contrarium naturaliter asper-netur, cum malum bono opponatur ac pecca-tum virtuti, virtutis igitur studium peccatum expellit. Dixi enim, inquit, confitebor adversum me iniustitiam meam Domino, et tu remisisti impietatem cordis mei. Et. Dic tu prius in-iquitates tuas, ut iustificeris. Sed eorum qui in purgatorio definentur voluntatem immutari non posse contenditis, quia recta plane est; ac propterea castigantur qui peccati expertes sunt, nec quicquam prae se ferunt poena dignum.

8. Item voluntas in vitium mutari potest, donec corpori anima coniuncta fuerit; sed superveniente solutione a corpore, quaecunq; volens reperta fuerit, in his immutabilis per-manet, praemium vel punitionem ea propter consequendo, quin per purgatorium transeat.

9. Item magis expedit divinae bonitati exigum bonum non contemnere, quam exiguum culpam ulcisci. Sed exiguum bonum in iis qui graviter peccarunt nullum consequitur praemium propter praeponderantem nequitiam.
Neque igitur exiguum malum in iis qui praeclaras virtutes exercitarunt decet poena multari eo quod vincant quae praestantiora sunt.
Si enim id quod magis videtur, non est, aegre profecto id quod minus videtur, erit. Neque igitur purgatorium ignem esse sentiendum est.

10. Item, ut se habet exiguum aliquod bonum in iis qui ceteroqu岸 pravi sunt, sic exiguum malum in iis qui ceteroqu岸 boni sunt.
Sed exiguum bonum in illis non potest bono-rum retributionem efficere, sed tantum diffe-rentiam supplicii; neque igitur exiguum malum in istis supplicium efficit, sed tantum diffe-rentiam fructuonis. Non est igitur credendum ignem esse purgatorium.

et promiserit se daturum Spiritum sanctum omnibus qui petierint eum, necdum sacerdotibus : velitque hoc singulis diebus confici a nobis, ut deinceps per omnia monstratur. Tunc etiam fortassis ex hoc baptisma quoque suspectum habeas, quod precibus pariter atque invocationibus conficitur, et peccatorum remissionem, an vere acceperis, dubitationem aliquam habeas, quae tibi sacerdotali gratia conceditur? itemque alia omnia ecclesiastica praescribas mysteria? Non ita est profecto, non ita est: fidelis enim qui promisit¹ se nobiscum omnibus diebus futurum usque ad consummationem saeculi.

6. Atque nos quidem haec a sanctis apostolis et eorum successoribus accepimus, et ita retinemus, ut a sententia hac dimoveri nequeamus, et rationem eorum reddimus. Quod autem Domini de mysteriis sermo per modum recitationis prolatus ad donorum sanctificationem sufficiat, nemo apostolorum, nemo doctorum dixisse cernitur. Verum quod ille quidem semel ab illo prolatus, hoc ipso quod ab illo pronuntiatum est, perinde atque in rerum fabricatione habitus sermo semper operetur, hoc ait aureae ille linguae Ioannes². Quod vero e. 125. nunc a sacerdote prolatus, hoc ipso quod ab eo dicatur, hoc possit, a nullo licet ediscere: quandoquidem nec ipse officii operatur sermo, quia in singulis, quae fiunt ab aliquo homine refertur, sed quia semel est a Deo enuntiatum. Quin etiam nec ipsi quidem dicent operari Dominicum verbum, a quovis simpliciter prolatus, neque absque altari. Si igitur sacerdote est opus et altari, et aliis quae ad id pertinent, quidni et precibus, benedictione, et per eam adventu sancti Spiritus, qui omnia perficit et consummat mysteria? Ad haec sacer ille Dionysius testimonio suo nostros ritus confirmaturus accedat. In theoria enim mysterii synaxeos, « Ubi sacra, inquit, Dei opera Deinde infermentatum panem illum, non opertum interim, sed undecunque tactigerit ita nactus, ubi sublevavit, partem quidem frangit, et in calicem iniicit: quod reliquum est in os demittit, et toto calice pariter epoto, ut se salutem adhortatur qui cum eo ministrant diaconi, nemini quidquam impartitus, qui hoc gloriatur Domini verbo, Accipite, comedite omnes, et Bibite ex eo omnes. Haec manifestamne proferunt contrarietatem iis quae nobis traditae sunt liturgiarum expositionibus, et verbis Dominicis, et ipsis vocibus quibus utuntur? Scilicet ita sentientes nobis vitio vertere audebunt, et nostros ritus curiosius investigare atque interpretari, quae sanctis patribus tam sunt consentanea? At Chrysostomus ait¹, « Dominicum verbum semel dictum sacrificium consummatum efficere ». Semel dictum, inquit, non quod nunc a sacerdote dicitur, sed quod semel a Servatore dictum est, perfectricem immittere propositis donis vim atque potentiam, non item et actu ea perficere; hoc enim sancti Spiritus adventus per sacerdotis orationem efficit, idque perspicuum est ex iis quae Chrysostomus, ut prius exposuimus, postquam Dominica verba recitata sunt: « Mittas, inquit, Spiritum tuum sanctum, » et fac panem istum quidem pretiosum corpus « Christi tui, et quod est in calice isto pretiosum sanguinem Christi tui, permutans sancto « Spiritu tuo. » Haec nisi persuadeant eos qui contentiosi sunt, ii miserandi merito censendi sunt, quod ignorantia duplici tenentur, et excaecatione profunda.

« Patre subsistit ». Illud igitur sibi vult vocabulum per Filium, scilicet cum Filio cognosci. Neque enim alia quaedam proprietates Spiritus sancti ad Filium hoc loco assignatur, nisi quod cum eo cognoscitur, neve alia ad Patrem, nisi quod ex eo subsistit. Itaque, si proprium cum eo, cuius est proprium, aptissime convertatur necesse est, non aliam profecto habitudinem ad Filium habet Spiritus sanctus, nisi quod cum eo cognoscitur; non aliam ad Patrem, nisi quod ex eo subsistit. Neque igitur ex Filio subsistit vel esse habet Spiritus sanctus: quid enim prohibuit, quominus per Filium procedere diceretur Spiritus sanctus, quemadmodum per Patrem omnia dicuntur esse facta? Sed illud quidem dicitur, praepositione per pro ex usurpata; hoc vero nullo modo, nec quisquam invenire aspiam poterit Spiritum per Filium dici, nulla Patris facta mentione, sed ex Patre per Filium dicitur: quod causam quidem haut necessario tribuit Filio. Idcirco verbum illud ex Filio omnino non occurrit ac perspicue proscribitur.

2. Dicta vero Occidentalium Patrum atque doctorum, quae causam Spiritus sancti Filio tribuunt, nec cognosco (neque enim translata unquam sunt in nostram linguam, neque ab oecumenicis synodis probata fuerunt), nec recipio, hac nixus coniectura, ea corrupta esse atque supposita, tum multis aliis de causis, tum ob prolatum heri et nudius tertius ab illis volumen septimae oecumenicae synodi, definitionem continens cum additamento in symbolo; quod cum recitaretur, quanta eos verecundia suffuderit, norant qui tum praesentes fuerunt. Verum neque contraria oecumenicis synodis et communibus earundem decretis, immo nihil omnino quod non consentiat orientalibus doctoribus scripserunt Patres illi, nihil quod non plane iisdem cohaereat, prout ex multis aliis illorum dictis demonstratur. succeederent, et magnum aliquod opus perficie-orsus : « Haud sane homines isti mores suos » et dogmata ulla ex parte patienter immutari, « qui tantum nobis supercilium ostenderunt. » Interea expectare iussi sumus, et longas toleravimus praenitii temporis moras, ut plena senodus congregaretur. Advenit constitutum tempus: multi etiam lapsi sunt dies, et vix unum in locum convenimus Graeci atque Latini, de additamento, quod factum est in Symbolo, primum disputaturi.

2. Itaque demandato mihi munere inchoandi tractationem, primo quidem exordians conatus sum dissensionis causam ipsis adscribere, et culpae ut parum illis amicitiae cultores fastuque plenos; illis sese defendentibus, et culpam in nos coniciētibus, et se nullo esse in crimine ostendentibus, ut moris est ipsis. Deinde per sequentes sessiones, prolatis sacrorum conciliorum actis, recitavi definitiones ipsorum, in quibus sancti illi Patres interdiciunt Symboli mutationem usque ad dictionem et syllabam, et horrendas execrationes sanciunt in eos, qui ausi unquam fuerint a gratia sibi data alieni: laici vero subiecti anti anathemati, quod est separatio a Deo. Ad haec syllogismis indissolubilibus ostendi, vim rationum mearum necessario inferre, quod demonstrabam, nec fieri posse, ut definitiones accipi aliter queant, ac ego illas exponebam et intelligebam. Ut comperimus autem Latinos, persona in disputationibus deposita, veritatis studio non agere, neque uti ipsa appareret eniti, sed ut viderentur habere quid dicerent, et suorum aures praecoccuparent, illud etiam obnixi curare, ut omnino ipsi sessionium finem facerent, atque ut posteriore loco dicentes viderentur omnia diluere, quae a nobis obiciebantur: tum vero omnia disputatione, ad preces conversi sumus, quid non dicentes, quod vel lapideos animos posset allicere, ut redirent ad praeclearam illam concordiam, qua olim tum ipsi congruebamur inter nos, auribus canere, aut lapidem coquere, aut semina saxis mandare, aut in aqua scribere, aut quicquid aliud adagiis significamus ad exprimenda impossibilia. Illi enim argumentis convicti et in angustias redacti, nullam vero prorsus emendationem admittentes, quod, ut apparet, morbo laborens insanabili, hortabanremus, quod esset de additamento satis iam dictum; his verbis existimantes obtegi quod in Symbolo sunt ausi, si opinio sana esse probaretur. Verum nostri id non ferebant, et nullo modo patiebantur de dogmate quaesitionem haberi, nisi prius corrigeretur additamentum; atque perstitissent etiam in hac voluntate usque ad finem, et illinc recessissent bono sane consilio, nisi dissuasum esset eis a quibusdam asserentibus, indecorum esse ab-

 Ita suum praebuerat assensum tum ut a dis-putatione de additamento transiretur ad quaetestimoniis aperti nostri dogmatis veritatem: quod scilicet ex solo Patre, non etiam ex Filio procedat Spiritus sanctus, ab evangelicis quidem dictis exorsus, per apostolos vero et successores eorum progressus usque ad tertiam synodum oecumenicam: dicta singula diligenter expendens et syllogismos ad unumquodque adhibens atque id quod mihi propositum erat concludens, novum scilicet Latinorum dogma esse ubique damnatum.

¶ Cum ita perorasset, eorum congressibus vale dixi, statutum habens aut devitandum esse consensum eorum, aut certe mihi tacendum. Verum illi nostros volentes nolentes advocabant, eo quod respondere vellent ad ea quae dicta erant. Quod cum fecissent, me non praesente causa morbi, duas insumpsere deinceps sessiones ipsi soli dicentes, nemine defensionem suscipiente, in priore quidem proferentes dicta suorum doctorum, quibus ostendebant, Spiritum sanctum a Filio procedere quemadmodum et ex Patre; in altera vero, quae a me dicta fuerant, pervertentes potius quam evertentes et doctorum nostrorum oppositas, ut illis quidem videbatur, sententias exponentes. Quoniam vero, ubi tacuissent ego, ex nostris nemo ausus est amplius sese illis opponere, tum quia omnes certamen detractabant, timentes ne se litibus ac turbis implicarent; illi taciturnitatem nostram veluti lucrum inopinatum sibi oblatum ratī, nos veluti in fugam versos provocabant ad pugnam; nobis autem renitentibus, applaudebant sibi quasi victores et veritatem a se stantem habentes. Quod ipsi sane nunquam non erant facturi, cum eo sint prosum ingenio, ut parati sint contra omne quod asseritur, dicere, et victoriae famam sibi tribuere.

5. Hinc primum coepta sunt audiri voces illae oeconomiae et condescensionis; et quidam ex nostris aggressus est dicere: Bonum est pacem amplecti, sanctosque inter se consentientes demonstrare, ne videantur Occidentales contraria loqui Orientalibus. Tum vero etiam de praepositione per coepit quidam philosophari, quod apud nostros doctores reperitur idem valere quod ex praepositio, et causam Spiritus Filio tribuat. Ita paulatim latinismus erupit, coeperuntque deinceps de modo conciliandae pacis agere, et dicta quaedam, per quae pax fieret, curiose perquirere, incipientem habentia sensum et quae possent in utramque trahi sententiam instar cothurni. Id enim consilio suo multum conducere visum est, quod ita et nostri per ea facilius pertraherentur, et speraretur fore, ut eadem ab adversariis nullo adhibito examine admitterentur. Itaque libellum conscribunt dicta huiusmodi continentem, illorum tamen sententiam plane exponent, et mittunt ad illos quasi per illum coniungendi. Verum illi nullo modo volebant libellum admittere, ni prius examinaretur, sed eos vel ut se defenderent, provocabant, et solverent quae dubia erant in libello, vel suum, quem ipsi iam miserant, ab iis suscipi iubebant. Erat porro in illo perfecta Latinorum atque Graecorum de dogmate consensus et confessio, quod etiam ex Filio procedat Spiritus sanctus.

6. Multum post haec conteritur tempus, nostrique dilationem aegre ferebant, et inopiam deplorabant, deque fame conquirebantur: nam hoc etiam illis excogitatum est, nulli quidquam sumptuum conditorum suppeditare, ut propterea coacti paulatim illis succumberent. Quid plura? Non destiterunt salutis et religionis suae proditores omnem movere lapidem, donec synodo congregata effluerent, ut latinismus palam erumperet, praesidentibus imperatore et patriarcha, et despota illis assidente. Cum enim protulissent in medium dicta, quae Latinis favere videntur, tum ex illorum doctoribus, tum de magno Cyrillo: pugna mecum prius conserta, eodemque tempore subinde insultationibus mihi per sophismata procaciter factis, ita synodum interrogabant, quidnam sentirent de dictis illis, et si Filium Spiritus causam faterentur. Illi vero de dictis nihil se dubitare responderunt, quin germana doctorum sint, cum de hoc fidem iis faceret epistola sancti Maximi; causam vero Spiritus Filio tribuere, maior certe pars nullo modo volebant, quod ita statueret et ipse sapiens Maximus. Verum qui ad impietatem audaces erant, quique illos a principio secuti sunt, amplius pollicitationibus et muneribus pellecti, nuda fronte Filium Spiritus causam pronuntiarunt, quod ne in ipsis quidem Latinorum dictis ita disertis verbis reperitur expressum. Quorum sententiam ipse quoque patriarcha secutus est, quod esset iam pridem et ipse miser corruptus, simul vero discessionem inde sinitet, quamvis cum ad mortem debitum fatale compelleret. Ego vero cum scriptam haberem sententiam, fideique pariter meae confessionem (namque ita prius constitutum erat, ut suam unumquisque sententiam scriptam traderet), ut vidi illos magna iam propensione animi ferri ad conciliandam pacem, et eos qui mecum antea stabant, modo cum illis corruisse, nullam vero proorsus fieri scripturam mentionem: meam et ipse scripturam tenui, ne si illos irritassem, certum in periculum me committerem. Ceterum verbis libere exposui quid sentirem: dicta videlicet Occidentalium et Orientalium Patrum cohaerere aliter non posse, quam iuxta expositionem epistolae venerabilis Maximi, nimirum dicendo Filium non esse causam Spiritus: adnotans praeterea illud de additamento, quod propter allatas causas nec rite factum, nec iuxta sit ratione appositum. Post haec illi res suas egerunt, atque ad describendam definitionem et reliqua ad unitatem spectantia se contulerunt. Ego vero ex eo tempore segregatus ab illis et mihi ipsi vacans, ut sanctis meis Patribus ac doctoribus perpetuo adhaerere, per hanc meam scripturam sunt amplius quod erant, neque illud evasere, ad quod tendebant: nam relicta quidem est ab iis Hierosolyina, quae vere est *pacis visio*², et Sion mons, hoc est firma et inconcussa fides: verum fieri et dici unquam Babylonii nec volunt, nec possunt; hanc sane ob causam vocandi merito Graeco-Latini, usitato autem nomine vulgo appellati Latinizantes. Isti ergo homines, iuxta fabulosos hippocentauros semiferi, cum Latinis quidem fatentur Spiritum sanctum ex Filio procedere et habere Filium subsistentiae suae causam (haec enim sunt definitionis ipsorum verba); nobiscum autem dicunt illum ex Patre procedere. Et cum illis quidem licite ac rationabiliter fuisse appositum Symbolo additamentum aiunt; nobiscum vero illud exprimere nequam volunt; quanquam quod licite ac rationabiliter factum est, quis recuset exprimere? Et cum illis quidem azymum Christi corpus esse dicunt, nobiscum vero illud ad communionem sumere non ausint. An non satis haec sunt ad declarandum animum eorum, quod non indagandae veritatis studio, quam in manibus habentes prodidere, in unum cum Latinis convenerit locum, sed voluntate expiscandi aurum, et fictam, non veram unionem conciliandi?

2. Sed quemadmodum cum illis coniuncti fuerint, considerandum; nam omne quod cum alio coniungitur, per aliquod certe medium unitur. Quod igitur ad sententiam de Spiritu sancto attinet, visi sunt illis coniungi, sancientes illum a Filio etiam suam subsistentiam habere; et caetera omnia differunt, nec est inter eos quidquam unum, aut medium, aut commune; sed duo diversa Symbola nunc quoque recitantur, sicut et antea: duo quoque sunt differentia sacrificiorum genera, alterum quod pane fermentato conficitur, alterum quod azymo.

 Bina quoque baptismata, unum quod trina immersione confertur, alterum quod aquae infusione a summo vertice; et unum quidem, quod chrisma etiam adhibet, alterum vero quod adhibere illud nihil prorsus necesse habet. Instituta quoque ac mores in omnibus diversa omnino sunt, ieiunia, et ritus ecclesiastici, et similia. Quae ergo hic unio, ubi nullum patens ac manifestum apparet signum? et quomodo uniti sunt, qui sua retinere volunt?
 Hac enim lege suum ad unionem praebere assensum, quamvis a Patrum traditionibus desciverint.

3. At quam illi praeclaram obtundunt rationem? Nunquam, inquam, Graecorum Ecclesia dixit, Spiritum ex sole Patre procedere, sed simpliciter ex Patre procedere; hoc autem Filium non excludit a productione: ita ut hac ratione fuerimus et antea, et nunc quoque simus uniti. — Pro hominum dementia! pro excaecationem! Si Graecorum Ecclesia ex Patre procedere semper dixit, a Christo ipso et sanctis apostolis patribusque synodorum edocta; ex Filio vero nunquam dixit (hoc enim a nullo traditum accepit); quid aliud, quaeso, assererat, quam ex solo Patre procedere? Si enim non ex Filio, certum est ex Patre solo. Hoc ipsum gene-rationis exemplo scies. « Ex Patre », inquit, « natum ante omnia saecula ». Numquid addit quispiam, Ex solo? Nihil tamen secius hoc intelligimus, et si quando opus fuerit, exprimimus: nam Filium a nullo generari didicimus.
 Quocirca Iohannes Damascenus ex persona totius Ecclesiae et omnium christianorum: « Ex Filio », inquit « non dicimus Spiritum ».
 Si ergo etiam ex Filio non dicimus Spiritum, profecto ex Patre solo dicimus. Propterea paulo ante dixerat^a : « Filium non dicimus causam »; et sequenti capite, « Pater, inquit^b, solus est causa ».

1. Quid praeterea? Latinus, inquit, nunquam habuimus ut haereticos, sed tantum schismaticos. — Sumpsērunt autem hoc ab iis ipsis Latinis; nam illi nos vocant schismaticos, nihil habentes, cur nos de nostra accusent sententia, sed quoniam a debita illis, ut putant, descivimus obedientia. An vero sit aequum, a nobis etiam idem illis praestari, et accusandi non sint de sententia ipsi sua, considerandum. Causam certe schismatis illi dederunt, additamentum palam apposito, quod antea clam mussitabant. Ipsi vero non ab iis priores se iunximus, immo vero illos segregavimus ac praecidimus a communi Ecclesiae corpore. Qua de causa, obsecro? num ut recte sentientes, aut ob additamentum rite appositu? et quis hoc dicat, nisi sit prorsus mente permotus? Ergo ut absurda et impia sentientes, et temerarios additamenti auctores. Ut haereticos igitur sumus aversati : et hanc ob causam sumus ab illis dissociati. Quid enim aliud causae fuerit? Aiumt vero pie leges? « Haec reticus est, et legibus quae adversus haereticos « latae sunt, subiicitur, qui vel minimum a recta « fide declinat ». Si igitur Latini a recta fide nihil deflectunt, nequidquam illos plane praecidimus, sed si certe deflectunt, idque circa divinitatem Spiritus, in quem blasphemare periculum est omnium exitiosissimum, haeretici ergo sunt, atque ut haereticos a fidelium coetu abscidimus. Cur vero eos qui ab illis ad nos transeunt, chrismate inungimus? an non liquet, ut haereticos? At enim septimus oecumenicae synodi secundae canon^d : « Eos qui

« prius Latinorum dogmata moresque velit « e iurare, et canonice catechismo initietur, et in « numerum orthodoxorum referatur ». Audis? abrepti sunt non modo in mores, sed etiam dogmata quae non agnoscit Ecclesia; quae vero non agnoscunt orthodoxi, haeretica certe sunt.
 Audis etiam, initiandum esse canonice, atque in numerum orthodoxorum referendum? Quod si initiandus est, chrismate etiam profecto unguendus. Unde ergo nobis repente orthodoxi apparuerunt, qui per tot tempora et per tot Patres et doctores haereticis iudicati sunt?
 Quis illos tam facile orthodoxos fecit? Aurum, si quod verum est fateri velis, et lucra tua: immo vero aurum non illos fecit orthodoxos, sed te reddens illis assimilem in haeticorum partem detrusit.

5. Sed si medium, inquit, aliquid inter dogmata excogitemus, per illud et cum iis coniungemur, et res nostras optime componemus, cum nihil fateri cogamus praeter ea quae nobis consueta sunt et a Patribus tradita. — Hoc illud est quod ab initio multos decepit, persuasitque sequi homines, qui eos ad praed-rupta impietatis abdaxerunt. Nam esse quid medium inter utramque sententiam rati, ut contingit in quibusdam contrariis, ultro in perniciem incurrerunt. Verum dictio quidem reperiri poterit media inter duas opiniones, acquivoque utramque significans, sed contrariis sententiis interiectam esse mediam sententiam de re eadem, est impossibile; alioquin erit etiam quid medium inter verum et falsum, affirmationemque et negationem. Atqui non est; etenim de omni re aut affirmatio aut negatio. Si ergo Latinorum dogma verum est, quod ex Filio procedat, nostrum quod ex Patre solo, erit falsum, propter quod et dissidium secutum est.

 Si contra nostrum verum est, dogma illorum

6. Quid ergo futurum est mediis hisce Graecolatiniis, qui medium amplectentes, ex Latinorum institutis et dogmatibus quaedam aperte approbant; aliqua vero probant quidem, sed ipsi nequaquam amplectenda duxerint, alia vero ne probant quidem? Devitandi sunt non secus atque colubri non secus atque illi, cum sint etiam deteriores, qui Christum cauponantur, habentque illum quaestui. Hi enim sunt, ut inquit Apostolus^b, qui existimant quaestum esse pietatem; de quibus ipse subiungit: Huiusmodi homines devota; non enim ut addiscant, sed ut sibi aliquid asciscant, ad illos transfungunt. Quae vero societas luci ad tenebras, aut quae conventio Christi ad Belial? Et quae pars fideli cum infideli? Si quidem nos cum Damasceno^c et cunctis Patribus, « ex Filio vero Spiritum non dicimus »; isti autem cum Latinis ex Filio Spiritum dicunt. Spiritus in suo codice, seu potius podice^a pronuntiant (honoranda quippe est a nobis hoc nomine eorum definitio, caudam inter nates reflectendo (trepidando) ei subscripservunt). Et nos quidem cum Iustino philosopho et martyre dicimus^b: « Quomodo ex Patre Filius, ita etiam ex Patre Spiritus »: isti vero cum Latinis Filium quidem immediate, Spiritum vero ex Patre mediate asserunt. Et nos quidem cum Damasceno^c et cunctis Patribus differentiam generationis et processionis ignorare fatemur; isti vero cum Thoma et Latinis mediate et immediate hanc differre aiunt productiones. Et nos quidem increatae et divinae naturae increatum dicimus et voluntatem et operationem, ut Patres docent: isti vero cum Latinis et Thoma voluntatem quidem idem esse dicunt atque essentiam, sed divinam operationem creatam asserunt, sive illa nuncupetur deitas, sive divinum et immateriale lumen, sive Spiritus sanctus, sive quiddam aliud eiusmodi: atque ita deitate creatam et creatum lumen divinum et creatum Spiritum sanctum colunt improbae creaturae. Et nos quidem nec sanctos dicimus paratum sibi regnum obtinuisse, et arcana illa bona, nec peccatores iam esse in gehennam contrusos: sed utrosque esse in expectatione sortis, quae illos manet; idque pertinere ad futurum tempus post resurrectionem et iudicium; isti vero cum Latinis hos quidem statim post mortem pro meritis velunt aut praemio aut poena iam esse affectos; mediis vero, hoc est illis qui non sine poenitentia decesserunt

1. τιμῶν γὰρ — συνέθεντο om. codd. qui ὄρον habent, nec inmento, cum sententia, si ὄρον retineatur, nequeat intelligi; altamen in CD haec verba omissa non fuerunt. Locus aliam non patitur medelam, nisi eam quam adhibui recipiendo in lectum ὄρον, scilicet nomen substantivum verbi ὀρρωδοῦντες.

a. Vix latine reddi potest quod in graeco per iocum habetur. Caryophyllus in reddendo ὄρον posuit deformatione, mosque formidinis pleni ad vertendum ὀρρωδοῦντες. Verum tollitur hoc pacto iocus, seu potius impudens ludibrium, e voce ὄρον petitum, quae sono quidem ὄρον seu defuitioni fere similis est, sententia vero plane diversa, ut in lexicis videre est. Scripsit codice et podice, ut servetur intra utramque vocem illa habitudo quae in graeco per contempulum habetur: ὄρον enim est tum pars subiectae testiculis, tum sacri ossis extremum, podex. II. o sensu, ni fallor, vocem ioculari lasciviti usurpavit Marcus. Ad ὀρρωδεῖν quod spectat, significat formidare, quia canes degeneres caudam sub alium reflectere solent. — b. P. G., t. 6, c. 1223A. — c. P. G., t. 94, c. 824 A.

ignem ipsi purgatorium confingentes diversum a flammis gehennae assignant: ut per illum, ut aiunt, purgatis animabus post mortem, ii quoque cum iustis caelestis regno fruuntur. Haec enim continet definitio ipsorum. Et nos quidem iudaicum azymum aversamur, obtemperantes apostolorum canonibus; isti vero in eadem definitione, quod Latini sacrificant, Christi corpus esse affirmant. Et nos quidem contra leges, iussa et decreta Patrum dicimus appositum esse Symbolo additamentum; isti vero licite et rationabiliter factum illud asserunt: adeo norunt veritati et sibi ipsis congruentia dicere! Et nos quidem papam ut unum de patriarchis habemus, idque si recte de fide sentiat; isti vero illum Christi vicarium, patrem et doctorem omnium Christianorum magna gravitate pronuntiant. Fiant patre feliciores, caetera similes: nam et ille adversa utitur fortuna antipapam habens satis molestiarum illi exhibentem: et istis patrem et doctorem suum imitari non patitur animus.

7. Fugite ergo, fratres, illos et communionem eorum; sunt enim pseudapostoli, operarii subdoli, transfigurantes se in apostolos Christi. Et non mirum: Ipse enim Satanas transfiguratur se in angelum lucis^a. Non est ergo magnum, si ministri eius transfigurentur velut ministri iustitiae; quorum finis erit secundum opera ipsorum. Rursus idem apostolus de iisdem alio in loco: « Huiuscemodi, inquit^b, Domino nostro Iesu Christo non serviunt, sed suo ventri, et per dulces sermones et benedictiones seducunt corda innocentium. Sed firmum fundamentum fidei stat, habens signaculum hoc ». Et alibi^c: « Videte canes, videte malos operarios, videte concisionem ». Et alibi rursus^d: « Si quis vobis evangelizaverit praeter nostrae aetatis usos fuisse magistro, cum illarum rerum studium publicis calamitatibus iam pridem impediatur, atque umbra tantum earundem apud nonnullos, eosque admodum paucos, supersit; sed « quantum labris rigandis, non vero palato rigando », ut quidam ait¹, cum ab aliis accepissemus, supernae gratiae nostram remunerantis diligentiam auxilio contigit, ut voti composites fieremus longiusque in scientiis progrediremur. Ac modo etsi sciamus quantopere ceteris praestemus, est tamen nobis in deliciis discipuli vices obire omnesque nobis proponimus sequendos qui duces agere valeant, idque ut omnes possint, optamus, neque omnium esse magistri autumamus, sed nobis quidem ipsis cognitionem veritatis a Deo impetramus, quippe errores ei proximis valde metuumus ac reformidamus, pro divino beneficio habentes ab iis exsolvī. Si quis autem nos accedat disciplinae causa, nostram in primis ignorantiam multis verbis excusantes ac suadentes ut se potius alteri erudiendum tradat, vix tandem ei, si instet atque urgeat, morem gerimus, ne talenti, quo forte praediti sumus, accessio atque usura a nobis repetatur. Itaque cum ii simus, vereri haud licet, ne quando a recta deflectemus via, neque id nobis potius quam cuilibet alteri de se in metu ponendum est. Etenim quam olim sanam habuimus sententiam nunquam revera mutavimus; ad futuram vero quod attinet, spem in Deo maximam concipimus, nunquam eum permissurum, ut in mendacium erroremve inducamur, poenamque tam acerbam pro peccatis luamus. Quod si nonnulli et nunc et praeterito tempore nostram sententiam haud recte assecuti, sermonum nostrorum distorti sunt interpretes ac indices, sive ex inscitia, sive ex livore, ego iniuriam, etsi valde doleam, veniam facio, auctorem totius boni deprecans, ut scientiam ac virtutem in fratrum animos infundat.

3. Tum excogitatum mihi est quoddam huic malo remedium, etsi minime generosum, tamen necessarium. Nam usque dum communem vivendi morem mihi servandum existimavero, indulgentia forte quadam ductus atque grato urbanoque animo, non gloriae divitiarumve ceps vero apostolorum evangelique lectiones legantur. Alter autem introitus, magnus scilicet, alterum Domini adventum significat, in quo cum huc iterum cum gloria advenerit ad iudicandos vivos et mortuos, dignos secum suscipiet in supercaelestem regionem, perpetuo cum illis ibi mansurus, perfectiora ac diviniora eisdem revelans iuxta effatum³ : Cum illud bibam vobiscum novum in regno Dei. Aliam etiam rationem dixerit quispiam, magnum nimirum introitum figuram esse exsequiarum Salvatoris nostri, in quibus cum animam egisset, a Iosepho et Nicodemo ad sepulcrum delatus, paulo post resurrexit, mundumque universum ad suam agnitionem convertit. Similiter et in missa defertur sacer panis nondum consecratus et quasi mortuus, brevi tamen vivifici Spiritus virtute vivificandus atque in ipsum vivificum corpus commutandus.

Scias autem falsae synodi definitionem, seu potius vanam novitatem a nemine prorsus, ut plane decebat, susceptam fuisse, immo vero eos, a quibus edita est atque subscripta, uti execrabiles veritatisque proditores odio ab omnibus haberi, quin ullus eorum, qui hic sunt, hactenus cum illis concelebraverit. Deus autem qui omnia potest haec ad nostram conducatur utilitatem, Ecclesiamque suam, quam proprio redemit sanguine, in pristinam formam restituat. Custodi bonum depositum fidei⁴, profanas novitates prorsus abiiciens⁵.

Ego iter ad vos aggressus, quasi in caelum iros aedeundi angelorum in corporibus vitam aemulantes, viros supramundanam in mundo sapientiam exhibentes, viros Dei laudes iugiter in ore habentes, framasque bipennes, contem-plationis nimirum et actionis, ad arcenda vitia strenuis manibus portantes. Sed qui e caelo cecidit, Lucifer ille, quique semper nobis inquicquam mirandum, quod nos homines in-utiles nihilque boni possidentes prohibuerit, cum beatum Paulum, totius orbis solem, eodem damno affecerit. Saepius enim, ait^b, volui venire ad vos, et semel, et iterum, sed impedit

1. Religiosissime hieromonache et spiritualis pater, mihi que in Christo amatissime et honoratissime domine et frater, Deum precor ut sanctitas tua corpore etiam bene valeat: cuius sanctis precibus et ipse, Deo miserente, satis commode habeo.

Noveris me, statim ut Constantinopolim redii, cum in sedem patriarchalem ascendisset unus ex iis Latinorum fautoribus qui subscripserunt, molestiamque mihi afferret, in ecclesiam meam abisse necessitate coactum. In qua cum nihil titidem quietis haberem, sed gravi morbo correptus, multis etiam damnis et incommodis ab infidelibus vexarer, quod mandatum a principe non accepissem, inde quoque eo consilio discessi, ut in Montem Sanctum me conferrem. Itaque freto ad Callipolim traiecto, dum per Lemnum transirem, imperatoris iussu ibi comprehensus sum et custodia septus. Sed verbum Dei veritatisque virtus nequam devincitur, verum potius effuso ac prospero cursu fertur. Nam plerique fratres exilio meo incitati probris omnibus lacessant homines illos flagitiosos sanaeque fidei ac morum patriorum violatores, eosque veluti

3. Item accipe falsam illam unionem iamiam in eo esse, Dei favente gratia ac virtute, ut penitus dissolvatur, Latinorumque doctrinam non modo non firmiorem evasisse per pseudo-synodum, ad quod sua studia semper contulerunt, verum etiam vehementer confutari et coargui, adeo ut passim proscripturam tanquam blasphemam atque impiam, quin ad eam defendendam ii, qui illam confirmarunt, vel os aperire audeant. Enimvero patronus ille vestri istius mercenarii, non pastoris, stolidus inquam Monembasiensis, Prodromi praefecturam ab imperatore nactus, ne commemorator quidem, dum sacra fiunt, a suis monachis, nec ullo modo thure sufflatur ut reliqui fideles, sed commercium cum illo habent in negotiis dumtaxat expediendis, ac si purus putus esset consul. Cuius rei certior factus imperator, nihil dicit, immo aperte fatetur se facti pigere, culpam in eos, qui se subiecerunt ac subscripserunt, iniiciens. Cavete igitur vos ipsi, fratres, ne communicetis cum excommunicatis, neve commemoretis homines neutiquam commemorandos. EPHESII AD THEOPHANEM.

ΤΟΥ ἘΦΕΣΟΥ ΠΡΟΣ ΘΕΟΦΑΝΗΝ⁸.

1. Religiosissime hieromonache, mihi que in Domino amatissime atque honorandissime pater ac frater, Deum rogo ut vel corpore bene valeat sanctitas tua, cuius sanctis precibus et ipse miserente Deo mediocriter habeo.

Acceptis sanctitatis tuae litteris, solatium haud leve habui in tantis molestiis, quibus eo prenimur, quod homines praeter meritum honore graduque aucti a Dei Ecclesia, contumelia ac turpitudine illam adfecerint, ei ascivendo socios a multis saeculis praecisos sanctitatis tuae litterae, quae multum solami-nis iniucunt sinceritate voluntatis, integritate candoreque mentis ac communione sententiae demissum nostrum recreando animum. Neque enim iam de verbis certatio est, sed de rebus; neque tempus est dicta argumentaque colli-gendi (quorsum enim, cum iudices adeo sint corrupti?); sed qui diligunt Deum necesse habent operibus ipsis fortiter obsistere, quodvis periculum obire parati pro recta fide, ne impiorum consortio foedantur. Quare ne Syn-tagma quidem sanctitatis tuae imperatori tra-dere utile esse existimavi, nec plane citra periculum, cum ad nihil aliud iuvare possit in praesenti rerum statu nisi ad risum ludibriumque movendum eorum qui insipienter sapientes videntur temereque aguntur ab inordinato ac tenebrioso spiritu. Lam enim ob peccata nostra lum familiariter conversatus, perspectissimum habeo quanta polleat prudentia et sapientia, quanta dicendi facultate. Quare nihil dubito, quin ipse solus, ex iis qui hoc tempore supersunt, valeat adiuctrice manum porrigere rec-tae fidei, quae eorum furore iactatur, qui divinorum dogmatum sinceritatem corruperunt, quo reformetur, Deo iuvante, Ecclesia fidesque orthodoxa obfirmetur, dummodo velit ipse operi non desse, nec lucernam sub medio abscondere. Equidem neque illum ita affectum fore confido, neque propriae con-scientiae ita defuturum, ut Ecclesiam videns tempestate abreptam fidemque in homine infirmo inniti, humano more loquor, sciensque se habere quod in auxilium illi praestet, non Responsio domini Scholarii.

Ego, domine mi sancte, primum quidem magnae sanctitati tuae gratias ago pro laudibus, quas mihi tribuisti, dum ad me afflicti-dum dotes mihi adscripsisti, quas minime habeo, nec inesse mihi certo scio. Id sane effecit summa bonitas et virtus et sapientia magnae sanctitatis tuae, quam et ipse ab initio probe novi nec cessavi ad hanc usque diem valde admirari, magnae sanctitati tuae defendendae, quaecumque et patri et magistro et praeceptori debentur, sententia tua tanquam norma utens cum accuratae doctrinae tum rectissimi sermonis, iis quae tibi probabantur et ipse consentiens, quaecumque vero non erant ex animi tui sententia, ea absque dubitatione respiciens: et filii et discipuli partes erga magnam sanctitatem tuam explere nunquam recusavi.
 Cuius rei testem ipsam adhibeo magnam sanctitatem tuam. Nosti enim me nunquam non hoc modo affectum ad te accessisse, et dum intima animi mei consilia aperire, tales

2. Is igitur sanctissimus Marcus ipsius regiae urbis proles et alumnus fuit. A primo quidem capillo, ut ita dixerim, a suis parentibus communibus addiscendis disciplinis additus est: quas cum brevi tempore avis cuiusdam instar percussisset, omnes suos condiscipulos coaetaneosque antecedebat. Tum sacro maioris Ecclesiae adscitus ordini, benedictione sacraeque precatione impertita a sanctissimo inter patriarchas sapientissimoque illo Euthymio⁴, omne studium in scripturis divinitus inspiratis collocavit: moxque monastica veste sumpta in sacro magnoque Manganorum monasterio, totum se solitariae vitae devovit. Adeo se in coenobio propriae cella continebat studio utique servandae solitudinis, ut ne familiaribus quidem et amicis et ipsis sibi genere coniunctis visendi potestatem faceret, sed unam noctu et interdium operam impendebat in perpetua divinarum litterarum meditatione, unde sententiarum illud sibi comparavit pelagus, quod edita ab eo opera testantur.

minium reduci, atque ideo veritas ne sensim vastatis Romani imperii finibus, ipsa etiam urbium princeps in ditone redigeretur, quemadmodum utique reliquo tempore, pro dolor! accidit, aequum duxit eos bellis sibi adiungere, qui in Italia versabantur. Id vero tuto assequi non poterat, nisi coacto concilio ea capita theologiae nostrae contraria, quae illi novitatis studio dogmatibus orthodoxis interseruerant, totis viribus curaret aut componere aut de medio quodam modo tollere. Haec autem erant, tum Spiritum Sanctum ex Filio procedere, tum essentiam in Deo idem esse atque operationem : quae res, quantum equidem censebat, nisi synodaliter et ex professo ut ita dicam dilucidarentur, in unam recte sentiendi rationem utriusque populi neque convenirent, neque ea propter mutuum inter se auxilium ferrent. Quod optimum in speciem quidem consilium cum ille Christi cultor religiosissimusque imperator necessitate pressus sibi proposuisset, legationem rei tractandae causa ad Romanum antistitem misit. Is cum urbane quidem eam recepisset, de proposito mire gavisus, per legatos suos vicissim postulavit, ut concilium ad negotia componenda Florentiae haberetur, quod et factum est. Etenim imperator, assumptis nonnullis circa se delectis doctisque viris, adscivit etiam quem supra diximus beatum Marcum, eumque, ubi illuc advenit et coacta est synodus, huius exarcham, ut par erat, constituit; namque sex ex utraque parte designatis viris qui sermonem haberent, Marcus iussus est nostratibus praecire, inter quos et Bessario, praesul ille Nicaenus, et Gemistos, homines scilicet Deo infensi et multis modis corrupti, cum aliis interfuerunt versipellis sive rerum divinarum nudnatoribus. Isti non haeretici modo subdoli (ex quo factum est, ut adversariis terga darent suosque fautores eo ipso tempore ad veritatem tradendam honores praemiaque pollicitando sollicitarent), verum etiam impii

4. Porro, cum eorum nomina obiter memoraverimus, ut eorum impietas ac nequitia satis superque cunctis manifesta omnino pateat, ipsa quidem eorum verba hoc loco nuda referam; tum vero probum ac dedecus, quod inde colligitur, veluti in summa ostendam, ut posita iam ante omnium oculos mentis eorum foeditate, nemo unus sibi capiat hæc impia eorum scripta perlegere, atque noverint omnes, quantum sit vitium arrogantia, qua nonnulli sibi confidentes nec divinos patres tuto sequentes, in impietatis ac dementiae præcipitum abrepti sunt. Ita vero ad verbum ea se habent, quæ alter eorum, Bessario inquam cardinalis, ad Gemistum, hominem illum sceleratissimum, scripsit, solutiones scilicet quarundam difficultatum exposcens circa eos, qui, ut illi equidem censent, se ipsi producant, nimirum deos, de quibus disserendo a communi quidem opinione, qua omnia ab uno auctore, videlicet Deo, effecta fuisse statuitur, magistros suos ac proprii sui plane exitii auctores discrepare arbitrabatur. Constat autem inter nos omnesque secundum divinam humanamque sapientiam recte sentientes, qui sincera utique conscientia veritatem confitentur, hominem hunc neutiquam viris illis, quos hoc loco enumerat, multos deos colendi errorem crimini veris fuisse, dum Gemisto suffragatori suo hæc dubia proponit (qui enim istud egisset, cum probe sciret eum eiusdem atque illi fuisse opinionis?); sed eorum theologiam per simulationem uti ænigma obstupescentem ac perhibenti animo exoptantem de ea firmissime instrui, nec, ut ita dixerim, balbutire. sertim cum conclusio, quae exinde infertur, male deducta fuerit, id quod, ut in viro philosophiam proficiente, prorsus incongruum videtur. Sed vana gloria, inquit Chrysostomus laemnes³, ubique in seipsis impingit. Quis enim, si salvo Dei cultu argumentationem scienter instituat, ens aliquod censuerit ita per se subsistens esse, ut se ipsum constituat et ex nihilo in esse per se prodeat; seu, quod idem est, ex potentia in actum se ipsum exserat? Id ne in ipsam quidem omnium causam, universorum nimirum Deum, cadere dicimus, a quo omnia ex non esse in esse producta sunt. Etenim id quod ex potentia in actum seipsum educit, fuit profecto tempus, cum non esset; quidquid autem tempore posterius, quomodo aeternum? quod vero non aeternum, quomodo Deus? Sane Aristoteles, littera lamda Metaphysicorum, id ipsum ostendit, dum praestantissimam primam mentem, scilicet Deum, asserit purum esse actum potentiaeque penitus expertem. « Possible namque est, » ait⁴, non operari, quod potentiam habeat: « nec item si operabitur quidem, substantia » vero eius potentia sit: non enim erit perpetuus motus. Quod enim potentia est, contingit non esse. Oportet igitur esse tale principium, cuius substantia actus sit ». Namque cum demonstrare vellet Deum et principium expertem esse et aeternum, neque existentiam nasci a seipso, argumentationis vi ac necessitate coactus, illum et purum actum edicit et actum item esse ipsam eius existentiam, longe ab eo repellens quicquid potentiae sit iuxta duplicem vocis huius significationem. Quare, ut consecrarium est, eundem asserit penitus immobilem. Undenam enim moveretur? Nam si utique moveretur, e potentia moveretur in actum. Atqui, cum actus quidem purus sit, prorsus immobilis secundum substantiam manet, alia utique omnia ineffabili potentia movens ac pro sua voluntate petuntans, ut qui universa entia tam intelligibilia quam sensibilia considerit. Quare eundem definit: animans aeternum optimum. Atque tudo: unus esto princeps ». Ac si dixisset: Unum est rerum principium et unus Deus.

7. « Quod enim sufficienter fit uno posito », ut ait alius quidam theologus¹, « melius est per « unum fieri quam per multa. Sed rerum ordo « est sicut melius potest esse: non enim poten« tia agentis primi deest potentiae, quae est « in rebus ad perfectionem. Sufficienter autem « omnia complentur reducendo in unum pri« mum principium. Non est igitur ponere « plura principia neque plures deos.

« necesse esse per se ipsum. Impossibile est « igitur esse plura quorum utrumque sit « necesse esse: et sic plures deos.

« Amplius³. Si sunt plures dii, oportet « quod natura deitatis non sit una numero « in utroque: oportet igitur esse aliquid dis« tinguens naturam divinam in hoc et in illo.
« Sed hoc est impossibile, quia natura divina « non recipit additionem neque ullam diffe-

Etenim si plures essent dii, cum ipsi sibi essentiam tribuant et ipsi se producant et ipsi suimetipsorum causa sint, plures etiam habebunt principatus. Sed omne quod plura habet principia, id natura sua seditiosum est et turbulentum totiusque divisionem concitat. Ea enim ex causa Iupiter ipse, iuxta Homerum, structis a ceteris diis insidiis, in eo erat ut prosterneretur et in vincula coniceretur, nisi citius a Thetide certior factus de inita coniuratione, Aegeonem sibi custodem constituisset¹. Sane si Graeci in sua de diis doctrina unius principatum statuissent, eiusmodi seditio ac confusio locum apud eos non habuisset nec fabulosa garrulitas. Quare idem Homerus multorum dominatum aspernatus, « non est bonum, ait², plurimum principatus : unum princeps esto ». Quae verba Aristoteles, ut philosophum decet, mutuatus, in tradenda sua theologia polyarchiam reiecit monarchiamque probavit, hoc eodem adhibito versu.

8. Atqui Aristoteles, quamvis gentilis, esset manifestus, tamen veritatem in nonnullis videtur carptim tetigisse, etsi essentiam et operationem in Deo idem esse falso arbitretur³. Nos enim aliquid essentiam, aliquid vero operationem et censum recte et alidimus: id enim quod habet⁴ distingui ab eo quod habetur, asserunt vere divini sapientissimique theologi. Sed, ut ut est, ille veritatem in plerisque aliquatenus attigisse deprehenditur: at vero Bes-sario et Gemistus, vel post latam gratiae legem, quam simulate participabant, et emissum ex ea veritatis divinitus datae florem, plane insipientes manserunt, ut proverbio dicitur: Qui per cribrum videre non valet, caecus est. Sic vapores, cum terra madefacta fuerit atque a sole calefacta, quatenus plus minusve caliditas et siccitas et humiditas promiscue circumferuntur usque ad eum locum, ubi solaris radii repercussus iam desinit, eo quod calor illie debilitetur et frigus praevaleat, necessario dissolvuntur : ac proinde e calore, si magis refervescat, fulgura, sin minus, venti nascuntur; ex humido vero, nubes; et e nubibus, pluviae. Item species ex semine, hoc autem a generante qui sit actu integer. Atque ita porro ab alio ad aliud procedendo in via nequaquam subsistes donec, ad primum perveneris principium et causam, scilicet ad ipsissimum ens, Deum.

9. Liqueat igitur nullum esse ens quod ita per se subsistat, ut generationem a seipso nanciscatur, nec inter mere intelligentia, nec inter mere sensibilia, nec inter ea quae sunt in medio. Eisi enim compositam substantiam definituri dicamus, eam esse rem per se subsistentem quae altero non indigeat ad subsistendum, tamen, dum id dicimus, minime censemus eam sibi per se tribuere existentiam, adeo ut una eademque res causa simul sit et causata, ceu dii illi a Gemisto et Bessarione positi. Namque ridiculum esset ac satis stultum, si quod in eam substantiam immaterialem et cuiusvis materialiter immaterialiter plane vacuum nec ullo modo compositam, quae se ipsa quasi circulariter intelligit perfecta quadam simplicissimaque intelligentia, nullatenus naturaliter cadit, id ipsum substantiae congrueret compositae et materiali, quam quidem temporaneam esse plane constat, ut quae ab alio et existentiam et compositionem acceperit, nimirum ab universorum causa. Hoc igitur nec censemus nec dicimus, sed quod iugiter manu, a qua producta est, non indigeat : ubi enim causa efficiens semel saturata est ac plene perfuita, ipsa sibi sufficit tum ad suam ipsius tum ad accidentalium existentiam. Nihil ergo in rebus ita per se subsistit, ut a se ipso generationem accipiat: substantias vero per se subsistere eo dicimus modo, quo exposuimus, non quod ab altero non productae fuerint, sed quod a prima causa conditae, ex se iam pares sint ad existendum.

f. 271. 10. Nec minus ridiculum est, quod deos sibi effingant corruptioni obnoxios ac plane finitos. Si enim plures sint et multitudine auctiores fiant, finiti etiam profecto erunt. Nam infinitas considerari non potest nisi in uno solo universorum auctore, cui etiam immutabilitas attribuitur et omnimoda incompositio, nec non immaterialitas et simplicitas et omnipotentia, ceteraque omnia, quae veluti perfectiones quaedam ei essentialiter insunt utpote enti revera absolutissimo et uni soli summe bono, in quo eae coalescunt modo incomprehensibili et singulari secundum excellentiam quamdam ineffabilem et inexplicabilem. Etenim inter ea entia, quae ab eo condita sunt, aliud aliud eatenus potentius est, ut ita dixerim, et perfectius et a materia remotius et infinitius, quatenus unumquodque eum participare potest; at vero si cum eo conferantur, omnia aequae imperfecta sunt ac substantiae vacua, cum ille infinitis modis infinite ab omnibus omnino semotus sit iuxta initiatoriam theologiae scientiae rationem¹. Itaque cum ii quos ponit dii multi sint, hos finitos esse plane necesse est, itemque corruptibiles, quantum equidem censent, utpote genitos. Nam si per se subsistunt, profecto sunt etiam geniti, atque ideo corruptioni obnoxii : hi enim, ut est illorum opinio, ipsi se, cum non essent, in esse producant, licet Proclus eorum quod fit expers erit generationis? Si vero quod fit generatum est, id ipsum corruptibile sit oportet. Quare deos a Bessarione Gemistoque positos et corruptibiles esse et per se non subsistere plane constat, cum ex vulgo statuta diversa, ea ipsa poterit et eadem per se esse et altera? Constat enim causatum et causam alterum revera esse et alterum, nisi nos ebriorum more insanimus. Id clare evincitur vel ex ipsa notione eorum quae sunt ad aliquid, ad quae sicut ad suam speciem iam causa quam causatum referuntur. Ea enim ad aliquid dicuntur, quoquoque ea ipsa quae sunt, aliorum esse dicuntur vel quovis alio modo ad alterum referuntur: nam genus de sua etiam specie univoce praedicari solet. Quod si nos in nostra de Deo disserendi loquendive ratione dicimus, Patrem causam esse Filii et Spiritus, qui ex ipso sunt tanquam causati: tamen aliam quidem atque aliam causam dicimus aliorum atque aliorum causatorum in una natura ac substantia: siquidem alias atque alias dicimus hypostases, non tamen aliud atque aliud. « Vocem enim alium », ut ait philosophus neque ac theologus Gregorius¹, « de iis quorum eadem substantia est, novi usurpari ». Equidem Deum dicimus primo ac per se seipsum intelligere, non vero seipsum producere vel causam esse sui ipsius. Nam cum res intellecta perfectio sit intelligentis², non erit aliud quidpiam primo intellectum a Deo praeter seipsum, quia nihil omnino exstat eo nobilius ac perfectius. Sin secus, cum operatio intellectualis speciem simul ac nobilitatem habeat secundum id quod est primo intellectum, operatio quidem intellectualis Dei speciem ac nobilitatem haberet secundum illud, quod est aliud ab ipso: hoc autem est impossibile. Nihil ergo est, quod a Deo primo et per se intelligatur aliud ab ipso. Itaque eum dicimus seipsum intelligere, non autem causam esse sui ipsius. Nulla ergo res, si una eademque est, causata potest esse et causa, neque ullo modo per se subsistere, prout iam demonstratum est, quasi ipsa sibi existentiam substantiamque daret, ne ipse quidem omnium rerum intelligibilium ac sensibilibum opifex et Deus noster. Iterum enim dicit illa vere philoso-phica ac theologica vox in oratione De dog-mate et constitutione episcoporum: « Princi« pii igitur experts est Pater: nec enim « aliunde, nec a se ipso esse habet. Filius « autem, si quidem Patrem ut causam acci« porum Dominus temporibus subiectus est ». Aureus vero orator loannes in prima e suis De Incomprehensibili concionibus: « Quod « enim Deus, inquit⁸, ubique sit, novi, et quod « totus quidem ubique sit; est enim partitionis « experts. Quo pacto autem, nescio: id enim « ratio assequi non valet. Qui enim possit ea « cognosci substantia, quae nec a se ipsa nec « ab alio esse habeat? » Ergo Deus non est quidpiam per se subsistens. Atqui, si Deus non est quid per se subsistens, multum sane abest ut aliud quicquam ex entibus eiusmodi aliquid sit, cum omnia ex non esse in esse ab illo producta fuerint. Quin immo neque praecise dicimus Deum sibi ipsi sufficere ad subsisten-dum. Quod enim sibi ex sese sufficit, id tan-tummodo sufficiens est; quidquid autem est sibi sufficiens, id non habet quod communicetur. Atqui Deus nec est sibi sufficiens, sed supersufficiens; nec plenus, sed superplenus, omnesque ex eo profluent bonitatis rivi. Simi-liter, si rem accurate consideres, Deus non quid aeternum, sed proaeternum proprie dixeris; deinde habetur aevum; demum id quod sempiternum est. Illud enim sempiter-num dicitur, quod aevum participat; res autem quaelibet participans re participata inferior profecto est. Quanto igitur antecedit id quod sibi sufficiens est, tanto exsuperat etiam id quod per se subsistit.

Illi sane iis invident, qui impietatis eorum errorisque participes effecti, ab eorumdem tamen in verbis componendis perita quam longissime distant. Itaque non quod ulla ex his rationibus moveamur, sed quod aegre feramus eorum apertissimam impietatem Deique negationem, quam quidem animis oreque conceptam studiose in scribendo effuderunt ad simpliciores plane decipiendos, prout vel ab operis exordio diximus, fervido fidei studio permoti huiusmodi in eos usi sumus sermonibus ac responsis. Quare si quis ex hisce nostris adversus eos verbis succenseat, is, ut videtur, christianorum religionem nomenque e mentibus, in eodem atque illi errore impietateque versatur.

13. At vero verba quoque scelestissimi istius Gemisti hoc loco quasi obiter nobis referenda sunt, ac videndum quo pacto re scriptis ad Bessarionem defectionis suae socium litteris respondeat. « Profecto nequaquam arbitrandum est, inquit^b, viros illos, « quos recenset, in omnibus inter se convenire. Sane in plerisque ac praecipuis capitibus inter se consentiunt; sunt tamen, in quibus dissident. Exempli causa, quem « Plato citimum caeli huius opificem facit, « eum Proclus ad Orphei fabulas Platonica « referens dogmata quartam a prima causa « constituit; Plotinus vero tertium, ut qui « plerosque poetarum suspexerit; Iulianus « vero, secundum, uti a Maximo forsitan didicerat ».

Platonica refert dogmata: ubi ipsa Nox ut propheta et vates apparet plane digna istis tenebrarum filiis. Sane quae noctu fiunt, ut proverbio dicitur, interdui ridiculissima videntur. O quantas falsitates et ineptias sapientium istorum theologia effinxit! Quid turpius excogitari possit? Exsecrabiles quidem illi ob errorem, execrabiliores autem ob eorum, quae venerantur, vilitatem. Et illi philosophiam affectant et philosophandi artem, ut diximus, profitentur, quae scilicet, utpote in ipsiusmet entis, id est veritatis, investigatione potissimum versari, illudque studiosae investigare solita, fabulosa istiusmodi figmenta tanquam male deducta entique contraria (falsa enim sunt) detestatur penitusque abiicit, praesertim illam multitudinem deorum, qui quatenus multi⁹ catenus finiti sunt et corruptibiles et imperfecti, ut ante diximus. Insuper, cum ab unitate tum ab invicem distant; sed quanto magis distant, tanto magis unitate carent et bonitate excidunt. Quare nec sunt simpliciter boni; quatenus vero non boni, mali sunt, quales improbos novimus fuisse daemones, qui boni natura sua cum essent, prava voluntate turpissimi ac mali facti sunt. Hi quidem mali daemones cum Gemistum post obitum discedentem perquam festive excepissent et comiter, ut qui vitam in corpore ad eorum plane nutum transigisset, ad amentes eiusdem filios Bessario, eiusdem atque ille opinionis vir, missa epistola ad consolationes, quoad ei liceret, afferendas, dicit^h: « Perlatum est ad me commune » parentem ac magistrum, terrenis rebus qui « buslibet depositis, in caelum lucidissimaque » loca avolasse, arcanum cum diis Olympi saltatulum iacchum ». Sed heus tu, si ex tua una sola, non Pythagorae Platonisque sententia (hi enim non in caelum animas, ut illic iterum descendentes in corpora imitantur, sed in tartarum assuerunt abire, inde rursus in vitam redituras: quo fit ut hominum animae certo orbe non descendant, ut tu asseris, sed e tartaro ascendant: non enim in caelum puramque regionem, sed in tartarum, ut dictum est, ab illis dicuntur abire, modo in Canem, modo in Plutonem, modo in Persephona: id enim in Phaedone secundum Platonem arbitratur Socrates dicens: « Bonam spem de animo suo habere « debet, quicunque aliis voluptatibus ornamento, et sicque corporis neglectis, voluptates, quae in « discendo percipiuntur, studiosè sectatus fuerit, « animumque non alieno, sed suo decoraverit « ornamento, temperantia, iustitia, fortitudine, « libertate, veritate, sic ad tartarum migrationem « expectans, quasi inde migraturus, cum fatum « vocaverit); — si igitur ita e tartaro ascendentes in alia imitantur corpora et reviviscant, undenam tibi liquet, eam animam, quae in Gemisti corpus deverterit, Platonis fuisse? Neque enim unus solus in praesenti vita sapiens existit Plato, sed ante illum plurimi, post vero haud pauci cum sermone tum mente ei aequales, immo multo eo praestantiores fuerunt; praesertim vero plerique sanctae nostrae Ecclesiae sacri doctores eum et doctrina et ingenio longe multumque superarunt: ex quo fit, ut plane incertum sit cuiusnam fuerit eiusmodi anima. Etenim fieri potest, ut primum alterius cuiusdam fuerit, dein in Platonem immissa, ex eo rursus in alium traducta revixerit, multis permutatis corporibus etiam forsitan bestiarum ratione carentium, puta asini aut equi aut leonis aut apis aut vespae, ac tandem in Gemistum deverterit, rursusque ex eo in alia, ita ut dici nequeat cuius tandem fuerit talis anima: neque enim huius vel illius definite dicenda est; nam eiusdem una tantum per infinitam corporum multitudinem continua transmigratio censetur. Quare nos omnino latet, cuius fuerit anima illa, quae e tartaro egressa in Gemisti corpore iam composito ad hominis perniciem inhabitaverit. Quod si Platonis fuerit illa anima, Gemistus utique absque anima propria primum in vitam editus est, sola sensibili rationisque experte anima praeditus ac citatus: serius vero, post acceptam scilicet Platonis animam, ratione instructus et humano more ipse se movens aequae ac reliqui homines. Atqui nec ipse nec unus aliquis hominum individuum vocari iure potest: nam unus atque idem cum in Gemistum tum in Platonem dividi ac scindi perhibetur: in Gemistum quidem, si corpus: in Platonem vero, si animam spectes. Eodem modo Bessario quidem secundum corpus, Epicurus vero secundum animam erit, atque ita porro reliqui homines. Atque hoc pacto diluitur philosophicus obtentus rationalis illius Bessarionis sententiae.

20. Huiusmodi autem doctrinam ab ipsa rei natura et consequentia discrepare nec plane cohaerere, res est perspicua propter hanc causam. Siquidem animae rationalis species haudquaquam ita natura comparata est, ut in corpus immittatur, cui anima rationis experte naturaliter inest, quia illa rationalis est et immortalis, quantum equidem censent cum exteri sapientes et ipse Plato, tum nostri theologo, tum ipsa veritas; haec vero rationis experte et mortalis, una interiens cum animantis humoribus. Ut igitur quam maximo inter se discrimine differunt (tanto certe, quantum ne dici quidem possit), sic etiam harum corpora nec non utriusque corporis membra alia ab aliis discrepant. Nam alterum quadrupes est et in terram pronum, ad nihil aliud respiciens quam ad unum solum cibum capiendum, naturae suae consentaneum; homo vero est animal bipes et erecto capite graditur, quodque maximum est, insitis proprietatibus et cerebro pollet, aliaque omnia tam membra quam sensoria prorsus dissimilia habet, ita ut animae rationalis facultates iis congruenter utendo suas quaeque proprias operationes aptissime eliciant, nimirum intelligendi, cogitandi, opinandi, imaginandi, sentiendi: quibus adhibitis, homo semper ad res intelligibiles considerandas incitatus, ad superiora naturali desiderio cietur, rerum aeternarum vias ac rationes addiscendas impellitur, mente sua mentis primae rerum officis pulchritudinem perverstigat, a qua illustratus divinaque mutatione permutatus, illius particeps plane efficitur. Quare ex parte intelligentiae, liberi arbitrii, immortalitatis, imago quoque illius iure dicitur. Eam quidem ob causam homo, etsi conveniat in genere cum aliis animalibus, specie tamen ab eis differt. Atqui cum discrimen secundum speciem discrimine secundum genus longissime praestet, diversas etiam in res subiectas inducit species, ut ante diximus.

21. Praeterea³, quamvis anima rationalis dicatur species in materiam inmissa, tamen materiam organumque naturaliter sibi coniunctum habet, quod substantiae suae congruat, prout sapientissimo Dei officio constitutum est. Nam mens quidem et sentiendi facultas ita in ea naturaliter insunt, ut quo modo sentiendi facultas ad sensibilia, eodem modo intelligentia ad intelligibilia se habeat: nihilominus tamen secundum aliam rationem dissimiliter se habent, quatenus sentiendi facultas a re sensibili patitur cum aliqua corporis immutatione: unde rerum sensibilibus excellentia sensoria laedere solet, id quod in intellectu non contingit; nam intellectus, si perquam maxima intelligibilibus intellexerit, magis potest postmodum intelligere minora. Si vero in intelligendo fatigetur corpus, hoc est per accidens, quatenus intellectus indiget operatione virium sensitivarum, per quas ei phantasmata praeparantur. Quare Aristoteles, dum in libro primo

De Anima absurdam huiusmodi Pythagorae Platonisque circa animam opinionem deridetur, dicit¹ : « Perinde quasi fieri possit, ut « quavis anima sine ullo discrimine quodvis « corpus subeat, ut Pythagoricorum fabulae « dicunt : unumquodque enim propriam « speciem habere formamque videtur. Perinde « igitur dicunt atque si quispiam artem fabri« lem fistulas subire dicat : etenim ars quidem « instrumentis, anima vero corpore utatur « oportet », quod sibi congruenter apteque conveniat. Neque enim qualibet animae species ad quodlibet corpus naturaliter aptatur.
 Non ergo anima rationalis ita comparata est, ut bestiae corpus subeat, sive pravam cum proprio suo composito, sive iustam et sanctam duxerit vitam : ambo enim sunt unius atque eiusdem speciei. Si quis vero dixerit, animam a divina iustitia immitti in bestiae corpus sibi oppositum poenae luendae gratia, is probe illud sciat, poenam scilicet, quae ei aptissime potissimeque congruat, eam esse, ut Dei gloria ac claritate misere excidat, cuius imagine antea resplendebat contemplationis eius pulchritudine perfruendo, quemadmodum christiana religio nostra proficitur. Etenim cum materiae expers sit et immortalis, ad eum qui summe immortalis est et immaterialis naturali contentione perpetuo fertur. Quare si ei acci-dat, utpote corporis inquinamentis praeteri suam naturam irretitae, ut illum amittat, cuius naturali appetitu flagrabat, id illi erit extremae poenae ac moerori.

22. — Animam autem rationalem in ipsa brutorum animalium corpora abduci atque protrahi iisque immisceri secundum Pythago-ricos et Platonicos, rursus ex his perspicuum fit, quae secundum Platonem in Phaedone Socrates ait¹ : « Induunt autem animae, o Cebes, ut ex « rei natura confici potest, eiusmodi mores, « quales in vita quique exercuerunt. — Quales

sophum decet, sibi tantum non sumpsit, ut haec confidenter scriberet; Bessario vero, pravissima huiusmodi placita mordicus tenens, iactanter impudenterque, ut erat, expressam super hisce sententiam rationi plane consentaneam pronuntiat, nihil ex iis subtrahens, quin animadvertat multifariam, quibus laborabant, vitiositatem, quae vel ipsi caecis perspicua apparet: idque post manifestatum in carne Dominum Deum et Salvatorem nostrum Iesum Christum, per quem certam super omni re veritatem compertam habemus: quo fit, ut Plato forsitan culpa liberetur, quippe qui ante illum vixerit, Bessarion vero omnis omnimodaque excusatio adimatur.

23. Quare nos illud recte omnino confidenterque iam asserimus, non Platonis animam e tartaro ascendisse Gemisti corpus subiturnam, post relictam paludem illam Stygem et Pyriphlegethontem, ut ille ait, et Cocytum (id enim fieri non posse iam satis demonstravimus), sed universam improborum daemumion turbam, quae in animata amborum corpora illapsa, eos subduxit et induxit, ut talia quaedam et sentirent et ad se invicem scriberent, multitudinem deorum, qui se ipsi producant, in rerum universitatem inferentes, ciurato uno revera opifice et conditore universitatis Deo, qui si, accurata philosophiae ac theologiae ratione habita, unus est, quemadmodum quidem et erat et est et erit, itemque si unum et ipsummet bonum dicitur, utpote solus universam in se complexus bonitatem modo eminenti atque singulari, quid opis est alios fingere ac ponere particulares deos, qui se ipsi procreant ac per se subsistant, cum nihil aliud sint nisi forte peculiare unitates particularesque bonitates? Aut enim ille quamlibet praestantissime complexus est bonitatem, omnia omnino bona reddendi vi pollens (hanc enim voluntatem profecto habet), necnon ut boni principium iugiter operans, cum omnipotens optimusque et sit et denominative laudetur, et hoc modo supervacaneum sane est multos deos ponere: vel, si superflui quidem non sunt, certe bonitates quasdam constituent, quas ipsi per se rebus impertiantur, quo fit ut ille non amplius sit omnipotens nec summe bonus, nec proinde ipsismet bonum simpliciter neque ipsismet unum, quia nec solus, neque omnipotens, sed particularis et ipse atque unus e multis; aut eos forsitan nominant deos^a, qui a nobis divini angeli dicuntur, divinosque ordines horum agmina intelligunt; at vero vel istis congruunt, ut par est, tum totalitates et particularitates, tum proximitates ac distantiae unitatis. Quamvis enim immateriales sint et incorporei, tamen haud incircumscripti sunt nec supersubstantiales: id enim unius est divinitatis. Atque isti nec sunt nec nominantur dii, nec ipsi per se subsistunt et se ipsi procreant, nec ipsi, cum non essent, ut sint efficiunt; neque vero ipsi sibi ridicule et absurde causae suae sunt et causati, quales Bessarionis Gemistique dii; sed ex nihilo in esse ab optimo Deo et universorum principio intelligibiliter conditi, quemadmodum loquitur Gregorius noster a vera theologia cognominatus^b: « Primum quidem angelicas » et caelestes virtutes excogitavit, atque illa » cogitatio opus erat, quod Verbo conficiebatur ac Spiritu explebatur; atque ita secundi » splendores procreati sunt, primi splendoris » administri ». Eo inquam pacto conditi ab universitatis Deo, rursus sunt administratorii spiritus, ut cum divino Paulo loquamur^c, in ministerium missi propter eos, qui hereditatem capiunt salutis; quin etiam divinae gloriae apparitores.

simus vero Spiritus per processionem tanquam ab una causa effulserunt; sibi in re consentientes habens in primis ac praecipue ipsum unigenitum Dei Patris principii expertis Filium Deum, qui ante saecula modo arcano manens in paternis sinibus, postremis temporibus nobiscum in carne conversatus homoque re ipsa factus, qui sua proprietate ullo modo excederet, ac magister verae theologiae effectus, in sacro evangelio pronuntiat ac dicit* : *Cum autem venerit Paracletus, quem ego mittam vobis a Patre, Spiritum veritatis, qui a Patre procedit, ille testimonium perhibebit de me. Porro aliud quidem esse missionem, aliud vero processionem, plane constat : mittit enim Filius Spiritum consentiendo Patri in illo mittendo et ablegando, quemadmodum etiam ipse Filius a Spiritu manifeste amandatur secundum divinam Scripturam^b : Spiritus Domini super me; propter quod unxit me, evangelizare pauperibus misit me. Etenim cum una sit substantia ac natura Patris et Filii et Spiritus sancti, una profecto est etiam eorum voluntas, operatio, potentia, consilium. Quare et verbis Deo plane dignis dicit : Quem ego mittam (id est « consensu Patri praestito amandabo ») Spiritum veritatis, qui a Patre (ubi observa articulum τοῦ, qui determinandi vim habet, ac si diceret : « Qui a solo Patre ») procedit, scilicet « qui a Patre esse habet » : hoc enim aperte significat vox procedit. — Hunc igitur in primis habens divus Marcus sacrum institutorem atque in tradenda altissima theologiae doctrina interpretem; deinde eodem modo disserentes omnes etiam Ecclesiae praecones ac theologos a Deo edoctos, inter quos maxime praestat peritissimus in divinis Gregorius, a vera theologia merito cognominatus, qui in omnibus quidem forsitan locis divinorum suorum eximiae altitudinis librorum, ex uno Patre Spiritum sanctum prodire affirmat, cum ille una sit ambarum personarum causa, in oratione vero ad Heronem philosophum de eadem re disputans multo evidentiùs dicitur : « Quin pietatis nostrae, « inquit, doctrinam praescribe, sic nos insti- « tuens, ut Deum unum ingenuum agnosca- « mus, hoc est Patrem; unum item genitum « Dominum, Filium videlicet, qui Deus qui-*

COMMENCEMENT DU MOIS BËNI DE BAOUNAH

En ce jour eut lieu la consécration de l'église de saint Léonce (Laioutyous) le Syrien (Eh-Châmi) : des merveilles apparurent par son fait. Ainsi, quand le saint fut martyrisé dans la ville de Tripoli (Tarabolos)¹ le 22 du mois d'abib, comme le témoigne sa vie, une femme chrétienne, dont le mari était un des principaux officiers, vint prendre le corps du saint, après avoir dépensé pour cela des sommes considérables. L'enveloppa dans un vêtement doré appartenant à son mari et le plaça dans un coffre dans un cellier de son habitation : puis elle suspendit une lampe et fit faire une image du saint. L'empereur Dioclétien (Diqlâdyinos), irrité contre l'officier, son mari, l'avait condamné à une prison perpétuelle dans Antioche (Antâkyah). Quand la femme prit soin du corps du saint, le martyr et le chevalier du Messie n'accepta pas qu'elle l'emportât sur lui en générosité, mais il la rétribua en ce moment en délivrant son mari et la récompensa pour l'avenir en intercédant pour elle devant le Messie. Cette nuit, il apparut à son mari, l'officier emprisonné, et répandit sur lui une telle lumière que la prison en fut illuminée. Cet homme vit un jeune cavalier éclatant et brillant de lumière, étant avec lui dans l'intérieur de la prison et portant le vêtement doré qu'il savait être le sien. Le cavalier lui dit : « Ne t'adlige pas et ne t'attriste pas : demain tu seras délivré, tu mangeras avec l'empereur à sa table et tu iras dans ta demeure. » L'homme demeura stupéfait à la vue du cavalier, de l'éclat qui le couvrait, de son entrée dans la prison, quoiqu'elle fût fermée, et du manteau doré qu'il avait laissé dans un coffre. — Puis le saint disparut et alla cette même nuit trouver l'empereur qu'il frappa du pied; Dioclétien se réveilla et, à sa vue, fut saisi d'effroi et de crainte. « Demain de bonne heure, lui dit le martyr, fais sortir tel officier de la prison, honore-le et laisse-le aller chez lui, sinon, tu périras. » L'empereur répondit en tremblant : « Oui, mon Seigneur, je ferai tout ce que tu m'ordonnes. » Le lendemain, de bon matin, il l'envoya tirer de prison, lui témoigna de grands égards, le revêtit d'un vêtement d'honneur et mangea avec lui à sa table. Il lui apprit qu'il avait vu le cavalier et l'étonnement de l'officier redoubla. L'empereur croyait que c'était de la magie, mais l'autre lui dit : « Je ne sais pas de magie et je ne connais pas celui qui l'a apparu. » Dioclétien n'osa pas lui parler de ce qui tourmentait son cœur, mais il le renvoya dans sa ville, comblé d'honneurs. Quand l'officier se mit en route, le saint l'accompagna et resta avec lui à causer jusqu'à ce qu'il arriva à la ville de Tripoli; alors il disparut subitement. L'officier entra dans sa maison, salua les siens et leur raconta comment le cavalier lui était apparu à l'intérieur de la prison, portant le vêtement doré, comment il lui avait promis de le sauver, comment il avait été délivré le matin, et comment il lui était apparu en chemin, toujours avec le vêtement doré. La femme reconnut que c'était le saint et dit à son mari : « Si tu le voyais, tu le reconnaitrais ? » — « Oui, » répondit-il. Alors elle le fit entrer dans l'endroit où était l'image du saint. Quand il la vit, il dit :

« Celui-ci lui ressemble. » Puis elle découvrit le coffre où était le corps. Il le vit, revêtu du vêtement doré, puis il découvrit son visage et fut certain que c'était celui qui lui avait apparu. Il interrogea sa femme sur son aventure et lui demanda qui c'était. Elle lui raconta la conduite du saint; il la remercia de ce qu'elle avait fait et lui recommanda de ne pas négliger d'allumer une lampe et de brûler des parfums de vant lui. Ils continuèrent ainsi jusqu'à ce que Dioclétien périt. Alors ils bâtirent une église au saint, y transportèrent son corps et la consécration eut lieu ce jour-là. Que sa prière et ses bénédictions soient avec nous et avec l'humble copiste! Amen.

DEUX DE BAOUNAH (27 mai).

En ce jour eut lieu l'apparition des corps de saint Jean (Youhannâ) Baptiste et du prophète Élisée (Elicha'), disciple d'Élie (Hyâs) le zélé, dans la ville d'Alexandrie (El-Iskandaryah). Voici à quelle occasion : Julien (Youlgânos) l'infidèle conçut le projet de rebâtir le temple des Juifs (El-Yahoud) à Jérusalem (Ourichalim) après qu'il avait été détruit par Vespasien (Ashâsghânous) et son fils Titus (Tîtos) : il avait l'intention coupable de démentir la parole du Seigneur dans l'Évangile¹. « Il ne faut pas qu'il reste ici pierre sur pierre qui ne soit renversée. » La construction commencée une fois, une seconde, une troisième, était toujours détruite. Les Juifs dirent : « Il y a dans cet endroit les corps des chefs des chrétiens; si on ne les enlève, on ne construira pas ». Julien ordonna de prendre ces corps et de les brûler. Lorsqu'on prit ceux de saint Jean-Baptiste et d'Élisée et qu'on alla les brûler, les fidèles vinrent et donnèrent de l'argent aux soldats. Ils reçurent les corps après s'être engagés à ne pas les laisser dans la ville de peur que l'empereur ne l'apprit et fit périr les gardes. Pour ce qui est de l'histoire de

Julien, quand il fut entouré par les ennemis à la guerre, saint Mercure (Margou-ryous), après avoir été martyrisé, fut rappelé à la vie et le frappa d'un javelot à la gorge. Avant de rendre l'âme, Julien remplit sa main de sang et le jeta en l'air en disant : « Mon Seigneur Jésus (Yasou), reçois le souille que tu m'as donné. » C'est ainsi qu'il mourut de male mort. Quant aux saints corps, on les apporta dans la ville d'Alexandrie à saint Athanase (Athanasyous) qui en fut réjoui et les cacha jusqu'à ce qu'on pût leur bâtir une demeure. Un jour, il était assis dans un jardin appartenant à ses ancêtres : avec lui était Théophile (Thouphilus), son secrétaire. Il lui dit, « Si le Seigneur me donne du temps, je construirai à cet endroit une église sous l'invocation de saint Jean-Baptiste et du prophète Elisée et j'y placerai leurs corps * ». Quand saint Théophile devint patriarche, il se rappela la parole qu'avait prononcée Athanase et construisit l'église. Il prit avec lui une troupe de prêtres et de laïques, et alla à l'endroit où étaient les deux corps vénérables. On les emporta avec de grands honneurs. Tandis qu'on passait avec eux devant la maison d'une femme sabéenne, qui depuis quatre jours attendait sa délivrance, elle entendit le bruit et regarda par la fenêtre. Quand elle en sut la cause, elle fit un vœu avec foi en disant : « Jean, saint de Dieu, si tu me délivres de cette détresse, je me ferai chrétienne. » — A peine eut-elle prononcé cette parole dit : « Le démon que tu appelais à ton aide et qui ne t'a pas secouru va te châtier par la puissance de mon Seigneur Jésus (Yasou) le Messie. » Sur-le-champ, ce démon le dépouilla et commença à le frapper jusqu'à ce qu'il confessât le Seigneur le Messie. Alors le gouverneur trancha la tête du magicien qui reçut la couronne du martyr. Quant au saint, le gouverneur redoubla contre lui de fureur, et lui fit subir de nombreuses tortures; il lui coupa les parties viriles, tandis qu'il louait le Messie, puis il ordonna de lui trancher la tête avec une épée. Sakhiroun reçut la couronne du martyr et la félicité parfaite. Que son intercession soit avec nous! Amen.

Elle l'éleva dans sa maison pendant trois ans, puis le présenta au temple de Dieu, comme elle l'avait promis avant sa grossesse. Il servit Héli (Ali) le grand prêtre jusqu'à ce qu'il eut grandi. Les fils d'Héli commettaient des fautes dans leur service et tyrannisaient les Israélites. Dieu envoya à Héli un prophète et lui dit : « J'ai regardé comme indignes du sacerdoce tes fils et toute leur descendance et établirai pour moi un prêtre sûr qui fera la joie de mon cœur tous les jours de sa vie. » Il établit ce grand prophète ; en effet, Héli ayant vieilli, le Seigneur appela une nuit Samuel tandis qu'il dormait ; il crut que c'était Héli qui l'appelait, car il ne connaissait pas la révélation divine. Il se leva et alla trouver le grand prêtre et lui dit : « Tu m'as appelé, mon seigneur ! » — « Non, va dormir. » — Quand il fut parti, le Seigneur l'appela une seconde et une troisième fois. Il ne se rendit pas à ses promesses et ne craignit pas ses menaces. Il lui fit subir de nombreux tourments, lui brisa la mâchoire avec une pierre, puis le jeta en prison où le saint resta quelque temps. Ensuite il le fit venir avec quatre chrétiens qui étaient enchaînés avec lui. Comme ils ne lui obéissaient pas dans son infidélité, il les fit jeter dans une fournaise, mais Dieu envoya sur eux une pluie abondante qui éteignit le feu. Puis l'empereur infidèle ordonna d'attacher le saint à une croix, parce qu'il était l'adorateur du crucifié. On le suspendit à une croix de bois et on enfonça dans son corps de longs clous. ‘En ce jour mourut martyre sainte Dabâmour, ainsi que Épistémon (Basî-moun) et leur mère Sophie (Soufyah). La cause de leurs martyres fut celle-ci. Un homme nommé Ouarchanoufah, recherché pour l'épiscopat, s'enfuit à Talmoun, dans le diocèse de Banâ, et demanda l'hospitalité à deux frères, appelés Épistémon et Eudémon (Aoudimoun). Cette nuit, l'ange du Seigneur apparut à saint Ouarchanoufah et lui dit : « Pourquoi dors-tu alors que la lutte est étendue et que les couronnes sont préparées? Lève-toi, va trouver le gouverneur et confesse le Messie pour recevoir la couronne du martyre. » Lorsqu'il s'éveilla, il raconta la vision qu'il avait vue aux deux frères à qui il avait demandé l'hospitalité. Ils furent tous d'accord pour recevoir le martyre partirent sur-le-champ et arrivèrent chez le gouverneur devant qui ils confessèrent le nom du Messie. Il les châtia et les jeta en prison, puis il les prit avec lui de Balbil jusqu'à Saïhour, tandis que leur mère les suivait. Il Ils s'affermirent l'un l'autre dans la résolution de verser leur sang au nom du Messie. Satan (Ech-Chaqtan) leur apparut sous l'apparence d'un vieillard et s'offrit à leur vue en disant : « Mes enfants, vous êtes des jeunes gens, fils de grands personnages; je crains pour vous cet empereur infidèle; s'il vous dit quelque chose, consentez à porter des parfums (aux idoles); dans vos demeures, vous adorerez le Messie en cachette, car celui-ci est un roi terrible et sans pitié. » Le Messie leur révéla que c'était Satan; alors ils lui dirent : « O toi qui es rempli de tout mal, père

Mais le saint ne tint pas compte de ses promesses et n'écouta pas ses paroles. L'empereur n'osa lui parler au milieu d'Antioche; car Claude lui répondait avec audace et le blâmait. Le ministre Roumânous conseilla à l'empereur de le faire partir pour la terre d'Égypte pour l'y tuer — or c'était un hypoërite comme les deux fils de Victor. À pareil jour mourut le saint père Juste (Yosios), patriarche d'Alexandrie (El-Iskandaryyah) (118-129). Ce saint était un homme vertueux et instruit; il était d'Alexandrie. Saint Marc le baptisa avec son père, sa mère et un grand nombre de personnes, puis il lui imposa les mains pour en faire un diacre complet, et à un autre moment, il l'ordonna prêtre. Il grandit dans les livres de l'église et s'attacha au saint Anba Younos, prêchant le peuple et le fortifiant. Il fut élu comme chef de l'église après notre père Primus (Abrimou) (106-114); il administra au mieux l'église de Dieu qui était dans la terre d'Égypte (Misr) et fit la meilleure garde autour de son troupeau. Il resta douze ans sur le siège de patriarche, puis mourut en paix. Que sa prière soit avec nous! Amen.

En ce jour aussi a lieu la commémoration de saint Michel (Mikhâjil), chef des anges, intercesseur continu en faveur du genre humain. C'est lui qui

Lorsqu'il arriva à Jérusalem et que l'évêque l'invita dans sa cellule, il lui présenta une table couverte de ces précieux vases d'argent. En voyant son avidité et son avarice, le cœur de saint Épiphane fut alligé et il ourdit une ruse pieuse. La voici : Il descendit seul dans un couvent et envoya emprunter à Jean tous les vases qui étaient chez lui. « De grands personnages de Chypre sont venus me trouver, prétendait-il, et je désire que tu me fasses briller devant eux. » Quand il les lui eut envoyés, saint Épiphane les prit, les fit vendre et distribua des aumônes avec leur prix. Quelques jours après, Jean réclama les vases, l'autre lui fit prendre patience; puis il les demanda une seconde et une troisième fois. Comme il ne les lui donnait pas, Jean le saisit par son bouton sur le parvis de l'église de la Résurrection et lui dit : « Je ne te laisserai pas aller que tu ne m'aies donné mes vases. » Saint Épiphane pria et invoqua le Messie; Jean devint aveugle. Saint Jean s'éveilla du sommeil de la négligence comme quelqu'un qui s'éveille du sommeil (ordinaire). Il suivit une voie de charité au-dessus de toute description : il distribua en aumônes tout ce qu'il possédait en fait de richesses, de vases et de vêtements; il fut exempt de l'amour du gain au point qu'à sa mort, on ne trouva pas une drachme à lui. Il mérita la grâce des miracles, guérissait tous ceux qui étaient malades ou qui souffraient, avec de l'huile sur laquelle il faisait le signe de la croix. Quand fut accompli son effort spirituel, il fut transporté vers le Seigneur. Que sa prière * soit avec nous! Amen.

pour le retour des Israélites (Isrâ'îl) de la captivité et leur délivrance de Satan (Ech-Chaûtân). Cet ange puissant lui apparut et lui annonça la délivrance des Israélites de la captivité de Babylone (Bâbil), la reconstruction du Temple à Jérusalem (Oûrichalim) ; il lui annonça aussi la descente de Notre-Seigneur le Messie, après un certain nombre d'années qu'il lui compta et lui exposa : il lui apprit qu'il serait tué, et ensuite Jérusalem détruite, qu'il ne viendrait plus de Messie après lui, sinon l'imposteur. Lorsque les années qu'il avait indiquées furent accomplies et que le temps où devait venir le Sauveur fut arrivé, cet ange apparut de la part du Seigneur à la Dame pure et lui annonça que le Verbe de Dieu viendrait et apparaîtrait d'elle en qui il s'incarnerait. Comme Dieu très-haut — que sa mention soit glorifiée ! — l'avait choisi spécialement pour ces deux messages importants, nos pères établirent la célébration d'une fête chaque année ; nous demandons qu'il veille à notre salut et qu'il intercède pour nous auprès de Notre-Seigneur le Messie, car il est près de lui, se tenant devant son trône, pour que nous trouvions son intercession, donnant des indications au Sauveur, notre Dieu, à qui conviennent la gloire, les honneurs et l'adoration jusqu'à la fin des temps. ¹En ce jour mourut martyr saint Abäkir² et son frère Jean (You-hannä), d'Abtalamä³ et de Filya⁴. Abäkir était des gens de Damanhour dans le diocèse de Boušir, à l'Ouest du fleuve d'Égypte (Misr). Il avait un frère nommé Filyä et il était très riche. Il tomba d'accord avec deux prêtres dont l'un se nommait Jean et l'autre Abtalamä et tous les quatre vinrent à Qarṭasä* devant le gouverneur et confessèrent Notre-Seigneur le Messie. Il ordonna qu'ils fussent percés de flèches, mais les traits ne s'approchèrent pas d'eux. Puis il les fit mettre dans un four enflammé. A pareil jour, nous célébrons la consécration de l'église de saint Abou Mina à Maryout et de l'apparition de ses miracles. Voici comment se manifesta la découverte de ce saint corps. Il était caché dans la terre. Lorsque Dieu voulut qu'il apparut, le berger d'un troupeau qu'il faisait paître près de la vigne où était enterré ce saint corps, vit un agneau galeux qui, après s'être baigné, se roula sur la terre où était le corps et guérit sur-le-champ.
Il en fut étonné. Puis il prit tous les agneaux galeux qui étaient avec lui, les baigna et les roula dans cet endroit : ils guérirent aussitôt. Il se mit à faire la même chose avec les gens. Il faisait dissoudre un peu de cette terre, la melangeait et la faisait boire à tous ceux qui étaient malades ; ils guérissaient ; personne n'en savait la raison. La réputation du berger parvint au roi, qui la grâce divine le poussa à contempler les ascètes, serviteurs de Dieu: il en vit un grand nombre et écrivit leur histoire, entre autres celle d'Abou Nofer. Lorsqu'il entra dans le désert, il trouva une source d'eau et un palmier. Il vit s'avancer vers lui ce saint qui était nu; les poils de sa tête et de sa barbe voilaient son corps. A sa vue, Paphnuce eut peur de lui et crut que c'était un esprit. Saint Abou Nofer l'encouragea, fit le signe de la croix devant lui et récita la prière de l'Évangile ainsi conçue: *Notre Père qui êtes aux cieux*¹. Puis il lui dit: « Sois le bienvenu, Paphnuce. » Quand il l'eut appelé par son nom, sa crainte disparut. Puis ils prièrent tous deux et s'assirent pour s'entretenir des magnificences de Dieu. Paphnuce lui demanda de lui apprendre quelle était la cause de sa venue (dans le désert) et comment il y vivait. Abou Nofer lui répondit: « J'étais dans un couvent où se trouvaient des moines vertueux et pieux: je les entendis décrire les habitants du désert, les ascètes, avec toutes sortes de belles qualités. — Soit, leur dis-je; mais qui est plus méritant que vous? — Assurément les habitants du désert, car nous sommes plus proches du monde et des gens: si notre poitrine est resserrée, nous trouvons quelqu'un qui nous console; si nous sommes malades, nous trouvons quelqu'un qui Quand je les entendis, mon cœur fut brûlé. La nuit venue, je pris un peu de pain et je sortis du couvent. Puis je priai et je demandai à Notre-Seigneur le Messie de me diriger vers un endroit où je resterais. Ensuite je partis et le Seigneur me facilita les voies jusqu'à ce que je trouvai un saint homme. Je restai près de lui jusqu'à ce qu'il m'eut enseigné les voies de l'ascétisme. Il entendit ces paroles de l'Évangile : « Celui qui veut sauver son âme, qu'il la perde, et celui qui perd son âme dans ce monde la rendra à la vie. A quoi sert à l'homme de gagner le monde entier s'il se perd lui-même³. » Quand il entendit cela, son cœur s'enflamma, il partit pour la montagne de Scété⁴ et il s'adonna tout entier aux prières et aux jeûnes continuels. pria sur le froc et les vêtements pendant quarante jours et l'en revêtit. Il redoubla d'austérité, puis il sortit pour voir son père. Il s'isola et se mit à accomplir de nombreuses adorations.

[Une nuit, saint Palémon (Balimoun) vint à lui et Anbà Latçoun le consola d'une affaire où il était tombé et l'informa qu'il lui était pardonné. L'Ennemi s'étant emparé de saint Palémon, était allé le trouver sous la forme d'une femme et lui parla d'après les pères anciens et qui s'étaient mariés, et de l'indifférence de Dieu, si bien qu'il soumit la pensée de ce saint qui pécha en pensée, mais son relèvement fut plus fort que sa chute. Aussitôt il s'éveilla de celle-ci et reconnut l'intention de l'Ennemi; il se livra à des adorations nombreuses et considérables jusqu'à ce qu'il revint à sa règle première. Il y avait dans le voisinage un couvent qu'il fréquentait. Un jour il y passa et trouva le supérieur sur le point de mourir; les frères l'entouraient. Puis il vit les auxiliaires des démons autour de lui et il interrogea le supérieur sur son état. Celui-ci ordonna aux frères de sortir et se mit à lui décrire ses péchés et ce qu'il avait fait dans sa jeunesse. Ses fautes étaient grandes. Entre autres choses, il lui dit : « Pardonne-moi, se rappela la supplication et réfléchit à la parole de l'Évangile : « Il n'est pas de plus grand amour que de se sacrifier pour ses amis »¹. Le saint continua à se châtier de toutes les façons; il implorait le Messie au sujet de l'âme de ce pécheur : le Messie et ses anges lui apparurent et l'informèrent qu'il ne lui serait pas pardonné, car c'est un Dieu juste; il ne favorise pas celui qui n'est pas digne de bienfaits et il ne châtie pas celui qui ne mérite pas

1. La fin de l'article dans B est ainsi conçue : Il trouva une citerne desséchée : il resta prosterné auprès d'elle pendant quarante jours, tandis qu'il implorait Notre-Seigneur le Messie pour l'âme de ce malheureux. Un ange vint lui dire : « Anbâ Latzoun, le Seigneur te fait dire : Ne te fatigue pas à cause de ce malheureux, car je ne lui pardonnerai pas. » Ensuite le saint se tint debout sur un rocher qui avait une arête comme le tranchant d'une épée. Il ne cligna pas des yeux pendant quarante jours, si bien que ses prunelles versaient du sang à cause de son manque de sommeil, implorant Notre-Seigneur le Messie pour ce malheureux. Puis il se jeta sur un rocher et se fendit en deux en disant : « Je ne cesserai que lorsque le Seigneur aura eu pitié de l'âme de cet infortuné. » Le Seigneur fit revenir l'âme de ce saint et un ange vint à lui avec ces paroles : « Ne te fatigue pas, car le Seigneur ne lui pardonnera pas. » Le saint s'attacha ensuite les mains et les pieds avec une corde de fibres de palmier et se suspendit à un arbre la tête en bas, si bien que le sang lui sortait par le nez et la bouche et il rendit l'âme. Un ange du Seigneur le délia et lui rendit la vie et lui dit : « Ne te fatigue pas; Dieu ne lui pardonnera pas. » Puis le saint se jeta dans le fleuve, et dit : « Je n'aurai pas de repos jusqu'à la mort sans mon frere, les crocodiles ne mangeront, mais mon âme n'abandonnera pas mon frere dans l'enfer. « Lorsqu'il fut enfoncé dans l'eau, il fut solloqué et mourut. Notre-Seigneur le Messie lui rendit la vie, lui apparut, lui donna le salut et lui dit : « Tu es fatigué, ô Latzoum mon élu, et tu as accompli cette parole qui est dans le saint Evangile, mais j'ai juré par mon essence que je ne lui pardonnerai pas et qu'il ne verra pas la lumière de la vie; pourtant à cause de tes peines, j'annulerai son âme et elle ne sera plus en enfer. Puis il la fit comparaitre et l'anéantit avec sa main en disant : « Cette âme n'est ni pour la vie ni pour la mort. Quant au saint, il se prosterna à terre devant le Seigneur et le loua en reconnaissance de ce qu'il avait tiré cette âme de l'enfer. Ensuite, il alla un jour dans un pays et trouva les habitants qui célébraient la fête de Michel Mikhaïl un mercredi et qui communiaient dès le matin. Le saint leur reprocha leur action et leur apporta des témoignages tirés des livres purs, à savoir que le mercredi et le vendredi sont deux jours de jeûne comme le grand jeûne des quarante jours; et qu'il n'est pas permis de le rompre sinon pour une maladie ou pour la Nativité et le Baptême. A partir de ce jour, ils ne le rompirent plus le jour de la fête de l'Échange Michel. Quant au saint Anbâ Latzoum, il termina sa noble lutte, mourut dans une belle vieillesse, alla vers le Seigneur qui l'aimait et obtint la royauté avec les saints. Que sa prière et ses bénédictions soient avec nous et avec le pauvre copiste! Amen.

DIX-SEPT DE BAOUNAH 11 juin .

lui demanda de rester près de lui. Il accepta et mena une belle vie dans la cellule du patriarche. Chacun l'aimait. Lorsque notre père le patriarche Anba Pierre mourut (570), les évêques furent tous de l'avis d'élever Damien au patriarcat. Il mena une vie vertueuse; il lisait assidûment les livres des Épîtres et des Psaumes et les envoyait dans toutes les villes. Il y avait dans le désert de l'ascète, le désert de saint Macaire (Maqaryous), des hérétiques de la secte de Melitès qui buvaient du vin à plusieurs reprises pendant toute la nuit où ils communiaient, prétendant que le Messie — gloire à lui! — avait donné à ses disciples deux coupes: la première pour laquelle il n'avait pas dit: Ceci est mon sang et la seconde pour laquelle il l'avait dit. Saint Damien leur démontra leur erreur et leur faute. Il leur fit voir que la première coupe correspondait à la Pâque ancienne, qui était un sacrifice dans l'antiquité, et que les règles interdisaient de goûter quoi que ce fut avant d'avoir reçu l'Eucharistie. Un certain nombre d'entre eux renoua à son erreur; ceux qui n'obéirent pas furent bannis. De son temps mourut Théophile (Thaoufils), patriarche d'Antioche (Antakya): à sa place on nomma un hérétique qui ne croyait pas à la sainte Trinité, mais qui disait: Dieu est un et on ne peut faire des réserves en mentionnant les qualités essentielles et éternelles. A pareil jour saint Georges (Djirdjis) le jeune martyr. Au temps des Musulmans, il s'appelait Mozaïm. Le père de ce saint était un Bédouin musulman qui avait épousé une femme chrétienne de Damirah el-Qablyah. Il en eut trois fils dont ce saint qu'ils appelèrent Mozaïm; il allait à l'église avec sa mère et avait de l'affection pour les chrétiens. Il lui demanda de le faire communier; elle lui dit: « Personne ne peut communier s'il n'est baptisé et pur. » Elle lui donna une bouchée d'eulogies qu'il trouva douce et qui fut dans sa bouche comme du miel. Alors il se dit: « Si cette bouchée qui n'est qu'un pain qu'ils se partagent entre eux a un tel goût dans ma bouche, que doit être l'Eucharistie? » Il désira devenir chrétien. Quand il fut grand, il épousa une femme chrétienne et l'informa de son désir. Elle lui conseilla d'aller se faire baptiser. Il alla dans un couvent du desert. Mais son histoire se répandit et on eut peur. Il se rendit à Damiette Damiat, fut baptisé et changea son nom en Georges. Les Musulmans le reconurent; ils le saisirent et le châtièrent; il s'échappa et s'enfuit à Safaï Abou Tourab. Il y resta trois ans. Quand son histoire fut connue, il alla à Qatour et servit l'église de saint Mari Georges, puis il revint à Damirah. Les Musulmans l'apprirent et le livrèrent au gouverneur. Sa femme qui était chrétienne l'empêcha de le châtier, puis il l'emprisonna. Les Musulmans s'attroupèrent, brisèrent la porte de la prison, frappèrent le saint, lui fendirent la tête et le laissèrent entre la vie et la mort. Lorsque les chrétiens vinrent de bon matin pour l'ensevelir croyant qu'il était mort, ils le trouvèrent vivant. Les Musulmans firent venir des témoins, constituèrent un tribunal et le menacèrent, mais il ne renouça pas à ses sentiments. Ils le suspendirent au mât d'une embarcation; puis le qādhi Pen fit descendre et jeter en prison. Sa femme le fortifiait et lui enseignait à croire que tout ce qu'il éprouvait venait de ses péchés, de peur que l'Ennemi ne l'en privât quand il s'enorgueillirait d'être comme les martyrs. Puis, une nuit, l'ange du Seigneur lui apparut, le fortifia, le consola et lui apprit que le lendemain on lui couperait la tête. De bonne heure, les Musulmans vinrent trouver le gouverneur et lui demandèrent de le faire exécuter. Il permit qu'on le leur livrât et qu'ils en fissent ce qu'ils voudraient. Ils le tirèrent de prison et lui tranchèrent la tête près de l'église de l'archange Michel (Mikayil) à Damirah. Ensuite ils mirent le feu à son corps. Il resta toute cette journée

Alors qu'il passait près d'une ville qui était Jéricho (Ariha), les gens se plaignirent à lui de la salure de leur eau; aucune moisson ne poussait; il prit un sac où il mit du sel et le jeta dans la source qui saloucit sur-le-champ; il employa à dessécher du sel pour montrer la grandeur du miracle, puisqu'il remédiait à la salure par le sel. Tandis qu'il passait près de quelques jeunes gens d'Israël et qu'ils se moquaient de lui, il pria contre eux et des ours en dévorèrent quarante en un instant; une femme de prophète se plaignit à lui que son mari était mort, chargé d'une dette, et qu'elle et sa fille étaient arrêtées pour cela. Il lui ordonna de remplir d'eau tous les vases de sa maison, d'en prendre d'autres chez ses voisins et de les remplir; puis il pria sur eux et chargea l'eau en huile excellente. La femme les vendit et paya ce qu'elle devait. Il pria pour la femme stérile; elle mit au monde un fils. Quand ce garçon eut grandi, il tomba malade et mourut. Le prophète se coucha sur lui et il revint à la vie. Lorsque Normân le Syrien (Is-Sorqani) vint le trouver et qu'il le guérit de sa lèpre, il lui apporta des richesses considérables et des vêtements brodés d'or, il n'accepta rien. Son disciple s'enhardit et en reçut en cachette; le saint pria contre lui; il fut frappé de la lèpre, lui, ses fils et toute leur postérité. Il transforma en un jour une cherté excessive en un bon marché extrême, et il fit beaucoup de miracles outre celui-ci. Lorsqu'il mourut et qu'il fut mis au tombeau, des gens apportèrent un mort et le placèrent sur lui, ce mort revint à la vie et les suivit en revenant chez lui. Il prophétisa pendant le règne de quatre rois : Joram (Jouram), Ochosias (Akhazga), Athalie (Atalyah) mère d'Ochosias et Yagher fils d'Ochosias. Il prophétisa plus de cinquante ans et devança la venue du Messie d'environ huit cents ans, il s'endormit dans la mort avec la paix. Que sa prière soit avec nous! Amen.

construites dans tout le monde sous son invocation. La première fut bâtie au temps des Apôtres dans les circonstances suivantes. Après que Paul (Boulos) et Barnabé (Barnabâ) eurent annoncé l'Évangile aux nations qui se convertirent par leurs mains, n'ayant d'autre endroit que les maisons pour communier, ils demandèrent à Pierre (Petros) et à Jean (Youhannâ) la permission de construire des églises. Ceux-ci les avertirent¹ de ne rien faire que par le conseil de Notre-Seigneur le Messie. Bien plus, ils prescrivirent au peuple un jeûne d'une semaine avec des prières et des supplications pour qu'il leur fit connaître ce qu'ils devaient faire. Le jeûne terminé, le Messie parut et fit venir tous les apôtres de tous les pays sur un nuage dans la ville de Philippes (Filbâs) où étaient Paul et Barnabé et leur fit connaître que c'est un jour de réjouissance celui où on bâtitra des églises sous l'invocation de sa mère. Puis il les emmena à l'est de la ville, traça les limites de la construction et la force du Seigneur était avec eux : la pierre s'amollissait entre leurs mains jusqu'à ce qu'ils eurent terminé ses vases, ses autels et ses tentures. Ensuite le Seigneur imposa les mains à Pierre et l'établit pontife suprême de la terre habitée. Les ciels et la terre poussèrent à trois reprises le cri : « Il en est digne ! Il en est digne ! Il en est digne ! » Il leur ordonna d'accomplir le saint sacrifice, de faire communier le peuple et de lui recommander que personne ne fit œuvre de ses mains en ce jour qui est le 21 de baounah. Puis il remonta au ciel avec une grande gloire. A partir de ce jour, tous les saints apôtres se mirent à construire des églises sous l'invocation de la mère de Dieu. De même au temps de Basile (Basilios), évêque de Césarée (Qisariyah), lorsqu'il construisit une église sous l'invocation de la mère de Dieu, à pareil jour. Il chercha une tablette pour faire peindre son image. On lui parla d'une qui existait chez un riche, mais il ne la demanda pas. Quand cet homme l'apprit, il ne la lui présenta pas, mais il dit : « Mes enfants sont plus dignes de cette tablette. » Puis il blasphéma contre l'église de Notre-Dame; les paroles étaient à peine sorties de sa bouche qu'il tomba mort. Ses fils eurent peur et présentèrent la tablette au saint avec beaucoup d'or et de pierres en lui demandant de pardonner à leur père. Il la prit et la donna à un peintre pour qu'il y représentât l'image de Notre-Dame. Mais la nuit, la Vierge pure lui apparut et lui défendit de peindre sur cette tablette, parce qu'elle provenait de l'injustice. Elle lui enseigna * un endroit où était une tablette rouge, portant * f. 232 v. son image et celle de deux vierges à ses côtés. magiciens voulurent l'empêcher, mais Dieu les rendit impuissants. Les colonnes furent placées devant l'aradion et le Seigneur fit jaillir de dessous elles une source d'eau qui délivrait de tout mal quiconque s'y baignait. De même, il coula de l'image une huile qui guérissait les maladies : ceci arriva le jour de la consécration de l'église, le 21 (de baoumah). Il arriva qu'une femme se baigna dans l'eau et devint lépreuse. Basile la fit venir et l'interrogea sur son affaire. Elle lui raconta qu'aimant le mari de sa sœur, elle avait empoisonné celle-ci et épousé son beau-frère. Le saint lui dit : « Tu as commis trois grands péchés, mais repens-toi devant le Père, peut-être te pardonnera-t-il. » Mais la terre s'ouvrit et l'engloutit parce qu'elle avait osé pénétrer dans l'église de sainte Marie, mère de Dieu, en état d'impureté. Ce jour devint celui de la commémoration de sainte Marie, mère de Dieu. Il convient que nous célébrions en son honneur une fête spirituelle, car c'est par elle qu'eut lieu le salut de la terre habitée. Heureux et encore heureux celui qui s'occupe de cette fête ! Que sa miséricorde soit avec nous et nous délivre de l'ennemi ! Amen.

Puis il le fit cuire dans une marmite jusqu'à ce que sa chair devint comme de l'eau liquide. Ensuite il le jeta hors de la ville. Le Seigneur le releva et il retourna vers le gouverneur. deuxième, sur le ravin le royaume des cieux, suivant la parole du saint Évangile.
Ce diable agit d'une grande force corporelle, tyrannique dans ses intentions; il mangeait, buvait, tuait, volait, se livrait au libertinage; personne ne pouvait lui résister. On dit qu'il mangeait un mouton et buvait une outre de vin.
Il était esclave chez des gens qui adoraient le soleil. Lui-même le regardait souvent et lui disait : « O soleil, si tu es Dieu, instruis-moi. » Il disait aussi à lui-même et dans son cœur : « O Dieu que je ne connais pas, fais-moi connaître ta personne. » Il entendit quelqu'un dire que les moines de Onadi Hebelé connaissaient Dieu. Il se leva, ceignit son sabre et alla dans le désert.
En route, il rencontre Isidore Isidoro le prêtre qui, en le voyant, eut peur de lui. Abou Moïse lui apprit qu'il était venu seulement vers eux pour qu'ils lui fissent connaître Dieu. Il l'emmena à saint Macaire Maqaryos; celui-ci l'exhorta, lui enseigna la foi et le baptisa. Abou Moïse prit le froc et demeura dans le désert. Puis il se livra dans des dévotions nombreuses, plus nombreuses que celles de beaucoup de saints. Satan Ich-Chaïm le combattait par tous les moyens, d'abord par la nourriture, la boisson et les actions carnelles. On informa le saint père Isidore qui le consolait, l'instruisait et le combattait. Entre autres exemples de son zèle, lorsque les moines dormaient, il errait autour d'eux, prenait leurs jarres, allait les remplir et les replaçait à côté d'eux, car l'eau était loin d'eux. Après qu'il fut resté de nombreuses années à lutter contre lui-même, Satan le haut et le frappa au pied d'un coup pénible par un ulcère dont l'action fut violente sur lui : il resta malade et couché. Quand il sut que c'était une attaque de Satan, il redoubla d'austérité et de dévotion, tellement que son corps ressemblait à une poutre brûlée. Le Seigneur considéra sa patience et le guérit de sa maladie; ses douleurs et ses combats s'allégèrent; la grâce du Saint-Esprit descendit sur lui. Cinq cents frères se réunirent près de lui, il devint un père pour eux. Il fut choisi pour le degré de la prêtrise; quand il parut devant le patriarche, celui-ci voulut l'éprouver pour voir sa conduite et dit : « Qui a amené ici ce nègre ? Chassez-le. » Il sortit en disant en lui-même : « Ils l'ont justement traité, ô nègre sali de poussière. » Le patriarche revint, le demanda, lui imposa les mains et lui dit : « Moïse, maintenant tu es devenu entièrement blanc. » Une fois, des vieillards étaient venus le trouver et il n'y avait pas d'eau chez lui. Ils le virent entrer et sortir, puis la pluie tomba et le bassin fut rempli. Ils lui demandèrent : « Pourquoi entras-tu et sortais-tu ? » Il leur répondit : « J'ai dit au Seigneur : Si tu ne me donnes pas d'eau pour Mais il y avait parmi eux un frère qui s'était caché derrière une natte : il vit l'ange du Seigneur ayant à la main une couronne; il se tenait debout l'attendant. Il sortit vers les Berbères qui le tuèrent. Considérez, mes frères, ce que fait la force de la pénitence! Elle a transformé un esclave infidèle, homicide, adultère, voleur; elle en a fait un père qui instruit et qui console, un prêtre qui établit des règles pour les moines, et mentionné dans les églises. Son corps est aujourd'hui dans le couvent de Baranous. Que sa prière soit avec nous éternellement! Amen.

¹ En ce jour mourut martyr l'apôtre Jude (Yahoudâ), fils de Joseph (Yousof), un des soixante-dix disciples. Il prêcha l'évangile dans beaucoup de villes, pénétra dans la Mésopotamie (El-Djazarah), y annonça la bonne nouvelle et y bâtit une église. Il alla à Édesse (Er-Rohâ), guérit Abgar (Abdjar) de sa maladie et le baptisa. Il entra dans la ville d'Anasah (Arâh), y prêcha l'Évangile et baptisa beaucoup de ses habitants. Le gouverneur le saisit, le tourmenta beaucoup, lui fit clouer aux pieds des sandales et le fit courir pendant un mille, puis il le fit pendre et percer de flèches. Le saint rendit son âme entre les mains du Seigneur. Il avait envoyé aux fidèles une épître qui est la septième des épîtres catholiques, pleine de toute sagesse et de toute grâce : elle convertit beaucoup de gens pendant sa vie et après sa mort. Que sa prière soit avec nous ! Amen.

Après un certain délai, la ville d'Alexandrie fut administrée par un homme juste, bon et orthodoxe. Les anciens des fideles se réunirent auprès de lui et se plaignirent de manquer de patriarche. Il leur prescrivit de se rendre au couvent d'Ez-Zedjadj dans le but d'y prier et d'en élire un. Ils en furent joyeux et les évêques prirent notre père Aubâ Pierre qui était prêtre. Puis ils sortirent vers le couvent, le proclamèrent et furent consolés par lui. Saint Sévère Sawiros était mort et le siège d'Antioche était vacant. VINGT-SIX DE BAOUAH (20 juin.)

En ce jour mourut le grand prophète Josué (Yachou') fils de Noun, disciple du grand, parmi les prophètes, Moïse (Mousa), envers qui il était d'une obéissance accomplie; son esprit descendit sur lui et il prophétisa du temps de Moïse. Celui-ci, à sa mort, lui confia le peuple sur l'ordre de Dieu qui lui dit : « De même que j'ai été avec mon serviteur Moïse, de même je serai avec toi¹ : Fortifie-toi, sois fort, conserve la loi que j'ai recommandée à mon serviteur; ne l'en ecarte ni à droite ni à gauche; que le livre de la loi ne s'éloigne pas de ta bouche, mais médite-le nuit et jour pour conserver et exécuter ce qui y est écrit². » Le cœur de Josué fut fortifié; il envoya deux espions³ à Jéricho (Arihâ); ils entrèrent, examinèrent le pays et se cachèrent chez Râhâb, la courtisane. Elle les reconnut et les fit partir après leur avoir fait jurer qu'ils la protégeraient, elle et les gens de sa famille⁴. C'est ce qui arriva. Les Israélites Bani Israhîl passèrent le Jourdain El-Ordoun; il leur fendit le fleuve, le fit tenir comme une muraille⁵; il leur ouvrit Jéricho qui était défendu par sept murailles;

Après cela, le gouverneur Lucien (Loutyàvous) l'arrêta, lui fit subir des supplices pénibles, lui lit dépuiller et brûler les flans avec des torches de feu, puis le fit sortir hors de la ville et ordonna de le lapider. Le saint rendit son âme entre les mains du Seigneur pour le nom de qui il était mort et s'en alla dans la félicité durable. Que sa prière soit éternellement avec nous! Amen.

¹Eu ce jour aussi mourut martyr saint Thomas (Tomàs) qui était de Pehentalet (Chandalât). Ce saint était âgé de onze ans quand l'ange du Seigneur, Michel (Mikâyil), lui apparut alors qu'il était endormi dans la campagne en train de garder les pores et lui ordonna d'aller confesser le nom de Notre-Seigneur le Messie. Il descendit, prit un fouet et alla à la ville d'Alexandrie (El-Iskandaryah), où il confessa le Messie devant le gouverneur. Celui-ci lui proposa d'adorer les idoles et lui promit de faire de lui son secrétaire. Le saint s'irrita, sortit son fouet et lui en donna de nombreux coups. On le sai-Lorsqu'on le jeta en prison, le geôlier lui demanda de guérir un fils malade qu'il avait. Le saint lui donna son fouet et il le mit sur l'enfant qui guérit. En ce jour mourut notre père le patriarche Anba Théodose (Tàoudosyous) patriarche d'Alexandrie (El-Iskandaryah) (535-567). C'est de son nom que les chrétiens s'appelèrent Théodosiens (El-Tàoudosyoun). Après qu'il eut été élevé au patriarcat, des gens méchants s'irritèrent contre lui; ils prirent un lividu appelé Gañanus (Aq'p'p'annous), archidiacre. Puis il alla à Malelj (Malûlj) et y resta deux ans. Les habitants de la ville se soulevèrent contre le gouverneur, lui réclamant leur pasteur Théodose et l'expulsion de Guanus. La nouvelle arriva à l'empereur Justinien (Youstâ-symianous) et à l'impératrice qui aime Dieu, Théodora (Tâouloura). Elle écrit pour dire : « Que celui d'entre vous qui a été proclamé le premier, siège. » On réunit une assemblée de 120 prêtres qui écrivirent leur sentence : « C'est Anba Théodose qui est le premier. » Alors Guanus se leva devant l'assemblée et dit : « C'est moi le coupable, seulement j'y ai été amené par de méchantes gens qui haïssaient le patriarche. » Alors la réunion demanda à Théodose de recevoir Guanus et de le relever de l'excommunication à condition qu'il n'aurait plus la prêtrise ni le diaconat. Il accepta et le releva de l'excommunication à cette condition. Quant à l'empereur, il avait une foi corrompue : il crut que s'il effrayait le patriarche, celui-ci s'accorderait avec lui. Il écrivit à ses lieutenants : « Si le patriarche Théodose s'accorde avec nous dans la foi, qu'on ajoute le gouvernement à son patriarcat et qu'il soit gou-

Il partit pour Constantinople (El-Qostantinyah) dont le patriarche vint à sa rencontre avec tous les fidèles et les soldats. On le fit entrer en grande pompe; l'empereur et l'impératrice viurent au-devant de lui et le firent asseoir au plus haut rang. Puis il y eut entre eux une discussion sur la foi; l'empereur le flattait et cherchait à le tromper pendant plusieurs jours; le patriarche triomphait de lui par les livres saints et les paroles des Pères. Comme il ne s'accordait pas avec lui, l'empereur le bannit de son siège en Haute-Égypte et installa à sa place un homme du nom de Paul (Boubos). Quand celui-ci arriva à Alexandrie, il ne fut pas accepté, et il resta une année sans que personne reçût les sacrements de sa main excepté un petit nombre de personnes. TRENTE DE BAOUNAH 24 juin .

En ce jour eut lieu la naissance du bienheureux saint Jean (Youhannâ), le Baptiste; jamais une femme n'enlanta un fils plus grand que lui. C'est lui qui loua le Messie et l'adora, tandis qu'il était encore dans le sein de sa mère; il fut jugé digne de placer sa main sur la tête du fils de Dieu. Le saint Évangile dit : « Lorsque Elisabeth (Alisâbât) eut accompli ses jours pour accoucher, elle enfanta un fils. Ses voisins et ses parents apprirent que le Seigneur avait accu sa miséricorde pour elle et s'en réjouirent. Lorsque le huitième jour fut arrivé, ils vinrent pour circoncire l'enfant et l'appeler du nom de Zacharie (Zakariyâ) son père. Sa mère leur dit : Non, appelez-le Jean. Ils lui dirent : Il n'y a personne dans ta parenté qui s'appelle de ce nom. Ils allèrent consulter son père : De quel nom veux-tu l'appeler? Il écrivit : Son nom est Jean. Sa bouche s'ouvrit et sa langue fut délivrée du mutisme. Il bénit Dieu et prophétisa sur son fils qu'il serait appelé le Prophète du Très-Haut et qu'il parlerait devant la face du Seigneur et lui préparerait la voie². » Deux ans s'étant accomplis, l'arrivée des Mages eut lieu, et lorsque Hérode (Hiroudis) fit périr les enfants, on lui dénonça ce prophète. Des soldats le cherchèrent pour le tuer. Son père Zacharie le prit sur son épaule et leur demanda¹ de venir à un endroit où il le déposerait; puis ils le prendraient avec eux. Ils allèrent avec lui jusqu'à ce qu'il entra dans le temple. Il le plaça sur l'aile du temple et leur dit : « C'est d'ici que je l'ai reçu. » L'ange le saisit et l'emporta dans le désert appelé Désert d'Ez-Zifanâ. Quand les soldats ne le trouvèrent plus, ils s'irritèrent de ce qu'il leur eût échappé et tuèrent Zacharie. Quant au Baptiste le prophète, il ne cessa de demeurer dans le désert jusqu'à ce que Dieu lui ordonnât d'aller à celui du Jourdain (El-Ordoun) pour annoncer et prêcher le Messie et le montrer devant la foule comme Malachie l'a prédit. « C'est le messenger qui annoncera devant le Sauveur¹. » En effet, il ressemblait aux anges, car il était rempli de l'Esprit-Saint, étant encore dans le sein de sa mère; il habita dans le désert, ne goûta jamais de pain, comme a témoigné le Messie, ne but jamais de vin, ne connut pas de femme. On ne rapporte de lui aucun péché, ni grand ni petit; il annonça le Messie, vit l'Esprit-Saint descendre sur lui et mourut réellement martyr. Le Seigneur a dit qu'aucun une tante, supérieure d'un couvent contenant vingt-sept vierges, entre les deux fleuves et qui s'appelait Ouryanà. Elle l'éleva dans la crainte de Dieu et lui enseigna la lecture des livres divins. La vierge montrait un zèle beau et considérable pour la dévotion; elle jeûnait tous les deux jours et faisait de grandes prières. Cette sainte était belle. Quand arrivèrent les ordres de Dioclétien (Diqldyganous) relatifs à l'adoration des idoles, beaucoup de chrétiens furent arrêtés et subirent le martyre. A cette nouvelle, les vierges eurent peur, sortirent du couvent et se cachèrent: il n'y resta que la supérieure, cette sainte et une autre religieuse. Le lendemain, les messagers du roi vinrent au couvent, saisirent la supérieure, la traitèrent avec mépris et réclamèrent le reste des vierges. Febronia leur dit: « Prenez-moi et laissez cette vieille femme. » Ils la saisirent, la lièrent avec des chaînes et la transportèrent à la ville; elle était âgée de vingt ans: la Mère l'avait suivie en pleurant. Quand elle comparut devant le gouverneur, celui-ci l'interrogea sur les sœurs, lui proposa d'adorer les idoles et lui promit des cadeaux nombreux et considérables. Elle ne le fit pas. Alors il ordonna de la frapper avec un bâton, puis de déchirer ses vêtements pour mettre son

La Mère lui cria alors : « Que Dieu te déchire, hypocrite, de même que tu veux découvrir aux regards cette pauvre jeune fille orpheline. » Alors, il s'irrita, ordonna d'attacher la sainte sur des chevalets et de déchirer son corps avec des peignes de fer, ce qui fut fait au point que sa chair fut en charpie. Elle priait le Seigneur et lui demandait son aide. On lui coupa la langue, on lui cassa les dents, on lui coupa les membres et on la brûla avec du feu. Notre-Seigneur le Messie la fortifiait et la maintenait. Quand le gouverneur fut fatigué, il ordonna de l'égorger, ce qui fut fait; et elle reçut la couronne du martyr. Dieu fit arriver par eux de grands miracles et des prodiges dans la guérison des malades qu'ils réchauffaient avec l'eau du puits de l'église et qu'ils guérissaient. Lorsque la mort de leur père fut proche, il arriva que le prêtre Tayaban avait revêtu les vêtements consacrés et était monté à l'autel pour célébrer le saint sacrifice. La nouvelle lui arriva que son père était à la mort et le demandait. Il répondit : « Je ne puis quitter les vêtements consacrés avant d'avoir terminé : si Dieu veut que je voie mon père avant sa mort, c'est bien, sinon, que la volonté du Seigneur soit faite. » Par trois fois, son père l'envoya chercher; il répétait toujours la même chose. Quand il eut terminé le saint sacrifice, il trouva que son père était mort. Il s'affligea beaucoup à cause des vases de l'église que le défunt avait, mais il ignorait où ils étaient déposés. Son frère Bioukhâ lui conseilla d'aller à la montagne de Scété (Chihât) et d'interroger les saints vieillards au sujet des vases de l'église. Quand il y alla, il arriva qu'il se rencontra avec le Père Daniel (Dàngâl), le supérieur du couvent. Il l'informa de tout ce qui était arrivé à cause de lui. Le Père lui indiqua un saint à qui il raconterait toute l'affaire; il alla le trouver et la lui apprit. Ensuite les saints marchèrent dans la voie du mérite et de la perfection. Que leur prière soit avec nous! Ainsi soit-il!

Théophile se réjouit beaucoup, remercia Dieu qui lui avait donné un pareil fils et l'établit comme lecteur dans sa demeure. Quand il lisait, personne ne désirait qu'il se tût. Quand notre Père Anbâ Théophile mourut, on établit ce Père à sa place et sa science éclaire l'Église. Il disputa contre Nestorios, lui tint tête, le vainquit, exposa son infidélité et, comme il ne venait pas à résipiscence, l'excommunia, le maudit, et le déposa de son siège. Il établit douze chapitres ou il exposait la foi, et ensuite il composa des discours et des épîtres qui sont jusqu'à ce jour entre les mains des fidèles. Il établit que Dieu le Verbe est d'une seule nature, d'une seule essence, incarné, et excommunia quiconque diviserait le Messie ou sortirait de cette opinion. في هذا اليوم⁵ نعيد لثقل اعضاء القديسين الجليدين⁶ ابوقير ويوحنا وذلك ان القديسين لما استشهدوا في ستة من اشهر حمل اجسادهما⁷ الناس المومنون⁸ سرقة ووضعوهما⁹ في كيسة القديس مرقس الانجالي التي قبلي الاسكندرية فلم يزالوا موضوعين فيها الى زمان القديس كيراص بطريرك الاسكندرية فظهر¹⁰ له ملاك¹¹ الرب وامره ان يمضى الى الكنيسة¹² التي للقديس¹³ مرقس وتحمل¹⁴ جسدي القديسين ابوقير ويوحنا فمضى

QUATRE D'ABIB (28 juin).

En ce jour, nous célébrons la fête de la translation des corps des deux saints Abouqir et Jean (Youhanna). Lorsqu'ils subirent le martyre le 6 d'août, les fidèles transportèrent furtivement leurs corps et les placèrent dans l'église de Saint-Marc (Marqos) l'évangéliste qui est au sud d'Alexandrie (El-Iskandaryah). Ils y restèrent déposés jusqu'au temps de saint Cyrille (Kirilloſ), patriarche d'Alexandrie. Un ange du Seigneur lui apparut et lui ordonna d'aller à l'église de Saint-Marc et d'emporter les corps des deux saints Abouqir et Jean. Il partit avec une troupe de gens, ils prièrent et Ils y déposèrent les corps, y bâtirent une église et instituèrent en ce jour une fête en leur honneur. A côté de l'église était un temple d'idoles où on célébrait une grande fête et où se réunissaient beaucoup d'infidèles. Quand ils virent la multitude des miracles que faisaient les corps des deux saints Abouqir et Jean, ils abandonnèrent le temple et leur infidélité et devinrent chrétiens. Quant au temple, le sable y fut apporté par le vent, en sorte qu'il devint un monceau considérable. Que leurs prières soient avec nous ! Amen.

CINQ D'ABBE (29 juin).

En ce jour moururent martyrs les deux grands saints, chefs des disciples, Pierre (Botros) et Paul (Boulos). Quant à Pierre, il était de Baït Saïdâ et pêcheur de son métier. Le Seigneur le choisit le lendemain du jour de son baptême; il avait choisi auparavant André (Andrious) son frère. Puis, lorsqu'il eut choisi Pierre, il le fit le premier des disciples. Il resta au service du Sauveur jusqu'à la Passion. Il avait de la foi, de l'énergie et du zèle; c'est par là Alors le Seigneur lui donna la meilleure part, l'établit comme la pierre angulaire de l'Église et lui remit les clefs du royaume des cieux³. Après qu'il fut revêtu de la grâce du Paraclet, il pénétra au milieu des loups ravisseurs du monde et y annonça Jésus (Yésou) le Messie crucifié. Il convertit une foule innombrable à la foi et Dieu fit par lui de très grands miracles. Il écrivit deux épîtres, les envoya aux croyants et dicta à Marc (Marqos) l'évangile qui porte son nom. Quand il entra à Rome (Roumyah), il y rencontra l'apôtre Paul. Lorsqu'il y eut prêché et enseigné et que la plus grande partie des habitants eut cru grâce à lui, l'empereur Néron (Niroun) le saisit et ordonna qu'il fut mis en croix. Il demanda par humilité d'être crucifié la tête en bas. « Car, disait-il, le Seigneur a été crucifié debout et il convient que je le sois la tête en bas, » et il rendit l'âme entre les mains du Seigneur.

Quant à Paul, c'était un Juif de la tribu de Benjamin (Benjamin), Pharisien, fils de Pharisien. Il était instruit et versé dans la loi de la Thorah, très zélé pour elle. La voix lui répondit : « Je suis Jésus le Nazaréen que tu persécutes »¹. Ensuite il l'envoya à Ananias (Hananyâh) à Damas, qui le baptisa. Il lui ouvrit les yeux et il fut rempli de la grâce du Paraclet. Il prêcha la vraie foi, et de même qu'il avait été ardent en faveur de la loi juive, la loi du Messie fut puissante en lui. Il entra dans le monde et prêcha aux gens la foi au Crucifié. Il fut tellement éprouvé par les coups, la prison, la captivité, le naufrage, l'égarément dans le désert, qu'il serait difficile de le décrire. Ses Épîtres et les Actes des Apôtres en ont rapporté une partie. Puis il entra dans Rome, y prêcha l'Évangile et un peuple considérable crut par lui. Il écrivit pour eux l'épître qui est la première des quatorze dont il est l'auteur. A la fin, Néron l'arrêta, le châtia et le livra pour être décapité. La jeune fille pleura, il la consola et lui dit : « Donne-moi ton voile, je te le rendrai à l'instant. » Elle le lui donna; il s'en enveloppa le visage; le bourreau coupa la tête de l'apôtre et la laissa enveloppée dans le voile. Quand il revint pour annoncer au roi l'exécution, la jeune fille lui demanda : « Où est Paul? » — « Il est étendu au lieu du supplice, ton voile enroulé autour de sa tête. » — « Tu mens; à l'instant Paul et Pierre viennent de passer¹ près de moi, couverts de vêtements royaux, ayant sur la tête des diadèmes incrustés de pierreries et ils m'ont rendu mon voile; le voici. » Et elle le montra au bourreau ainsi qu'à ceux qui étaient avec lui. ¹En ce jour mourut martyr l'apôtre Aoulimas surnommé Paul (Boulos). Ce saint était des soixante-dix; il servit les disciples et montra du zèle pour la prédication de l'Évangile. Il porta plusieurs des lettres de l'apôtre Pierre (Borlos), le servit dans ses malheurs et souffrit avec lui. Il entra avec lui à Rome (Boumyah), prêcha l'Évangile, enseigna et convertit beaucoup de personnes. Lorsque l'apôtre vénéré, Pierre, souffrit le martyre, cet apôtre montra beaucoup de zèle; il le descendit de la croix, l'enveloppa dans des étoffes précieuses et le déposa dans la maison d'un des fidèles. Il fut dénoncé à l'empereur Néron (Niron) comme étant des disciples. Néron le fit comparaître et l'interrogea là-dessus. Il l'avoua et confessa que le Messie était le vrai Dieu. L'empereur lui fit subir de grandes tortures par les coups, la suspension et la fumée allumée sous lui; puis il lui demanda: « De quelle mort veux-tu que je te fasse périr? » — Il répondit: « Je veux mourir à cause du Messie; comment veux-tu me faire mourir? SEPT D'AVRIL 4^e juillet .

En ce jour eut lieu le trépas du saint père, l'ascète, le dévot Anbâ Chenouti (Chenoudah) l'archimandrite. Il était des gens de Baslabât dans le pays d'Akhmim. Son père était métayer et possédait un troupeau qu'il confia au jeune Chenouti pour le faire paître. Il nourrissait de son repas les bergers; il descendait dans un étang d'eau pendant l'hiver et le froid, y demeurait et priait. Un saint vieillard témoigna qu'il voyait les dix doigts de Chenouti pareils à dix lampes allumées. Son père le prit et l'amena à Anbâ Bakhâl, son oncle maternel, pour qu'il le bénit. Celui-ci prit la main du jeune Chenouti, la mit sur sa propre tête et lui dit : « Bénis-moi, toi, car tu deviendras un père respecté pour une grande foule. » Son père le laissa chez lui. Un jour, on entendit une voix proclamer des cieux : « Chenouti a été établi comme archimandrite sur le monde entier. » — Il se mit à accomplir de nombreuses dévotions et des adorations considérables. — Lorsque le Père mourut, il fut établi à sa place et devint une lumière pour toute la terre habitée. Il prononça des exhortations et des discours, institua des règles pour tous les moines, les supérieurs, les gens du siècle, les femmes et la totalité des gens :

dit-elle, prends-en un fort pour servir le Seigneur. » Il lui répondit : « C'est celui-ci que Dieu choisit. » Après cela, Abou Basisès alla à la montagne de Scété (Châhât) et se fit moine auprès d'Abû Bâmourah qui fit embrasser la vie monastique à Abou Jean (Yohannès) le Petit. Il se livra tout entier à de nombreuses dévotions, il jeûna trois quarantaines sans rien goûter jusqu'à l'accomplissement des quarante jours. Il mérita que Notre-Seigneur le Messie lui apparût souvent; une fois il lui lava les pieds avec de l'eau dans un bassin, en but une partie et en laissa une partie dans le vase pour son disciple. Il dit à ce dernier, après que le Seigneur fut remonté aux cieux : « Va boire l'eau. » Le disciple négligea d'obéir à cet ordre; comme le maître insistait, il alla vers le vase, mais il n'y trouva plus rien. Le saint lui apprit ce qui en était, car il ignorait qu'elle provenait des pieds du Sauveur. Alors il ressentit un grand trouble : le père l'envoya à un saint dans la ville d'Akhmim; il était comme fou. Ce saint le consola et le renvoya à Basisès. Comme le disciple était encore troublé, le père le renvoya au saint, mais celui-ci était mort. Il dit à son disciple, avec cette recommandation : « Mets sur lui ce bâton et dis-lui : Mon père te fait dire de te lever et de me parler. » Lorsqu'il fut arrivé à Akhmin et qu'il eut mis le bâton sur lui, le saint se leva immédiatement, le consola et l'exhorta en disant : « Écoute ton père : ce trouble ne t'est arrivé que parce que tu ne lui as pas obéi quand il t'a dit : Bois un peu d'eau. » Quand il eut prononcé ces paroles, il se rendormit. — Une autre fois, un de ses disciples vint à lui et le trouva causant avec quelqu'un. Quand il entra, il ne vit personne. Il lui demanda des explications sur cette affaire. Le saint lui répondit : « L'Empereur Constantin est venu aujourd'hui vers moi en esprit et m'a dit : Si je savais que ce miracle appartient aux moines, j'abandonnerais mon empire et j'embrasserais la vie monastique. Je lui ai répondu : Tu as élevé la religion du Messie et anéanti le culte des idoles et le Messie ne t'a-t-il pas donné une récompense considérable? » — Il m'a répliqué : Le Messie m'a donné beaucoup, mais ce n'est pas comme le miracle des moines, car je leur ai vu des ailes de feu avec lesquelles ils volaient vers la Jérusalem (Ourihalim) céleste. — C'est à bon droit, lui ai-je dit, car vous avez une femme, des enfants, des richesses qui vous consolent, quant aux moines, ils sont pauvres, affamés, misérables, c'est pourquoi Dieu très-haut leur a donné cette récompense. » — Une autre fois, le Seigneur lui parla en ces termes : « Je ferai de ces montagnes comme des tours de refuge, remplies de moines. » — Le saint lui dit : « Seigneur, où trouveront-ils de quoi se nourrir, s'ils sont des quantités considérables? » —

Il lui répondit : « C'est moi qui prendrai soin d'eux et je ne les laisserai pas souffrir de la faim, ni manquer de quoi que ce soit. » — On raconta d'un religieux errant qui vivait dans la montagne d'Antinoé (Antinû) et autour duquel s'était rassemblée une foule considérable qui croyait en lui, qu'il tomba dans un danger important en disant : « Il n'y a pas d'Esprit-Saint. » — Il fut suivi d'une grande quantité de gens. Quand Abou Bisôès l'apprit, il mit trois anses à chacune de ses corbeilles et s'en alla à la montagne d'Antinoé. Quand il eut rejoint le moine et la foule qui était avec lui, on le salua et on l'interroga sur les trois anses. Il répondit : « C'est pour moi une Trinité(?) et toutes choses sont semblables pour moi. » — On lui dit : « Là était le Saint-Esprit (?). » Alors il commença à leur expliquer et à leur démontrer d'après les livres anciens et modernes que le Saint-Esprit était une des trois personnes de la sainte Trinité. Ils revinrent tous à la connaissance de la vérité, ainsi que le moine errant. — Notre père Abou Bisôès avait un disciple simple d'esprit. Lorsqu'il sortit pour vendre le travail de ses mains, un gentil le rencontra et le détourna de la vérité au point qu'il prononça des paroles coupables contre le Messie. Lorsqu'il revint au couvent, notre père vit que la grâce du baptême lui avait été enlevée. Après l'avoir interrogé et avoir appris ce qui était arrivé, il demeura à prier pour lui

En ce jour moururent aussi les saints martyrs Pirouou (Abirouh)¹ et Athom (Atoum) son frère. Ils étaient des gens de Tasempoti (Sanbat), nés de parents chrétiens et croyants, craignant Dieu et faisant de fréquentes aumônes. Le nom de leur père était Jean (Youhanna) et celui de leur mère Marie (Maryam). Lorsque leurs parents moururent, ils étaient grands : Pirouou avait trente ans et Athom, vingt-sept. Ils fréquentaient l'église, étaient miséricordieux, accueillaient avec affection les étrangers, et étaient accomplis dans toutes les vertus. Quand arriva le temps du martyre, ils prirent leurs marchandises et allèrent à Péluse (El-Faramâ) pour les vendre. Ils trouvèrent Ils leur donnèrent beaucoup d'argent, reçurent d'eux ce corps, le portèrent à leur demeure, le placèrent dans une cuve de marbre, et suspendirent une lampe devant lui. Il fit beaucoup de miracles. Puis les deux frères réfléchirent au déclin de ce monde, à la félicité de l'autre vie et tombèrent d'accord pour aller à Alexandrie (El-Iskandaryah) après avoir distribué aux pauvres tout ce qu'ils possédaient. Ils confessèrent le nom du Messie devant le gouverneur d'Antinoé (Ansinâ); il ordonna de les mettre à la torture. Ils furent frappés à coups de fouet, tellement que leur sang coulait sur la terre; puis on cloua leurs corps avec des clous et on alluma du feu au-dessous. Le Seigneur envoya un ange qui les délivra du feu et de la suspension. Le gouverneur ordonna alors de les enchaîner, puis il les envoya à Péluse. Quand ils comparurent devant le gouverneur, il admira leur bravoure et leur beauté et leur proposa de se prosterner devant les idoles. Ils refusèrent: il leur injecta dans le nez du sel, du vinaigre et de la chaux: ils le supportèrent avec patience; puis on les cloua sur des chaises de fer, on alluma du feu sous eux; on leur arracha les ongles des mains et des pieds, et on les frappa sur la bouche avec des massues. * Sur ces entrefaites, la femme du gouverneur mourut. ascètes, serviteurs du Messie. Dieu l'assista, il entra dans cette terre et vit beaucoup de saints; chacun d'eux lui disait son nom et l'informait du motif qui l'avait amené. A chacun d'eux il demandait : « Y a-t-il quelqu'un au-delà ? » L'autre répondait : « Oui, » jusqu'à ce qu'il arriva à saint Anbâ Kyros, le dernier de tous. Celui-ci lui cria de l'intérieur de sa caverne : « Sois le bienvenu, Anbâ Bamou, prêtre de Scété. » Il entra, ils se saluèrent réciproquement. Anbâ Kyros lui montra de loin les fumées de l'enfer et lui apprit que le Seigneur le regardait la nuit de chaque dimanche, ce qui procurait un peu de repos aux damnés. Il l'interrogea sur les choses du monde, sur les affaires des saints et d'autres points. Quand leur conversation fut terminée, Notre-Seigneur le Messie lui apparut et l'informa qu'il quitterait ce monde. Quand arriva le soir, il pria beaucoup, se prosterna la face contre terre et rendit l'âme entre les mains du Seigneur. Saint Bamou pleura, déchira sa tunique et l'ensevelit dans une moitié, puis il partit. Le Seigneur ordonna à une grande pierre de fermer l'entrée de la caverne. Anbâ Bamou s'en revint en louant Dieu et raconta la vie de ce saint. Que sa prière soit avec nous ! Amen¹.

NEUF D'ABIB (3 juillet).

DIX D'ABBE 4 juillet .

En ce jour eut lieu le martyre de saint Théodore (Taoudours), évêque de la Pentapole (El-khams melon). Lorsque l'infidèle Dioclétien (Diqladyinous) établit le culte des idoles, il envoya un gouverneur dans chaque contrée avec ordre de châtier les chrétiens et de les anéantir par toute sorte de tourments. Il envoya un gouverneur nommé Filatis (Pilate?) en Itriyah et dans ses provinces. Lorsqu'il fut arrivé et qu'il eut reconnu les endroits, on lui dénonça ce saint comme le maître des chrétiens. Il y avait un an que saint Théonas (Thaounis) l'avait mis à la tête de ce diocèse. Le gouverneur le fit venir et lui ordonna d'offrir un sacrifice aux idoles. Il lui répondit en ces termes : « Chaque jour, j'offre un sacrifice au créateur des idoles. » Le gouverneur lui demanda : « Y a-t-il d'autres divinités qu'Artémise, qu'Apollon (Aboloun), qu'Artamidah et le reste des dieux ? ne sont-ce pas des divinités ? » — « Oui, c'est mon maître Jésus le Messie, leur créateur. » — Le gouverneur, irrité de la violence de sa réponse, ordonna de le châtier. Il y eut un pigeon blanc qui vola autour de lui ainsi qu'un paon qui regarda et se posa sur une fenêtre. Les deux gouverneurs virent tout cela; aussitôt Lucien crut au Messie; quant à Difnanyous, en l'apprenant, il entra en fureur et tua trois des femmes qui marchaient derrière le saint. Quand celui-ci rendit l'âme, le pigeon et le paon s'envolèrent aussitôt. Difnanyous en fut étonné; Lucien le satisfît en lui prouvant que la foi dans le Messie est la vérité : il crut lui aussi. Chaque jour, il donnait son repas aux bergers et aux passants et lui-même restait à jeûner jusqu'au soir. Quand son père l'apprit, il alla le trouver pour savoir si la chose était vraie. L'enfant eut peur qu'il ne le frappât et songea à s'enfuir. Son père lui dit : « Montre-moi ton repas aujourd'hui. » Son fils lui répondit : « Entre pour voir. » Le père entra dans la hutte et vit la panetière remplie de pain chaud. Il s'étonna beaucoup et raconta la chose à la mère du saint. A partir de ce jour, ils surent que la grâce était dans leur enfant et ne le laissèrent plus garder de troupeaux. il abandonna aussi le troupeau de son père et devint son disciple : c'est lui qui a raconté tous ses miracles, car Dieu accomplit par lui de grands prodiges. Quand quelqu'un souffrait d'une maladie quelconque, on le lui amenait: il priait sur de l'huile dont il foinait et le malade guérissait. Il exhortait les gens et leur apprenait que la plupart de leurs maladies et des maux qui les atteignaient, venaient de leurs péchés. Ce saint fit des miracles innombrables. — Ainsi un soldat prit un panier d'orge à une veuve. Celle-ci s'en plaignit au saint qui pria contre le voleur dont le cheval mourut en mangeant de cette orge. — Une fois, le percepteur vint lever l'impôt; il avait un fils borgne. TREIZE D'ABIB (7 juillet).

En ce jour mourut notre père Pisentios (Basendah), évêque de Coptos (Qift). Depuis sa jeunesse, ce saint mena la vie monastique, fit de grandes dévotions et apprit par cœur beaucoup de livres, entre autres, le livre des Psaumes et les Douze petits prophètes. Quand il lisait la prophétie d'un des prophètes, celui-ci se tenait près de lui jusqu'à ce qu'il eût fini sa lecture. On dit que lorsqu'il levait les mains en priant, ses doigts étaient lumineux comme dix bougies allumées. Dieu fit par lui de grands miracles. Jamais il ne considéra une femme, mais il baissait les yeux vers la terre, si bien qu'une femme souffrant d'une violente douleur d'entrailles le guetta un jour près de sa caverne et le rencontra. Il courut et elle courait après lui. Comme elle ne

L'ange Michel (Mikhâyil) lui apparut et lui apprit ce qui adviendrait de lui, comment il irait à Antinoé (Anšinâ) et serait torturé pour le nom du Messie. Il se leva, alla à Antinoé, confessa le nom du Messie devant le gouverneur Eukhyous (Toukhyous) qui lui fit subir de grands tourments, tantôt par les chevalets, par le feu, par le fer rouge, par les fouets; il le jeta dans le four d'un bain; lui arracha la peau et mit dessus des braises rouges; le Seigneur le fortifiait et le sauvait sans douleur. Notre-Seigneur le Messie lui apparut pareil à un jeune homme sur un char spirituel; il le consola et le fortifia. Puis il lui promit qu'il serait avec lui, qu'il aiderait quiconque l'invoquerait en son nom dans tous les malheurs, qu'il protégerait son pays, son église et son corps. Ce saint fit des miracles considérables.... Quand il fut décapité par l'épée et qu'il reçut la couronne de vie, saint Jules (Youlyâs) d'Aqfahâs était présent. la vérité des choses et à discuter avec les gentils. Quand le concile se réunit à Nicée (Niqqah), il y assista avec son maître Mar Jacques. Un jour, il vit une colonne de lumière qui s'élevait de la terre vers le ciel. Comme il s'en étonnait, on lui dit : « Ce que tu as vu, c'est saint Basile (Bāsilyous), évêque de Césarée (Qaisāryah). » Il désira le voir et alla dans cette ville, entra dans l'église et se tint debout dans un coin. Il vit Basile qui montait pour lire; il avait revêtu un vêtement doré et précieux; Anbā Efrem eut des doutes sur lui : le Seigneur lui fit voir une colombe blanche sur sa tête. Puis, Dieu fit connaître sa présence à Basile. Celui-ci l'envoya appeler par son nom. Saint Efrem en fut étonné. Tous deux se saluèrent l'un l'autre au moyen d'un interprète; Efrem demanda à Dieu qu'ils pussent se parler sans interprète; la grâce descendit sur eux et chacun d'eux connut la langue de l'autre. Puis, saint Basile l'ordonna diacre. Ensuite sa vertu ne fit que s'accroître et on vit apparaître en lui de nombreuses grâces qui surpassent toute description. Entre autres, celle-ci : une femme timide avait honte de se confesser ouvertement à saint Basile; elle écrivit sur un papier ses péchés depuis son enfance jusqu'à ce temps, sans rien omettre, puis elle le remit à saint Basile et lui fit cette demande devant le peuple : « Je suis une pécheresse : j'ai écrit mes fautes * sur ce papier : je te demande leur pardon. » Cet écrit était scellé. Le saint le prit et pria pour elle : le papier devint blanc; tous les péchés furent effacés excepté un seul qui était considérable. A cette vue, elle pleura et demanda son pardon. Basile lui dit : « Va dans le pays trouver saint Efrem, il te le pardonnera. » Elle le quitta et se rendit auprès du saint à qui elle conta son aventure. Il lui dit : « Va le trouver avant sa sortie de ce monde : c'est le chef des prêtres : il te pardonnera ton péché. » Elle y alla et trouva qu'il était mort et porté sur la tête des prêtres. Elle pleura, jeta le papier sur la litière funèbre et l'implora : il effaça le péché. Saint Efrem fit de nombreux miracles. De son temps apparut Ibn-Daï-san qui était dissident et infidèle. Le père le combattit et le vainquit. Il composa des discours et de nombreuses poésies. On trouve dans quelques copies que les homélies qu'il prononça en l'honneur du Saint-Esprit sont au nombre de quatorze et qu'il adressa cette demande à Dieu très-haut : « Seigneur, écarte de moi les vagues de ta grâce. » Quand il eut terminé sa belle lutte, il fut transporté près du Seigneur. Il demanda à embrasser la vie monastique; ce père se montra difficile, et lui fit connaître que les fatigues du service de Dieu dans la vie monastique le briseraient, mais il insista dans sa demande. Alors le supérieur lui rasa la tête et le revêtit de l'habit sacré. Il supporta beaucoup de fatigues, se donna tout entier à de grandes et dures dévotions, si bien que¹ son corps maigrit et que ses os furent visibles à cause du peu de chair qui les couvrait. Le père s'apitoyait sur lui et lui disait : « Épargne-toi, fais comme les autres frères. » Lorsque sept ans se furent écoulés, il vit en songe quelqu'un qui lui disait : « Va vers tes parents pour recevoir leur bénédiction avant de mourir. » Pendant trois nuits, il eut ce rêve. Il en informa le supérieur qui lui apprit que ce songe venait de Dieu et lui conseilla de partir. Lorsqu'il fut sorti du couvent, il trouva un pauvre couvert de haillons; il les prit et lui remit en échange les vêtements qu'il portait. Quand il arriva à la maison de son père, il demeura près de la porte pendant trois ans dans une hutte où il se nourrissait des restes de la table de son père que lui jetaient les serviteurs. Quand sa mère passait près de lui, elle se détournait avec dégoût à cause de son odeur. Lorsque sa fin approcha, le Seigneur l'avertit qu'il mourrait dans trois jours. parce qu'il fut élevé avec lui, quand il était dans la maison de Joseph son père. Les apôtres l'établirent évêque de Jérusalem. Il prêcha l'Évangile, enseigna le nom du Messie, convertit beaucoup de gens, les baptisa et Dieu fit par lui de grands miracles. Il modifia la nature d'une femme qui était stérile et elle enfanta un fils à qui elle donna le nom de Jacques. Un jour, beaucoup de Juifs se réunirent et lui demandèrent de leur enseigner quelque chose relativement au Messie : ils espéraient qu'il le nommerait son frère. Il commença par monter dans la chaire et se mit à leur exposer sa puissance, son éternité¹ son égalité avec Dieu le Père. En ce jour mourut martyr le saint glorieux, Mar Pantaléemon (Batlân)¹, le médecin. Ce saint était d'un pays appelé Na'midar : son père était infidèle et se nommait Astoukhyous ; sa mère était croyante et s'appelait Aounalah. Quand il fut grand, son père lui enseigna l'écriture et la science de la médecine et il la comut bien. Il y avait un prêtre dans le voisinage de leur demeure : toutes les fois que Mar Pantaléemon passait près de lui, il remarquait sa beauté, ses bonnes manières, sa science, son intelligence, regrettant qu'il fût infidèle et demandant au Messie de le diriger et de le guider vers la voie de la vie. Quand ses demandes à Dieu se furent multipliées, le Seigneur l'avertit dans un songe nocturne que ce saint croirait par son intermédiaire. Il s'en réjouit et se mit à entreprendre de lui parler. Chaque fois qu'il passait, il le saluait et causait avec lui. Il s'établit entre eux une amitié ; Pantaléemon entra dans la maison du prêtre et s'entretenait de la foi avec lui. Celui-ci lui montrait l'abjection des idoles, la corruption d'esprit de leurs adorateurs, la noblesse de la religion du Messie, le charme de l'intelligence de ceux qui l'adoraient. Puis il lui fit connaître que des miracles et des guérisons arrivaient par les

Quand son père mourut, il affranchit ses esclaves, distribua aux malheureux tout ce qu'il possédait et se mit à soigner gratuitement les malades. Seulement, il demandait à ceux qu'il soignait et qu'il guérissait de croire au Messie. Les autres médecins le jalouèrent et le dénoncèrent à l'empereur, ainsi que le prêtre, l'aveugle et une foule de croyants. Il leur adressa de nombreuses menaces. Comme ils ne devenaient pas infidèles, il leur fit trancher la tête. Ensuite il fit subir au saint beaucoup de tourments : un grand nombre de miracles apparurent; une foule considérable crut grâce à lui, pendant qu'il était à la torture et souffrait le martyr. L'empereur, irrité contre le saint, le jeta aux bêtes féroces qui ne lui firent aucun mal. Alors il ordonna de lui trancher la tête. Ainsi fut accomplie sa lutte. Que son intercession soit avec nous! En ce jour arriva le martyr de saint Macaire² (Maqarah) fils de Basilide (Ouaisilides) le ministre. Quand on le dénonça à l'empereur Dioclétien (Diqlatyanous) comme n'adorant pas les idoles, il écrivit de l'envoyer à Alexandrie (El Iskandaryah). Le saint fit ses adieux à sa mère, lui recommanda les pauvres et les malheureux et partit avec les messagers. Notre-Seigneur le Messie lui apparut en songe, le fortifia, lui donna la patience et lui apprit ce qui lui arriverait. Lorsqu'il fut arrivé à Alexandrie et qu'il comparut devant Arménios (Armaniouos), celui-ci, apprenant qu'il était fils du ministre, lui fit beaucoup de caresses et chercha à le séduire. Comme il ne le fléchissait pas, il lui fit subir diverses tortures. Son âme fut ravie tandis qu'il était dans les tourments et le Seigneur lui fit voir les demeures des saints, celle de son père. Après cela, le gouverneur l'envoya à Niquous; là il fut torturé; on lui coupa la langue et les bras; on planta dans ses côtés des clous brûlants et Dieu fit par lui des miracles. Ainsi un mort passa près de lui avec une foule de gens; le saint demanda au Seigneur de manifester sa gloire. Le mort se leva, parla et fit connaître à la foule ce qu'il avait vu en enfer et que le Messie était le maître de tout. Les gens crurent en lui; on leur trancha la tête et ils reçurent la couronne du martyr. Puis Aryanos (Argina), gouverneur d'Esneh (Angina), arriva : à son retour, il emmena le saint avec lui. Quand ils furent à Chatnouf, la barque ne put plus avancer ni remuer. Le Seigneur apparut au saint en songe et lui apprit ceci : « Ici finira ta lutte; c'est ici que restera ton corps. » Le gouverneur ordonna à ses soldats de monter avec le saint sur une colline et de lui couper la tête. Ainsi sa lutte fut terminée. Quand Constantin (Constantin) obtint le pouvoir, il envoya un fidèle du nom d'Euloge (Aouloudjyou), rouvrir et rebâtir les églises, détruire les temples païens. Il était de Tripoli Marabolos; il avait une belle forme, une conduite parfaite et s'adonnait continuellement à la lecture des livres divins. Si bien qu'il en retint une partie, spécialement les Psaumes, car à force d'être assidu à les lire, il les sut par cœur. Outre cette lecture continuelle, il prêchait ses compagnons d'armes et les détournait de corrompre leur vie en adorant les idoles. Il y en eut qui écoutèrent sa parole et renoncèrent à leur infidélité et d'autres, chez qui entra Satan, qui allèrent trouver leur officier et lui apprirent que le saint méprisait les idoles et enseignait que le Messie était le vrai Dieu. Il le fit venir et l'interrogea là-dessus. Le saint répondit : « L'apôtre Paul Banobys dit : Qui me détournera d'aimer le Messie divin que j'adore depuis mon enfance et devant qui je me prosterne ! » L'officier irrité ordonna de l'enchaîner et de le jeter en prison. Le lendemain, il le fit venir et lui dit : « Par quelle force oses-tu t'opposer à l'empereur et détourner les gens d'adorer les idoles ? » Le saint lui répondit : « C'est à bon droit que je me propose d'amener tous les gens à obéir au Messie; si toi-même tu abandonnais ton erreur et si tu l'adorais, tu recevrais en héritage le royaume éternel. » Puis il injuria les idoles. (El-Askandaryah) (689-702). Il était des gens de l'Orient. Ses parents l'emmenèrent au couvent où se trouve le corps de saint Sévère (Saouiros), à l'ouest d'Alexandrie : il y embrassa la vie monastique, apprit l'écriture et retint par cœur la plupart des livres de l'église. Auprès Agathon (Agbitou) l'ordonna prêtre, puis il fut désigné pour le patriarcat par une indication divine. Quand il devint chef, il remit l'administration du patriarcat à son père spirituel et lui-même se livra aux jeûnes, aux prières et à la lecture. Il ne mangeait que du pain et du sel avec du cumin et des légumes, sans plus : sa conduite et sa dévotion étaient parfaites. Il soumit l'âme concupiscente qui était en lui à l'âme intelligente et raisonnable. Dieu fit arriver par lui de grands miracles. Ainsi, une troupe de prêtres d'Alexandrie le jalousaient; ils s'entendirent avec une bande de magiciens qui lui préparèrent des substances meurtrières et empoisonnées : ils les placèrent dans une bouteille; puis ils la lui remirent et lui demandèrent d'en faire usage et de prier pour eux. Il en prit après avoir offert le saint sacrifice et n'éprouva aucun mal. Ils le firent une seconde et une troisième fois, mais cela ne lui nuisit pas. Ils s'étonnèrent de son salut. loment de ne rien garder dans sa maison qui appartient aux églises. Ce prêtre tomba malade subitement; sa langue s'attacha à son gosier et il perdit l'intelligence. Quand le patriarche l'apprit, il s'alligea et veilla toute la nuit, demandant à Dieu très-haut de le ressusciter à cause des richesses des églises.

 Au milieu de la nuit, il apprit que le prêtre était près de mourir. Il envoya un de ses disciples en lui ordonnant d'interroger la femme du prêtre sur les trésors des églises. Quand le disciple approcha de la maison, il entendit les cris * 1. 260 r. et les pleurs sur le prêtre. Il entra et le trouva mort. * On l'avait revêtu des vêtements du sacerdoce et étendu sur un lit : autour de lui était une foule considérable qui le pleurait. Il se pencha sur lui pour l'embrasser : le mort s'assit brusquement, ses mains s'attachèrent à sa gorge et il dit : « Dieu unique, Dieu de notre père Siméon ! » Ceux qui l'entouraient firent frappés de terreur et s'enfuirent à l'envi. Le disciple demanda : « Tu as de la force, prêtre. » — « Oui, par la prière de mon seigneur Abba Siméon, Dieu m'a rendu la vie. » Le disciple rappela les prêtres effrayés et les rassura en leur disant que le mort était guéri. Quand ils furent rentrés, celui-ci leur dit : « Sachez qu'après ma mort, on me fit comparaître devant le siège du Messie; je vis les patriarches d'Alexandrie depuis Marc (Marqos) jusqu'à Anba Isaac (Isâak), debout devant lui. Ils me firent des reproches en me disant : Pourquoi as-tu caché les trésors des églises à notre frère Siméon? Notre-Seigneur le Messie dit alors :

Emmenez-le vers les ténèbres extérieures. Comme on me trainait pour m'emmener, les patriarches se prosternèrent devant lui et l'implorèrent en lui disant : Seigneur, sois miséricordieux pour lui cette fois-ci, car notre frère Siméon est debout à prier pour lui à cause des richesses des églises. Alors le Seigneur agréa leur prière et leur demanda et ordonna de me ramener à la vie. Puis il me dit : Je te laisse à cause de ces hommes purs et de leur successeur. Agis avec justice, sinon je te ferai revenir ici et je n'accueillerai pas de demande en ta faveur. Et voici que je suis vivant. » Puis cet homme vécut, racontant ce miracle à qui l'interrogeait. Ce père demeura sept ans et demi, accomplissant des actes de dévotion et d'adoration, prêchant et enseignant. Puis il mourut en paix. Que sa prière soit avec nous ! Amen¹.

 pour entendre son enseignement. Quand la vierge Thècle l'eut appris, elle monta par une fenêtre pour écouter ses instructions et resta en cet état, pendant trois jours et trois nuits, silencieuse, sans boire ni manger. Les paroles de l'apôtre pénétrèrent au fond de son cœur. Son père et ses esclaves s'effrayèrent, lui demandèrent de renoncer à son projet de suivre Paul. Le premier se rencontra avec Dimas et Hermogène (Armondjanis) et se plaignit à eux de la conduite de sa fille : ils l'amènèrent à demander contre Paul l'aide du gouverneur. Celui-ci fit venir l'apôtre, s'informa de lui et de son enseigne-

Il garda avec le plus grand soin le troupeau du Messie et le défendit contre les loups d'Arius (Argyous), Macédonius (Maqdonnyous) et Sabellius (Sabellyous). La sixième année de son patriarcat, le grand Théodose (Tioudousyous) régna sur les chrétiens. Cette même année eut lieu à Constantinople (El-Qostantinyah) le saint concile des 150 pères contre Macédonius qui niait l'Esprit-Saint. Ce père présida le concile parce que Damase (Diminyous), pape de Rome (Roumyah), n'y assista pas, ou plutôt il fut son représentant. Le saint engagea des controverses avec Macédonius, Sabellius et Apollinaire (Aboulinaris), les vainquit et triompha de leurs arguments. On le demanda pour l'épiscopat ; il s'enfuit ; quand il arriva à Kalmoun, il passa la nuit chez deux frères chrétiens qui aimaient Dieu. L'ange du Seigneur lui apparut et lui ordonna de confesser le Messie. Quand il s'éveilla, il en informa les deux frères. Ils furent d'accord pour aller trouver le gouverneur et confesser le nom du Messie. Il leur fit subir de nombreux châtements et les jeta en prison. Puis il les amena à Sanhour et les tortura lui aussi : l'ange du Seigneur leur apparaissait et les fortifiait. Puis il les amena à Şà et les tourmenta là encore. Ensuite il rassembla beaucoup de confesseurs et leur lut un édit de l'empereur pour l'adoration des idoles. Le saint Ouarchenoufah s'élança, saisit l'édit et le déchira. Seigneur le Messie et es-tu venue vers cette mauvaise conduite? » En entendant ces paroles, elle trembla et sentit comme si son cœur se fondait. Le saint pencha la tête et pleura. Elle l'interrogea sur ses larmes. Il répondit. « Je vois Satan (Ech-Chaqtin) jouer sur ton visage, voilà pourquoi je pleure sur toi. » Elle lui demanda : « Y a-t-il un repentir? » — « Oui. » Elle reprit : « Emmène-moi où tu voudras. » Lorsqu'il lui dit : « Viens, » elle se leva et le suivit. Ils marchèrent et entrèrent dans le désert. Le soir venu, il lui dit : « Dors, » puis il se coucha aussi, loin d'elle, après avoir accompli sa prière. Quand il se leva au milieu de la nuit pour prier, il vit au-dessus d'elle une colonne de lumière allant de la terre jusqu'au ciel et les anges du Seigneur qui emportaient son âme. Il alla près d'elle et la trouva morte. Il se jeta sur le sol et demanda à Dieu de l'agréer à cause d'elle. Une voix vint à lui, disant : « Son repentir a été accepté au moment même * où elle s'est repentie; elle l'emporte sur ceux qui ont vécu de nombreuses années sans montrer l'ardeur de leur repentir. » Il alla informer les vieillards de ce qui lui était arrivé avec elle. Que sa prière soit avec nous! Amen¹.

TROIS DE MESORÉ 27 juillet.

En ce jour mourut saint Siméon (Sim'ân) le reclus. Ce saint était de l'île de Syrie (Souryah) ; quand il était enfant, il gardait un troupeau appartenant à son père et fréquentait assidûment l'église. La grâce de Dieu le poussa à aller dans un couvent où il demeura, pratiquant de grandes austérités; il jetait de la poussière et de la cendre sur sa tête, outre qu'il se mortifiait par un jeûne fréquent et une soif répétée. Puis il attacha autour de ses reins une corde qui finit par pénétrer dans sa chair, en sorte que cet endroit produisit des vers. Son odeur devint fétide; l'odorat des frères fut soulevé et ils eurent de la répugnance pour lui. Alors il partit d'au milieu d'eux et alla à un puits desséché où il demeura. Le supérieur du couvent vit quelqu'un qui lui disait : « Cherche mon serviteur Siméon, » et il semblait leur reprocher son départ. Il en informa tous les frères, qui furent troublés et se mirent à sa recherche; ils le trouvèrent dans le puits où il était sans manger ni boire; ils se prosternèrent devant lui, lui demandèrent pardon et l'amenèrent au couvent. Comme ils le glorifiaient dans le monastère, il ne put le supporter. Il partit

Dès qu'il régna, il brisa les idoles, détruisit leurs autels, coupa en morceaux le serpent d'airain parce que les Israélites l'adoraient. Dieu le récompensa pendant sa vie, pour plus qu'il n'avait fait. La quatorzième année de son règne, Sennachérib (Sinharib) assiégea la ville de Jérusalem (Ourichalim) : c'était un roi puissant et très fort ; il n'y en avait pas de son temps de plus fort que lui. 1. B ajoute ici ce développement: Il lutta contre Satan (Ech-Chaïtân) en secret et en cachette et le vainquit par la force du Messie. Ses pensées étaient sublimes et sa conduite spirituelle: au milieu de gens méchants, de rois en rois dont aucun ne mentionnait le nom du Messie. Le Seigneur connaissait les pensées de ce saint, il cacha ce qui en était et le protégea à cause de l'utilité des chrétiens qui choisissaient de souffrir et de goûter la mort par les mains des rois infidèles, confessant ouvertement le nom du Messie et cela par amour pour leur Seigneur qui a souffert de son gré et reçu la mort sur la croix lorsqu'il sauva notre race de la servitude amère. Ce saint leur faisait du bien, leur assurait le repos par l'exécès de son zèle, sous l'extérieur d'un soldat, tandis que son affaire était cachée aux yeux des rois et des soldats. C'est ainsi que Dieu apporta dans le cœur des rois de l'inattention à saint Jules d'Asqafas (Youlyous el-Aqfiçi) et de tous ses serviteurs, en sorte qu'aucun ne . . . l'adoration des idoles qui existaient à cette époque jusqu'à ce qu'arriva le moment de son martyre et de celui des serviteurs qui étaient avec lui. A pareil jour moururent martyrs les sept saints qui sont : le vieillard Éléazar (El'azar), Salomé (Souloumah) et leurs sept fils dont voici les noms : Anim, Antoine (Antoungous), Osias (Ouzya)¹, Éliézer (Elyazzer), Aniänä, Mämounä² et Marcellus (Märkellous). Ce vieillard Éléazar était un des docteurs de la loi juive. Son père était un des soixante-dix commentateurs qui commentèrent et traduisirent la Loi pour Ptolémée (Bofolomyous), roi d'Égypte (Misr). Ce juste avait instruit ces jeunes gens et leur avait appris la loi. Lorsque Antiochus (Antyäkhus), roi des Grecs (Roum), posséda le pays de Syrie (Ech-Châm) et celui de Juda (Yahoudä), il assiégea Jérusalem (Ourichalim) et s'en empara ; il tyrannisa la nation des Juifs (El-Yahoud) et ils éprouvèrent de lui beaucoup de tourments. Il les obligea à désobéir à la loi de la Torah et à manger ce qu'elle leur interdisait, comme du porc et autre chose (de semblable). Une foule de gens eurent peur de lui et lui obéirent. Ces justes demeurèrent fermes, obéissant à la loi que Dieu leur avait donnée. Il leur fit subir de nombreux supplices en les suspendant, les frappant, les déchirant avec des peignes de fer et les écartelant. La vertueuse Salomé ne cessait de les encourager et de les fortifier jusqu'à ce qu'ils moururent. Elle se jeta d'elle-même dans un étang

Il convient que tu saches, ô mon auditeur, que nos pères chrétiens ont établi comme règle de faire une fête en faveur des justes de la loi de la Torah, pour que nous sachions que nous n'avons pas abandonné l'œuvre de la loi de la Torah en la rejetant, mais parce que nous sommes passés à une loi meilleure : nous admettons les justes de l'ancienne loi à leur rang ; nous ne les honorons pas plus que les pères de la nouvelle qui ont fait bien plus qu'eux. Que leurs prières à tous nous protègent ! Amen.

 de ce père pour attester le mérite de sa conduite chez ceux qui ne le connaissaient pas ; il reçut le don de prophétie et connut des choses avant leur arrivée ; ainsi il dit à Anbà Théodore (Tadros), évêque d'Égypte (Mîsr) : « Le roi ne reviendra pas de ce voyage, » et la prédiction s'accomplit. Il annonça diverses choses pour le gouverneur de Mîsr et elles se réalisèrent. Il guérit une vieillesse vertueuse arrivée à son terme, il tomba légèrement malade ; il connut l'époque de sa mort ; il fit venir son peuple, le bénit, lui donna l'absolu-

La réputation de sa justice se répandit dans toute la terre. Les chefs de Rome lui envoyèrent demander de les sauver de la tyrannie de Maxence (Maksimyanous) et de les délivrer de son oppression. Quand il eut lu leurs lettres, il compatit à leurs malheurs et à leurs vexations et resta à réfléchir sur la manière dont il les sauverait. La croix glorieuse lui apparut, il la prit comme refuge et partit pour combattre Maxence. Il le battit; le tyran s'enfuit; le pont se rompit sous lui et il périt de la pire mort, la septième année de son règne. Ensuite les chefs de Rome et tous les habitants le reçurent en grande pompe et avec une joie considérable; ils célébrèrent, pour sa victoire, une fête de sept jours: les poètes de

QUATORZE DU MOIS DE MESORÉ (7 août).

²En ce jour, Dieu fit un grand miracle dans la ville d'Alexandrie (El-Iskandaryah), à cause duquel crurent beaucoup de Juifs (El-Yahoud), par les mains de notre père, le saint Anba Théophile (Tâouflos), oncle de saint Cyrille (Kirlos). Il y avait dans la ville d'Alexandrie un Juif nommé Philoxène (Filoksinous); il était excessivement riche, craignait Dieu et agissait suivant la loi de Moïse (Mousa) dans la mesure de ses moyens. Il y avait aussi dans cette ville deux chrétiens pauvres qui travaillaient à un métier manuel. Satan (Ech-Chaïtin) inspira à l'un d'eux une pensée blasphématoire; il dit à son compagnon: « Pourquoi adorons-nous le Messie et sommes-nous pauvres, tandis que ce Juif Philoxène est extrêmement riche? » — L'autre lui répondit: « Mon frère, la richesse de ce monde n'a pas de valeur auprès de Dieu, et si elle SEIZE DE MESORÉ (9 août).

A pareil jour eut lieu l'ascension du corps de Notre-Dame la pure, Marie (Martmargam) mère de Dieu le Verbe. En effet, après sa mort, les apôtres avaient le cœur alligé de leur séparation d'avec elle. Le Seigneur leur promit qu'assurément ils la verraient en corps. Arrivés à ce jour, ils la virent en corps, assise en grande pompe à la droite de son Fils et de son Dieu. Elle étendit la main et bénit chacun des disciples. Autour d'elle étaient les milices des anges et des saints et le roi David la louait en disant : « La reine s'est levée à ta droite avec des vêtements d'or. » Les âmes des disciples furent dans la joie. Puis elle monta à leurs yeux, assise sur le trône des Chérubins devant eux, et ils se prosternèrent joyeux. Cette fête fut instituée en commémoration perpétuelle de la Mère de Dieu. Que son intercession soit avec nous ! Amen.

goug (Amadjoudj), des districts de Psoi (Abson). Ce saint était né de parents chrétiens et craignant Dieu. Ils avaient eu trois filles avant ce saint. Quand elles eurent grandi, ils les mirent dans un couvent de religieuses pour les instruire et les élever dans la crainte de Dieu. Elles apprirent beaucoup de livres ecclésiastiques anciens et modernes. Quand ils voulurent les faire revenir, elles n'y consentirent pas, mais elles se réunirent comme fiancées du Messie. Ils s'adiligèrent d'en être séparés, mais le Seigneur les consola par ce saint Jacques. Quand ils l'eurent, ils s'en réjouirent. Lorsqu'il eut atteint sa sixième année, ils l'envoyèrent à Psoi pour apprendre la sagesse. Il l'apprit et devint accompli. Puis son père l'envoya examiner ce qu'il possédait en fait de biens^{*} et de troupeaux. Il y avait chez son père un vieillard qui gardait les moutons; il faisait beaucoup d'actes méritoires, descendait pendant l'hiver dans un étang d'eau et y restait à prier la nuit entière. Ce saint Jacques faisait de même et cela dura longtemps. Lorsque Satan (Ech-Chaitân) souleva la persécution contre les chrétiens, le vieillard remit son troupeau au père du saint et partit pour souffrir le martyre. Jacques demanda à son père de le laisser aller avec lui, promettant de revenir. Quand il partit, il trouva le gouverneur dans la Haute-Egypte (Es-Sa'îd) occupé à tourmenter

Quant à saint Jacques, le gouverneur lui fit subir de grands tourments en le frappant avec des fouets. Puis il lit chauffer une dalle et la mit sur son cœur. Le saint leva les yeux vers le Messie et pria ; le Seigneur l'aida et le délivra. On le mit dans un sac et on le jeta dans le fleuve ; l'ange du Seigneur l'en retira. Il alla se mettre debout devant le gouverneur ; celui-ci l'envoya à Péluse (El-Faramâ). Arius alla à Constantinople; il entra chez l'empereur Constance (Qostantinous) et se plaignit à lui de saint Athanasie (Atanasyous). Comme il ne trouvait pas de repos près de celui-ci, il lui demanda de dire à ce saint Alexandre de le recevoir. L'empereur envoya dire à ce père : « Athanasie nous a fait opposition et n'a pas reçu Arius. Tu sais que c'est nous qui l'avons fait patriarche; ne nous désobéis pas, donne-moi satisfaction et absous Arius. » Le saint répondit : « L'église n'admet pas Arius parce qu'il n'adore pas la Sainte Trinité. » — L'empereur reprit : « Au contraire, il l'a confessée devant moi. » Le saint répondit : « S'il a confessé la Trinité, croyant que le Fils est consubstantiel au Père, qu'il le déclare dans un écrit de sa main. » — L'empereur fit venir Arius et lui dit : « Écris une déclaration de la foi. » — Il écrivit une déclaration sur la foi orthodoxe, mais c'était contraire à son sentiment intérieur. lui demanda de jurer sur l'Évangile que telle était sa croyance. Il le jura mensongèrement. L'empereur dit alors à notre père Alexandre : « Il ne te reste plus de grief contre lui, après qu'il a écrit sa déclaration et sa foi. » Le patriarche lui répondit : « Notre père Athanase a renouvelé contre Arius son excommunication, par un écrit de lui et des 318 (Pères du concile de Nicée) ; il l'a banni d'Alexandrie, lui et sa secte. Donne-moi un délai d'une semaine ; si dans cet intervalle rien n'arrive contre Arius, et si sa parole et sa croyance sont sincères, je le recevrai et je le laisserai s'associer aux prêtres. » — L'empereur reprit : « Sache que je patienterai avec toi pendant autant de jours ; si Arius n'est pas admis, je frapperai l'Église d'une amende considérable. » — Alexandre sortit et resta à jeuner pendant toute cette semaine, demandant à Dieu de le délivrer du péché d'Arius. Le temps écoulé, celui-ci s'habilla magnifiquement, entra à l'église et s'assit avec les prêtres devant le sanctuaire. Puis notre père Alexandre entra alligé, ne sachant que faire. Il se leva pour commencer le saint sacrifice. Les entrailles d'Arius furent agitées. Il alla dans un endroit secret pour faire cesser ses douleurs. Mais ses entrailles et tout ce qui était dans son ventre descendirent et il resta vidé. Comme son absence se prolongeait, on le chercha et on le trouva mort dans un coin. On en informa notre père et on lona le Messie qui n'avait pas abandonné son Église. L'empereur en fut étonné et reconnut qu'Arius avait menti dans son écrit et son

A l'époque de Déce (Daiyous) l'hypocrite, ils étaient parmi les gardes de l'empereur; il les avait établis comme gardiens de tous ses trésors. Quand il rétablit l'idolâtrie, on lui dénonça ces saints. Ils furent arrêtés et emprisonnés.

Il arriva que l'empereur voulut aller en quelque endroit; il les laissa libres jusqu'à son retour, pensant qu'ils renonceraient à leur dessein. Quand il fut sorti de la ville, ils renoncèrent au métier militaire pour ne pas se prosterner devant des idoles impures. Puis ils allèrent à une grotte dans la montagne, en bouchèrent sur eux l'ouverture et s'endormirent. Ils avaient avec eux un reste de monnaie portant le nom de Dèce : chaque jour, l'un d'eux partait le matin, entrait dans la ville, achetait pour eux de quoi manger et écoutait pour eux les nouvelles. Quand ils apprirent que l'empereur était arrivé, ils bouchèrent sur eux l'entrée de la caverne. Elle demanda d'attendre trois jours pour réfléchir. Elle coupa sa chevelure et alla trouver les idoles qui étaient dans le palais pour leur demander conseil au sujet du mariage; elles ne lui parlèrent pas. Alors elle leva les yeux au ciel et dit : « Dieu des chrétiens, guide-moi vers ce qui te plaît. » L'ange du Seigneur vint à elle et lui apprit que le lendemain un des compagnons de l'apôtre Paul (Boulas) entrerait dans la ville et la baptiserait. Le lendemain, il envoya un des disciples de l'apôtre Paul qui la baptisa. Lorsque son père et sa mère vinrent au rendez-vous, elle leur fit connaître qu'elle était devenue chrétienne. Son père l'emmena au milieu de la ville et ordonna de la lier et de la jeter sur le chemin des chevaux. On le fit et elle n'en éprouva aucun mal. Alors ses parents en

* f. 278 r. Marcien fut mort * et que Léon (Lidoun) régna, les Grecs (Roum) mirent à la tête des fidèles un homme d'Alexandrie appelé Protérios (Abroutarious), qui était un des prêtres de cette ville et qui reconnaissait le concile de Chalcédoine (Khatqadounyah). Mais les habitants ne le reçurent pas, à l'exception d'une petite troupe. Le reste communia avec les prêtres que notre père Cyrille (Kirlos) et notre père Dioscore avaient ordonnés. Lorsque Protérios fut élevé à cette dignité, il réunit un concile composé de ses partisans qui disaient comme lui et il anathématisa le prêtre Eutychès (Aoutakhi) qui parlait du mélange (de la divinité et de l'humanité) : il s'imaginait que notre père Dioscore, qui avait excommunié Eutychès et ceux qui mélangent la divinité du Messie avec son humanité, reviendrait sur sa parole; la croyance de notre père Dioscore est comme celle des saints Basile (Basilious), Grégoire (Aghrihourious) et Cyrille qui parlent d'une seule nature en Dieu le Verbe incarné; non pas que la divinité soit devenue chair, ni que la chair se soit modifiée et soit devenue divinité, mais chacune d'elles a conservé son essence dans une union, elles sont deux modes, deux natures. De même que nos pères ont excommunié ceux qui séparaient les deux natures après l'union, de même ils ont excommunié ceux qui les mélangent. Après la dispersion du synode, le lendemain de ce jour, Protérios fut trouvé assassiné dans sa cellule. Ses partisans crurent qu'il avait été tué par un des disciples de notre père Dioscore. Nos frères dirent : « Peut-être est-ce un des partisans d'Eutychès ou un voleur qui l'a tué pour prendre ses richesses. » C'était la vérité, car le synode n'avait pas été tenu contre nous ni à cause de nous, et nous étions d'accord avec lui pour excommunier Eutychès. — Les partisans de Protérios envoyèrent dire à l'empereur : « Les sectaires de Dioscore ont agi avec insolence contre l'empire; ils l'ont méprisé et ont tué le patrice que l'empereur avait institué. » Tandis qu'il était entre le meurtre et la lutte, nos frères se réunirent, élevèrent au patriarcat notre père Timothée (Timothéus). Les autres envoyèrent à l'empereur une lettre où ils lui disaient : « Ceux qui ont assassiné Protérios ont élevé un patriarche sans la permission de l'empereur. » Celui-ci fut irrité par les deux lettres : Satan (Ech-Chaïtan) pénétra en lui, tellement qu'il envoya une armée nombreuse. Elle massacra trente mille de nos frères, grands et petits, esclaves et hommes libres; il exila le patriarche Timothée dans l'île de Gangre où il resta sept ans. pour y croire. Ce saint était un pieux ermite assidu aux prières diurnes et nocturnes et extrêmement charitable. Il fut choisi pour l'évêché de la ville de Mar'ach et il fit la meilleure garde autour du troupeau du Messie. Lorsque régna l'empereur infidèle Dioclétien (Diqlitiginois), il envoya dans la ville de Mar'ach un de ses lieutenants pour tourmenter les chrétiens. Il commença par ce père. Il fit partir vers lui une troupe de scélérats qui l'amènèrent en le traînant sur le sol. Quand il arriva vers l'officier, son sang coulait. L'autre lui proposa d'être infidèle^{*} au Messie et de se prosterner devant des pierres sculptées. Il ne lui obéit pas, l'injuria parce qu'il les adorait et les maudit devant lui. L'officier lui fit subir de pénibles tourments en le frappant, en le suspendant, en faisant tomber goutte à goutte sur lui de la graisse bouillante. Tout cela fut fait à des jours différents, car les infidèles aux cours de pierre ne voulaient pas le faire mourir, mais le torturer pour que d'autres devinssent infidèles. Quand ils furent vaincus et fatigués, tandis que lui était ferme à les blâmer, ils le jetèrent dans une prison obscure et oubliée où il demeura vingt-deux ans : ils y entraient chaque année, le torturaient et lui coupaient les membres l'un après l'autre. restait et resta dans son obéissance et à son service pendant des années. Puis il vint à Macaire Marpleous, le servit et servit les vieillards. Ensuite il voyagea dans le désert, errant sans s'abriter sous un toit, dépouillé de tout bien par un redoublement d'ascétisme, au point de n'avoir pas de vêtement ni de livre, mais une étoffe grossière de lin qu'il attachait autour de sa taille. Il errait parmi les cellules des moines et s'asseyait en pleurant. Quand quelqu'un qui le connaissait sortait vers lui, ils se bénissaient l'un l'autre et ils se separaient. Quand quelqu'un qui ne le connaissait pas sortait vers lui et lui demandait : « Pourquoi pleures-tu, mon père? » il répondait : « J'ai dépensé ma richesse, puis j'ai fui la mort et je suis tombé du faite de l'illustration dans l'abaissement. » Celui qui ne comprenait pas ses indications le consolait et lui disait : « Dieu te rassemblera ce que tu as perdu, » et il lui donnait du pain. Le saint le prenait et allait le donner à d'autres. Ceux qui comprenaient ce qu'il voulait dire savaient qu'il indiquait ce dont Satan Le malin a dépouillé les hommes, à savoir la vertu, la pureté, la simplicité, la patience qui les faisaient ressembler aux anges. Les Pères ont demandé de lui des actes difficiles d'ascétisme. Ainsi, une fois, il resta étendu : j'uns sous dormir à terre. Pendant sa vie ascétique, il jeûna plu-

VINGT-SIX DE MESORÉ (19 août).

En ce jour périrent le saint martyr Mouisàs et sa sœur Sarah. Ces deux saints étaient nés de saints parents; ils possédaient des richesses considérables. Après la mort de leurs parents, saint Mouisàs voulut marier sa sœur, lui laisser tout ce qu'ils possédaient et aller mener la vie monastique. Elle lui répondit : « Si tu te maries le premier, marie-moi ensuite. » Il lui dit : « J'ai commis beaucoup de péchés et je veux me faire moine pour en effacer une partie; il ne m'est pas possible de m'occuper du mariage et du salut de mon âme. » Elle répliqua : « Comment est-il possible, mon frère, que tu me jettes dans les filets du monde et que tu te sauves, toi. » — « Si tu veux devenir religieuse, dit-il, c'est affaire à toi. » — Elle lui répondit : « Ce que tu feras toi-même, je le ferai, car nous sommes de même nature, du même père et de la même mère. » Quand il vit la fermeté de sa décision, il se leva, partagea toute leur fortune, la fit entrer dans un couvent de vierges qui était hors d'Alexandrie (El-Iskandaryyah); lui-même entra dans un couvent d'hommes

Alors ce saint se leva et envoya informer sa sœur qu'il avait l'intention de souffrir le martyre. Quand elle l'apprit, elle alla trouver la supérieure et lui demanda de la laisser libre de partir. La supérieure pria sur elle et la bénit. Elle fit ses adieux aux sœurs et sortit. En chemin, elle rencontra son frère : ils entrèrent à Alexandrie et ils confessèrent le Messie. ¹(Eu ce jour) mourut martyre sainte Marie (Maryam) : elle était de race arménienne (El-Armen) et esclave chez un musulman des gardes d'El-Malik ezh-Zhâhir Baïbars, sultan d'Égypte (Misr). Il lui proposa de renier Notre-Seigneur le Messie : elle n'obéit pas, mais elle confessa qu'elle était chrétienne. Il lui fit subir de grands tourments dans sa maison : elle était ferme dans sa parole et sa foi. Quand il fut fatigué de la tourmenter — et elle ne quittait pas sa croyance — il alla informer de l'affaire le sultan El-Malik ezh-Zhâhir et lui déclara : « J'ai une esclave musulmane qui prétend être chrétienne. » Le sultan la fit venir devant lui et lui proposa d'embrasser l'islamisme. Elle ne se rendit pas à sa parole et ne lui obéit pas : elle persévéra dans sa parole et sa foi. Le roi ordonna de la brûler. On fit une fosse près de Bab Zouilah au Caire (El-Qibirah), la ville bien gardée. Une foule consi-

Ils leur donnèrent une belle éducation. Quand il eut grandi, le saint désira verser son sang pour le Messie. Il se leva, alla trouver le gouverneur de Chetnoufi (Chatnouf) et confessa le Messie devant lui. Il le châtia et l'envoya en prison. Quand ses parents et sa sœur l'apprirent, ils vinrent à lui. En le voyant en cet état, ils pleurèrent sur lui et s'affligèrent, tandis qu'il les consolait et leur enseignait que les jours de cette vie sont peu nombreux, mais que la vie future n'a pas de fin. Quand sa sœur Eudoxie entendit ces paroles, elle lui dit : « Mon frère, le Seigneur est vivant; je ne me séparerai pas de toi et je mourrai avec toi de la mort dont tu mourras. » Le gouverneur les arrêta et ordonna de les mettre dans un endroit obscur où ils demeurèrent vingt jours sans manger ni boire. Après cela, il les fit sortir, on leur mit au cou de lourdes pierres et on les jeta dans le fleuve. L'ange du Seigneur descendit et délia les pierres de leur cou : ils demeurèrent à nager dans le fleuve jusqu'à ce qu'ils abordèrent à une ville nommée Botra. Une vierge les fit monter à terre; ils comparurent devant le gouverneur qui ordonna de leur trancher la tête et ils reçurent la couronne du martyr. On leur bâtit une église à Chabelhir. A pareil jour, nous avons reçu l'instruction de nos anciens pères, aidés par la grâce de l'Esprit, de célébrer la fête de nos saints pères, Abraham (Ibrahim), Isaac (Isaac), Jacob (Ya'qoub). Qui des hommes pourrait décrire les mérites de celui qui fut père de nations nombreuses, qui crut en Dieu, qui lui obéit, qui eut confiance dans ses promesses jusqu'à sa mort, qui ne douta d'aucune d'elles? Le Seigneur lui apparut dans un songe nocturne, tandis qu'il dormait, et lui dit : « Sors de ta terre et de la maison de ton père et va dans le pays de Harân. » Lorsque son père mourut, Dieu le transporta dans la terre de Palestine (Palistin) et lui promit de la lui montrer jusqu'à sa mort. Il n'hésita pas : son cœur ne fut pas effrayé, il ne douta pas, mais il crut fermement qu'il la donnerait à sa postérité après lui. Ensuite, le Seigneur lui apparut au milieu de la journée : Abraham ne savait qui il était : il avait avec lui deux anges. Le patriarche crut que c'était deux passants, de tous ceux qui passaient près de lui. Il les arrêta, leur donna l'hospitalité et Dieu lui promit Isaac. Il avait alors atteint cent ans et sa femme Sara (Sarah) était avancée en âge. Ils crurent à la parole divine et n'en doutèrent pas. Quand Isaac leur fut peines considérables, car il quitta son père et sa famille et resta errant sur terre. Il entra en Égypte (Misr) où il eut à se défendre contre l'impiété et la violence des habitants et lorsqu'ils lui prirent Sara, il leur dit qu'elle était sa soeur pour ne pas être tué par eux parce qu'elle était extrêmement belle. Lorsque le roi d'Égypte la prit et lui dit : « Qu'est-ce qu'elle est à toi ? »... « C'est ma sœur, » répondit-il. L'ange du Seigneur apparut, menaçant, au roi pendant la nuit, sur le point de le tuer, et lui ordonna de la lui rendre pour ne pas périr. Au matin, il le fit venir et le blâma de lui avoir dit que c'était sa sœur. Il la lui renvoya avec des cadeaux et des présents et avec Agar (Hadjar). Quand ce père eut atteint cent soixante-quinze ans, il alla retrouver le Seigneur. Que son souvenir soit éternellement secourable.

Quant à notre père le patriarche Isaac, fils d'Abraham, nous avons reçu l'ordre de célébrer aussi une fête pour sa mort qui arriva à pareil jour. Ce juste naquit selon l'annonce faite par Dieu et ses anges à Abraham et à Sara sa mère. Il fut accompli dans la vertu et la satisfaction donnée à Dieu très-haut au point qu'il accepta d'être immolé par son père en sacrifice au

Seigneur jusqu'à ce que celui-ci le rachetât par un bélier. Nous ne savons qui est le plus admirable ou le fait du père d'accepter de l'égorger, lui qui était l'enfant de la promesse, accordé pendant sa vieillesse, sans aider à son penchant naturel vis-à-vis du Dieu très-haut — ou de l'obéissance du fils à son père, de sa soumission jusqu'à la limite du sacrifice et de l'holocauste; ce n'était plus un enfant, car le livre de la Loi témoigna qu'Abraham lui fit porter le bois pendant une longue distance jusqu'à ce qu'il monta au sommet de la montagne et le livre de la chronologie atteste qu'il était âgé de trente-sept ans. Il obéit à son père et tendit la gorge au couteau jusqu'à ce que vint la voix de l'ange du Seigneur lui ordonnant de relever sa main. De même que son père avait été appelé l'immolateur de son fils en intention, de même ce père fut appelé l'immolé par intention. et des peines. En premier lieu, son fils Joseph (Yousof) fut vendu comme esclave aux Égyptiens, et ses frères qui l'avaient vendu dirent qu'une bête féroce l'avait dévoré. Puis une terrible famine à laquelle personne ne pouvait échapper fut générale. Jacob envoya ses fils pour acheter du grain. Ils vinrent trouver Joseph leur frère qui était devenu ministre du roi d'Égypte. Ils ne le reconnurent pas, mais il employa une ruse jusqu'à ce qu'ils partirent. Il manda Jacob qui vint le retrouver et il y resta dix-sept ans. Lorsque sa mort fut proche, il appela ses douze fils, les bénit, attribua spécialement à Juda (Yahoudzà) la royauté; il révéla que le Messie apparaîtrait de lui et dit, après l'avoir béni par de nombreuses paroles : « Le sceptre de la royauté ne cessera d'être dans Juda et le règlement ne sortira pas de ses mains jusqu'à ce que vienne celui à qui appartient la royauté, et c'est lui qu'attendent les nations ». » Après qu'il les eut bénis, Joseph lui amena ses deux fils Éphraïm (Afrâm) et Manassé (Manassâ); il croisa ses mains sur leurs têtes, plaça la droite sur le plus jeune et la gauche sur l'aîné, et les disposa en forme de croix, indiquant que les premiers-nés seraient écartés et annonçant l'apparition de l'emblème

PREMIER DE NASI 24 août.

Le saint apôtre Eutychos (Aoutikhos) souffrit le martyre. Il était disciple de saint Jean (Youhanna) l'évangéliste et était rempli de la grâce de l'Esprit-Saint parce qu'il servait l'apôtre Jean. Il lui demanda d'aller avec Paul (Boulas) et il le lui permit. Il partit avec lui pour prêcher, annonça le nom du Messie, ramena beaucoup de Juifs (El-Yahoud) à la connaissance du Messie, les baptisa et détruisit les idoles. Il souffrit des infidèles des entraves, des coups de fouet et un long emprisonnement. L'ange venait dans sa prison lui apporter de la nourriture dont il se nourrissait. Puis il fut précipité dans le feu qui ne lui fit aucun mal; ensuite on le jeta aux lions, qui ne s'approchèrent pas de lui, mais ils se montrèrent caressants comme des moutons; puis

DEUX DE NASI LE BENI 25 août.

En ce jour mourut l'apôtre Titus (Tifos) à qui l'apôtre saint Paul (Boulos) écrivit une lettre qui est parmi ses épîtres. Ce saint était né en Crète (Agrifach); il était de race grecque (Younani); il apprit les sciences grecques et y devint habile. Il était paisible, miséricordieux et compatissant. Une nuit, il vit quelqu'un qui lui disait : « Titus, témoigne pour le salut de ton âme, car ce monde ne te sera pas utile. » Quand il s'éveilla, il demeura troublé, ne sachant ce qu'il ferait. Lorsque les nouvelles de Notre-Seigneur Jésus (Yasou) se répandirent dans la plupart des pays de Syrie (Ech-Châm) et qu'on entendit parler de ses miracles et de son enseignement, le gouverneur de Crète l'apprit et s'en étonna. Il voulut savoir la réalité du récit et chercha un homme sage, expérimenté pour lui découvrir^{*} la chose, je veux dire celle de Notre-Seigneur le Messie, et éprouver si ses miracles étaient une illusion, temps de saint Théophile (Tàoufilos), lorsque vint une femme croyante, ayant avec elle sa fille, l'image de l'ange glorieux Raphaël et des richesses considérables dont elle avait hérité de son mari. Elle s'occupa de creuser les monceaux qui étaient devant la cellule du patriarche. Alors le saint bâtit beaucoup d'églises et entre autres celle qui est dans l'île, hors d'Alexandrie, sous l'invocation de cet ange. Le patriarche la consacra en ce jour. Tandis que les fidèles y priaient, voici que l'église trembla et se fendit. On trouva qu'elle était bâtie sur un grand animal sur lequel le sable s'était accumulé; il était resté immobile à sa place, mais lorsqu'il sentit la marche, le poids et le sable, Satan (Ech-Chaïtân) le fit remuer pour détruire l'église. Les fidèles et le patriarche crièrent, implorèrent le Messie et sollicitèrent l'intercession de l'ange Raphaël. Dieu très-haut l'envoya: il eut pitié des créatures et enfonça sa lance dans le poisson en lui disant: « Par l'ordre du Seigneur, reste immobile et ne bouge pas de ta place. » Le poisson resta immobile à sa place et ne remua pas jusqu'à ce que l'église fut détruite. Alors le monstre s'agita et descendit dans la mer et un peuple considérable fut noyé. Cette fête devint une commémoration au nom de l'ange glorieux Raphaël. Que son intercession soit avec nous! QUATRE DU MOIS BÉNI DE NASI (27 août).

Quand il fut arrivé dans la terre de Judée (El-Yahoudyah), quand il vit les miracles du Seigneur et entendit ses sages paroles, il fit une distinction entre elles et les paroles et les actions des Grecs. Il trouva entre elles une différence très grande, crut au Messie, le suivit et envoya informer son oncle de ce qu'il avait vu et entendu. Quand Notre-Seigneur Jésus le Messie choisit les soixante-dix, il choisit celui-ci le premier. Après son ascension, il envoya sur lui la grâce du Paraclet et il alla avec les disciples pour annoncer l'Évangile. Lorsque Paul se décida pour Rome (Roumyah), il revint en Crète où il bâtit une église. Il ordonna pour elle et pour les pays voisins des prêtres et des diaques. Quand il eut terminé sa vie apostolique, il retourna vers le Seigneur. Que sa prière soit avec nous! Amen.

En ce jour mourut notre père, le saint ermite Anbâ Poïmen (Bimen)¹. Il était du pays d'Égypte (Misr); ils étaient sept frères, à savoir : Jean (Youhannâ), Job (Ayoub), Joseph (Yousof), Siouïs, Poïmen, Jacques (Ya'qoub), Abraham (Abrâhîm). D'un commun accord, ils habitèrent dans un endroit éloigné des gens; ils portèrent le joug de Notre-Seigneur le Messie et luttèrent contre l'amour naturel au point que leur mère, désirant les voir, étant venue à eux, se tenant hors de leur habitation et les ayant maudés, ils lui envoyèrent dire : « Si tu veux nous voir dans cet (autre) monde, pars. » Elle comprit leur réponse et partit. Ce père était le but et le consolateur des vieillards et des jeunes gens du désert. Tous ceux de qui Satan (Charîân) s'emparait ou qui étaient tentés par l'Ennemi venaient le trouver et il les consolait. Ce père composa des enseignements nombreux et profitables; ainsi, il disait : « Si tu vois un frère pécher, ne lui retranche pas l'espérance, mais éveille son âme, console-le, allège son fardeau pour qu'il se relève. » Il disait aussi : « Apprends à ton âme ou à ton cœur à faire ce que tu lui dis par ta langue. » Un frère lui disait : « Quand je vois un bon religieux, je me réjouis, je le fais entrer dans ma cellule et je le choisis (pour compagnon). Mais quand je vois un frère de qui je n'ai pas entendu dire qu'il soit bon, je ne veux pas le de dévotion et sa dignité ne lui fit pas abandonner son ancien genre de vie. Il était assidu dans l'enseignement et la lecture; il repoussait ceux qui étaient dans le péché, avertissait les gens du Qaire sur leurs fautes. Une légère maladie termina cette vertueuse existence. En ce jour aussi arriva la mort de notre père, le grand Aubâ Barçaoumâ, le parfait parmi les saints et dans l'amour de Dieu. Ce saint était des gens d'Égypte (Mîsr): son père se nommait El-Ouadjih Mofadhhal, secrétaire de Chadjrat ed-Dorr; sa mère était des enfants d'El-Tibbân: ils avaient une fortune considérable. Lorsqu'ils moururent, un oncle de ce saint s'empara de tous leurs biens: ce père ne contesta pas contre lui, mais il lui abandonna les richesses de ce monde; il vécut de la vie des justes et des dévots. Son séjour était dans l'église de saint Mercure (Marqourgous) à Mîsr, dans une crypte salsugineuse, obscure et sous la terre; il s'y enferma. Il y demeura vingt ans, s'acquittant assidûment des prières, nuit et jour, sans interruption: sa nourriture consistait en fèves humectées avec de l'eau salée et infecte; il buvait de cette eau salée. Il pratiqua les plus excessives austérités et Dieu lui donna (le pouvoir) sur les démons. Il était avec lui, en secret et ouvertement, car il lui apparut dans ce temps. Ses actions mères étaient difficiles à comprendre aux gens; il les faisait à cause de leur faiblesse et du manque de fermeté de leurs résolutions. Ce père surpassa beaucoup de saints par ses mérites, son humilité, son amour pour chacun, sa bonté pour les gens, sa compassion pour eux, leur égalité à ses yeux pour toutes leurs demandes et leurs désirs; il ne murmura jamais contre quelqu'un; il était patient et il n'y avait pas pour lui de petit ni de grand, de riche ni de pauvre, mais il les considérait tous comme égaux dans son affection, pour accomplir et confirmer ce qui est écrit des saints, afin que les gens pussent le vérifier de leurs yeux et en rendre un témoignage exact. Puis il monta de cette caverne sur la terrasse de l'église et y resta, supportant le chaud et le froid en hiver et en été jusqu'à ce que sa peau noircit par la grandeur de son ascétisme et de son adoration. Il y resta plusieurs années, pas plus de quinze ans. Alors arriva en Égypte une grande persécution contre les chrétiens, parce qu'ils fermaient leurs églises et portaient des turbans bleus de dix coudées. On changea leurs vêtements, on les empêcha d'avoir des serviteurs et d'aller à cheval en équilibre. Le souverain de l'époque voulait les exterminer tous. Dieu ne le lui permit pas. Tout cela arriva à cause de nos fautes, car le péché est comme a dit l'Apôtre : « Quand la faute est enceinte, elle met au monde la mort. » Quand cette situation pénible se fut affermie, ce père ne cessa d'implorer et de s'humilier devant Dieu, le cœur alligé, et jeûna pendant quarante jours

Il consolait tous ceux qui se réfugiaient près de lui, fidèles ou infidèles. Il ne changea pas son turban contre un bleu, mais Dieu le protégeait contre quiconque se présentait à lui. La plupart des fonctionnaires de l'époque, émirs, qadhis et autres allaient le trouver et le voyaient avec un turban blanc; personne n'osait lui imposer un vêtement bleu parce que la force de Dieu était avec lui. Chacun louait Dieu à cause de lui; il attira de nombreuses âmes au salut et les ramena après avoir empêché le désespoir. Il disait : « Toutes les fautes sont pardonnées après le repentir. » Son langage était des énigmes spirituelles que comprenait celui à qui le Seigneur donnait la science de les comprendre. Les gens l'avaient en grande vénération et Dieu, par ses prières, éloigna d'eux sa colère; les églises furent rouvertes et restaurées; les chrétiens montèrent des coursiers et travaillèrent; leurs vêtements furent en bon état, et il ne resta rien du passé que les vêtements bleus ainsi que le turban; ils montèrent des chevaux dans leurs voyages. * Dieu fit périr de la pire mort celui qui voulait les tuer; il le fit sortir du royaume par un miracle évident pour tout le monde. Le Seigneur fut satisfait de son peuple et lui fit miséricorde, tout cela par les prières de ce saint et son humilité. Dieu lui donna la grâce de la prophétie; il guérit les âmes et les corps, commut les choses cachées; il attirait tous les hommes vers le bien et la paix; quiconque venait à lui ne voulait plus le quitter à cause de la puissance de la grâce, de la miséricorde, de l'amour qui était en lui. Il fit semblant d'être insensé. Mais Dieu révéla aux gens qu'il était plus intelligent que les hommes intelligents, lui qui n'avait d'autre but que l'amour de Dieu, et la pratique de ses recommandations et de sa volonté. Il consolait par l'Esprit-Saint qui habitait en lui et voyait continuellement Dieu, ses apôtres purs et lumineux, les anges spirituels, les dans notre foi, dociles à nos saints pères, objets de la miséricorde de notre Dieu qui ne s'est pas hâté de nous demander compte de nos mauvaises actions et qui ne nous a pas anéantis pour nos actes coupables, comme il l'a fait pour de nombreuses nations avant nous, mais il a montré de la patience vis-à-vis de nous et a attendu que nous fussions revenus de nos péchés. Nous devons verser des larmes devant lui, pousser devant lui des soupîrs pour les mauvaises actions et les grands péchés que nous avons commis. Nous lui demandons de nous affermir dans la foi orthodoxe tous les jours de notre vie, de nous préserver des pièges de Satan (Ech-Chaïtân) notre ennemi pour que nous arrivions au terme, sains de corps, pour qu'il donne le repos aux âmes de nos morts, qu'il adoucisse nos violences (2), qu'il nous preserve des pièges de Satan notre ennemi, qu'il l'humilie sous nos pieds par la puissance de notre Dieu, de notre Sauveur, Jésus le Messie, à qui sont dues la gloire, la louange et l'adoration maintenant et dans tous les temps, jusqu'au siècle des siècles. VINGT ET UNIÈME MIRACLE

LA BRANCHE D'OLIVIER PLANTÉE PAR ZACHÉE

1. Un vieillard, nommé Zachée, demande secours à Jésus pour payer ses dettes. —
2. Il lui déclare que tous ses oliviers ont été stériles. — 3. Jésus se fait apporter une branche d'olivier et ordonne à Zachée de la planter au milieu de son champ. —
4. Cette branche pousse immédiatement. — 5. Zachée et les gens de sa maison croient au Christ. — 6. Zachée fait une récolte d'olives extrêmement abondante. — 7. Il va remercier Jésus, qui lui promet que, chaque année, la récolte sera aussi copieuse.

Vingt et unième miracle que fit le Seigneur Jésus-Christ sur un olivier.

* Que la bénédiction de sa grâce soit avec son serviteur Walda-Wähed pour les siècles des siècles!

Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Apporte-moi une branche de tes oliviers. » Zachée apporta une branche de ces arbres qui étaient arides. Le Seigneur Jésus la prit et la bénit. Il lui dit : « Va, ô vieillard, planter cette branche au milieu de ton champ, car d'elle surviendra ta richesse. Sache que cette branche deviendra un olivier à trois rameaux, qu'elle ne sera jamais aride et qu'elle deviendra l'orgueil de tous les peuples. Ils la chercheront des extrémités de la terre et ils seront bénis par elle. Elle deviendra pour eux joie et allégresse. Quiconque prendra une brindille de cette branche ou de ses feuilles et la mettra dans sa maison (sera protégé) : ma bénédiction sera en (cette maison) et les gens de cette maison * ne craindront pas les démons. Si quelque individu ose entrer (dans) la maison où se trouve (une brindille) de cette branche, la peur et le tremblement le saisiront, au point qu'il sortira de (cette

 En outre, il lui dit : « Je te supplie, mon Seigneur et mon Dieu, de me donner, chaque année, comme tu m'as donné maintenant. » Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Sache que cette branche te donnera chaque année, comme elle t'a donné cette année-ci. »

Que la bénédiction de sa grâce soit avec nous! Amen.

LE MIRACLE DES MELONS

1. Jésus rencontre, à Césarée de Palestine, un homme qui se lamente sur la perte de ses melons, entièrement rongés par les vers. — 2. Jésus se fait apporter les trois racines qui, seules, restent dans le champ. — 3. Il les bénit et ordonne de les planter en les éloignant l'une de l'autre. — 4. La récolte est surprenante et procure au propriétaire du champ, après le paiement de ses dettes, un bénéfice de quatre mille drachmes d'or. — 5. Cet homme apporte l'or à Jésus, qui lui conseille de le donner en aumône aux pauvres. — 6. Il le distribue entièrement et devient l'un des disciples de Jésus.

* Vingt-troisième miracle que fit Notre-Seigneur Jésus-Christ sur une semence de melons¹.

Tandis que le Seigneur Jésus traversait le territoire de Césarée [Qisàryà] de Palestine [Feles'tèm] avec ses disciples, il vit un homme qui se tenait (debout) auprès d'un (champ) ensemencé de melons, qui pleurait et (qui) se frappait de la main le visage et la poitrine. Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Qu'as-tu, que t'est-il arrivé, ô homme, et pourquoi pleures-tu ? » Cet homme répondit et lui dit : « O mon Seigneur, je suis un homme pauvre, souffrant et malade. J'ai peiné (pour) semer ces melons. Maintenant ils sont perdus pour moi. »

Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Quelle (est) la cause de cette perte ? » Il lui dit : « Les vers me les ont ravagés. Le juste Adonai¹ [Adonây], Dieu d'Israel, sait que (les vers) ne m'ont rien laissé, sauf trois racines. Avec quoi payerai-je ma dette et où trouverai-je (de l'argent pour l'acquitter)? » Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Arrache les trois racines des melons. » Il les arracha et les jeta devant le Seigneur Jésus.

Notre-Seigneur prit les melons et les bénit. Il dit à cet homme : « Prends ces melons et plante-les dans un endroit différent de l'endroit où les melons ont été ravagés. Lorsque tu les planteras, ne les mets pas près des uns des autres). »

4

Cet homme fit comme le Seigneur Jésus lui avait dit. Immédiatement les trois racines des melons fleurirent et leurs ramifications s'étendirent

* fol. 37, r^o b.

Cet homme apporta l'or au Seigneur Jésus et lui dit : « O mon Seigneur, j'ai payé ma dette et j'ai réglé les affaires de ma maison. Il me reste quatre mille drachmes d'or. Voici que je (des) apporte vers toi. Que m'ordonnes-tu d'en faire? » Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Va, donne l'aumône aux pauvres et aux malheureux. » Il fit tout comme le Seigneur Jésus lui avait ordonné.

Il revint vers lui et lui dit : « Voici que j'ai distribué entièrement les quatre mille drachmes d'or aux pauvres et aux malheureux. Je n'ai pas conservé par devers moi une seule drachme. » Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Tu as bien fait. Mais viens, suis-moi ». Il le suivit donc et devint son disciple, Tandis que le Seigneur Jésus traversait le territoire de la Galilée [Galilâ] avec ses disciples et avec beaucoup de gens des Juifs, en leur parlant et (en) leur disant : « Le royaume des cieux est proche de vous. Pour vous, recevez-le », voici qu'une femme de la lignée d'Abraham [Abrehâm], appelée Yeyosqênâ, qui avait une perte de sang depuis douze ans, vint vers lui, après avoir pensé dans son cœur, en (se) disant : « Je ne dois pas entrer au milieu du peuple, (afin de) demander au Maître de me guérir. En effet, la loi de Moïse Mousè ordonne ainsi, en disant : Que la femme (se trouvant) dans les jours de ses menstrues n'entre pas dans l'assemblée du peuple! Mais si elle est entrée, ayant osé (enfreindre cette prescription), qu'elle soit lapidée de pierres à mort! Cependant j'irai toucher la frange de son vêtement derrière lui, car * je sais (que), si j'approche de lui, je serai guérie² de cette mauvaise maladie. » Lorsque les gens entendirent (ceci), ils furent fort étonnés. Ils étaient au nombre de sept mille quatre cents hommes, sans compter les femmes et les enfants. Ils furent tous stupéfaits et étonnés. Ils eurent en Notre-Seigneur Jésus et dirent d'une seule voix : « Oui, celui-ci est vraiment le Fils du Seigneur. Vraiment celui-ci est le Christ qui a été envoyé de la part du Père pour le salut des peuples. Celui-ci est le Christ au sujet de qui Moïse [Moussé] a prophétisé en disant : Le Seigneur suscitera pour vous, dans les derniers jours, un homme d'entre vos frères qui réunira auprès de lui les peuples! »

GUÉRISON D'UN ÉLÉPHANTIASIQUE SOURD-MUET

1. Jésus rend la parole à un éléphantiasique sourd-muet. — 2. Il l'envoie ensuite se laver à la piscine de Siloé : la lèpre disparaît. — 3. Comme la guérison est opérée le jour du sabbat, les Juifs veulent mettre à mort Jésus. — 4. Le miracle défend Jésus. — 5. Jésus adresse aux Juifs de cinglants reproches, sous forme d'anathèmes. — 6. Aux Juifs qui déclarent que le Christ est Fils de David, il répond par la citation du premier verset du Psaume CIX (Dixit Dominus Domino meo).

Vingt-cinquième miracle que fit Notre-Seigneur Jésus-Christ, à 'Elhedâr, sur un homme qui souffrait de la maladie de 'l'éléphantiasis et (était) muet.

Un jour que le Seigneur Jésus passait sur le territoire de Elhedâr, il vit un homme éléphantiasique et muet qui se lamentait et pleurait, en levant les yeux au ciel et en étendant les mains. Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Quel (motif) te fait pleurer, ô homme, alors que ton Sauveur se trouve (auprès de toi) ? » Le Seigneur Jésus s'approcha de lui et lui mit la main sur la langue. Il parla aussitôt.

Il se prosterna aux pieds de Notre-Seigneur Jésus et lui dit : « Tu es le Christ, le Fils du Seigneur. » Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Que veux-tu maintenant ? Va en paix. » Cet homme lui dit : « Mon Seigneur, sois élément envers moi. Quant à moi, je suis (un sujet) d'opprobre au milieu des Israélites. Personne d'entre eux ne me donne : manger de pain, mais ils me chassent à cause de mes plaies et n'approchent jamais de moi. En

VINGT-SIXIEME MIRACLE

L'EXPULSION DES SAUTERELLES DE LA GALILÉE ET DE LA JUDEE ET LA QUESTION DU SABBAT.

1. Pendant quatre ans et demi, la Galilée et la Judée sont ravagées par les sauterelles. —
2. Les Juifs chargent Nicodème d'aller demander à Jésus la cessation du fléau. —
3. Nicodème fait la démarche. — 4. Jésus lui dit que cette calamité est due à l'endurcissement des Israélites. — 5. Néanmoins, il les délivrera, mais ce sera le jour du sabbat. — 6. Il expose à Nicodème la question du sabbat — 7. Nicodème est émerveillé de la sagesse de Jésus. — 8. Jésus est transfiguré et entouré d'une nuée lumineuse. A un ange qui descend du ciel pour lui demander ses ordres, il enjoint d'écarter le fléau, le jour du sabbat. — 9. A Nicodème épouvanté de ce qu'il vient de voir il déclare que le spectacle sera bien plus effrayant, lorsqu'il viendra juger les vivants et les morts. — 10. Il le charge de prêcher aux Juifs la pénitence. — 11. Conversion de nombreux Israélites. — 12. Nicodème voit, de ses propres yeux, l'ange écarter le fléau.

Vingt-sixième miracle que fit Notre-Seigneur Jésus-Christ par une expulsion de sauterelles du territoire de la Galilée Galilâ' et de la Judée Yehoudâ'.

Que la bénédiction de sa grâce soit avec son serviteur Wadda-Wâhed pour les siècles des siècles! Amen.

Lorsque Nicodème vit ceci, la peur et l'épouvante le saisirent. Par suite de l'intensité de sa peur, ses dents grinçèrent et ses genoux tremblèrent. Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Qu'as-tu vu (de si effrayant), ô Nicodème, au sujet d'un ange, pour être effrayé d'une telle peur? Comment feras-tu, lorsque le Fils de l'homme viendra, dans sa gloire et dans la gloire de tous ses anges, juger les vivants et les morts? En effet, ce jour-là il y aura de grands pleurs et des grincements de dents ». Alors Nicodème versa de grands pleurs et dit : « Je crois en toi, Dieu d'Israël. Sois clément envers moi. »

LES LIONS D'ASCALON

1. Les habitants de la région d'Ascalon viennent supplier Jésus de les délivrer des incursions de nombreux lions. — 2. Jésus leur promet de les exaucer. — 3. Nathanaël communique aux lions l'ordre de Jésus. — 4. Les lions se prosternent devant Nathanaël et lui obéissent. — 5. Les gens d'Ascalon sont affermis dans la foi.

Vingt-septième prodige que fit Notre-Seigneur et Notre-Sauveur Jésus-Christ sur le territoire d'Ascalon (Asqâlân) au sujet de lions.

Que la bénédiction de sa grâce soit avec son serviteur Zawya-Mikâ'el et sa femme 'Edja-Heywat pour les siècles des siècles! Amen.

« Sache, ô Simon, que des peuples viendront de la terre du désert. Ils mépriseront mon peuple et diront des paroles contre le Seigneur que d'autres peuples ne disent pas. La terre sera souillée par eux. Ils fouleront (aux pieds) mon sanctuaire. Ils s'appliqueront à abolir ma loi. Ils emmèneront captifs les enfants de mon peuple, leurs filles et leurs mères. Ils les vendront entre eux dans des régions (étrangères). Quant au vieillard qui sera fait captif d'entre mon peuple, ils le tueront et ils teindront leurs mains dans son sang. Ils penseront offrir un sacrifice au Seigneur³. Quant au signe de ce peuple, (le voici) : ils teindront leur barbe avec des feuilles impures. Ils domineront la mer et le sec. L'empire même leur sera donné. Le monde sera détruit par leurs mains et (sa) beauté sera anéantie.

« La sagesse des sages sera anéantie. En effet, ces gens se feront eux-mêmes sages et prophètes. Ils s'aideront entre eux touchant leur foi impure. C'est la Verge de colère qui viendra de la région des ténèbres, de la tribu de Qédâr. Ils changeront ma doctrine, (mais) ils ne pourront pas (la) changer entièrement. Beaucoup (de gens) de mon peuple s'égareront. Bienheureux ceux qui s'éloigneront d'eux et ne les suivront pas.

Le Seigneur Jésus dit (à Gamaliel) : « O Gamaliel, ne t'étonne pas de ce miracle. En effet, j'ai fait voir au peuple d'Israël [Esrâ'èl] de plus grands (miracles) que celui-ci et ils n'ont cru en moi aucunement, après (les) avoir vus, avant mon retour, dans ma gloire, (auprès de mon Père) de qui je ne suis pas séparé. O Gamaliel, bienheureux ceux qui auront cru en moi. Sache, ô Gamaliel, qu'il te faudra devenir martyr à cause de mon nom. Que ta joie soit grande, car ton nom (est) inscrit dans le royaume des cieux! »

Le Seigneur Jésus alla, le lendemain, au Mont des Oliviers. Avec lui (étaient) Jean [Yohannès] et Jacques [Yá'qob], fils de Zébédée [Zabédewos], ses disciples.

Lorsque Jacques et Jean virent le temple, ils lui dirent : « Combien ! ce temple est beau ! » Le Seigneur Jésus leur dit : « Vraiment, je vous (le) dis, il ne sera pas trouvé en ce temple pierre sur pierre². Voici que des peuples viendront de l'orient et de l'occident et s'assoiront à la table d'Abraham [Abrehâm], d'Isaac [Yeshaq] et de Jacob [Yá'qob]. Quant aux fils du royaume, on les chassera, on les fera sortir dehors et une grande affliction les atteindra³. Mais les Gentils se réjouiront.

 Je t'ai donné les clefs de la porte du pardon. Je t'ai rendu digne de remettre les péchés. Vraiment, je te dis que tout ce que tu lieras sur la terre les péchés ils lui seront remis¹. Tu es bienheureux, ô Simon, car tu es le disciple du salut et de la paix. Bientôt beaucoup de poissons seront attrapés dans ton filet. Quiconque l'écouterà et écontera ta parole (sera sauvé). Tu es le fondement de l'Église. Tu es bienheureux, ô Simon. Ne

Les disciples lui dirent : « Quant aux fidèles qui se convertiront par notre intermédiaire à ta foi, qui les jugera ? » Le Seigneur Jésus leur dit : « Les fidèles, moi-même je les jugerai et je ne donnerai pas leur jugement à un autre, car ils ont mangé ma chair et bu mon sang avec foi. En effet, quiconque mangera ma chair et boira mon sang avec une foi pure, je serai à lui, il sera à moi et je le ressusciterai, au dernier jour, pour la vie éternelle³. Il n'approchera pas du supplice, mais je le ferai hériter de la vie éternelle qui n'a pas de fin. Puisque je leur ai laissé ma chair, je (les) jugerai.

* « Sachez que le Père ne jugera personne, (mais que) tout jugement il l'a livré à son Fils⁴. (Le Fils) pardonnera à qui il voudra et condamnera qui il voudra.

TRENTIEME MIRACLE

BAPTÊME ET TENTATION DE JÉSUS

I. BAPTÊME DE JÉSUS. — 1. Paroles de Jésus à ses apôtres. — 2. Jean-Baptiste déclare à ses disciples que le Seigneur lui a révélé, dans le sein de sa mère, que, lorsque les eaux du Jourdain se mettraient à reculer et deviendraient ardentes, ce serait le signe de la venue de l'Agneau de Dieu. — 3. Le prodige annoncé se réalise. — 4. Jésus dit aux apôtres qu'il va aller au Jourdain se faire baptiser par Jean. — 5. Il passe la nuit avec ses disciples à Béthanie, chez Lazare. — 6. Jean confesse publiquement la divinité de Jésus. — 7. Jésus insiste pour que Jean le baptise. — 8. Les eaux du Jourdain reculent de quarante coudées et deviennent comme des charbons ardents. — 9. Jésus admoneste les eaux. — 10. Il insiste à nouveau pour que Jean lui donne le baptême. — 11. Il descend dans le Jourdain. — 12. Pendant le baptême, le ciel s'ouvre, l'Esprit-Saint descend, sous la forme d'une colombe, sur la tête de Jésus, et la voix du Père se fait entendre. — 13. Affermissement de la foi des apôtres et conversion des Juifs qui assistent au baptême. — 14. A sa sortie du Jourdain, Jésus est adoré par de nombreux anges. — 15. Il retourne à Jérusalem d'où il envoie ses apôtres prêcher aux pays d'Ammon et de Moab. — II. TENTATION DE JÉSUS. — 16. Jésus est tenté par Satan au sommet d'une montagne, au désert. — 17. Après un jeûne de quarante jours et de quarante nuits, il est tenté à nouveau. — 18. Il est tenté une dernière fois sur le pinacle du temple de Jérusalem. — 19. Après la fuite de Satan, des anges servent Jésus. — 20. Jésus se rend en Galilée.

* Trentième miracle de Notre-Seigneur Jésus-Christ — gloire à lui — où il est raconté) comment il fut baptisé par Jean Yohannès, fils de Zacharie [Zakaryàs]. * tot. 36.

Un jour que Jean baptisait des gens dans le Jourdain, il vit le fleuve du Jourdain revenir et retourner derrière lui et l'eau aussi devenir chaude, comme si on l'avait fait chauffer¹ au feu. Quant à lui, il tira sa main de dedans l'eau et dit : « Voici qu'est venu l'Agneau du Seigneur qui ôte les péchés du monde. Il est venu dans le monde après moi². En effet, il était avant moi et tout a eu lieu par lui³. Pour moi, je ne suis pas digne de me baisser et de délier la courroie des chaussures de ses pieds⁴. » Puis, il cria, en disant : « Sois élément, ô Seigneur, envers ton serviteur, fils de ta servante, et instruis-le de tes mystères, car tu es le Fils du Seigneur vivant, éternel. »

avec leurs ailes et le tirèrent du Jourdain. Puis ils l'adorèrent ensemble.

15

Le Seigneur Jésus s'en alla du Jourdain avec ses disciples, jusqu'à ce qu'ils entrassent à Jérusalem [Iyarousalém]. De là il envoya ses disciples au pays d'Ammon [Amon] et de Moab [Mo'ab], afin d'appeler les gens à la foi du Seigneur Jésus-Christ.

16

Lorsque Satan [Saytân] eut vu ce qui avait eu lieu au Jourdain et eut entendu Jean devenir témoin du Seigneur Jésus, (il sut que Jésus) était le Fils du Seigneur. Le Seigneur Jésus alla au désert¹, lorsque ses disciples se furent séparés de lui. Lorsque le ^{*}Seigneur Jésus vit (Satan), il sut qu'il le cherchait. Il monta au haut d'une montagne qui se trouvait là. Satan aussi monta au sommet de cette montagne. Il lui dit : « Regarde les royaumes du monde entier : voici qu'ils sont à moi. Si tu m'adores, je te (les) donnerai. » Le Seigneur Jésus lui dit : « Il (est) écrit qu'il faut adorer le Seigneur seul et rendre le culte à lui seul¹. »

Le Seigneur Jésus revint au désert. En effet, il savait auparavant que Satan le tenterait par la faim. Il s'affama lui-même et ne mangea rien, (pendant) quarante jours et (pendant) quarante nuits. Satan vint vers lui dans le désert et lui dit : « Si tu es le Fils du Seigneur, dis à ces pierres de devenir du pain, car je sais que tu as faim. » Le Seigneur Jésus répondit et lui dit : « Voici qu'il (est) écrit : (Ce n'est) pas seulement de pain que vit l'homme, mais de toute parole qui sort de la bouche du Seigneur². »

En outre, le Seigneur Jésus savait auparavant que Satan voulait le tenter au-dessus de l'autel (du temple) de Jérusalem. Le Seigneur Jésus le précéda et monta là. Satan aussi monta à l'endroit des faces de l'autel. Il lui dit : « Si tu es le Fils du Seigneur, comme [l'a témoigné Jean, fils de Zacharie [Zakaryàs], précipite-toi toi-même du haut de ce temple et jette-toi en bas, car il (est) écrit que (le Seigneur) a ordonné à ses ailes, à ton sujet, de te garder dans toutes les voies et de t'élever dans (leurs) mains, afin que tes pieds ne se heurtent pas à la pierre¹. Tu cheracheras sur le loup et le dragon et tu fouleras (aux pieds) le lion et le dragon². »

Aussitôt le Seigneur Jésus fit voir sa gloire à Satan. Il lui dit : « Il (est) écrit : Ne tente pas le Seigneur, ton Dieu³. » Alors Satan le laissa et s'enfuit. Les anges (du Seigneur) s'approchèrent et le servirent⁴.

Après qu'il eut été tenté par Satan, le Seigneur Jésus alla à la terre de Galilée [Galiléa], afin que fût accomplie la parole du prophète qui a dit : « (Quant aux) gens de Galilée qui demeurent dans les ténèbres, une grande lumière s'est levée sur eux¹. »

Que la bénédiction de sa grâce soit avec son serviteur Waldä-Wähd et avec sa femme Matshëta-Dengel pour les siècles des siècles!

|--|---------|
| VINGT ET UNIÈME MIRACLE | 181-186 |
| LA BRANCHE D'OLIVIER PLANTÉE PAR ZACHÉE. | |
| 1. Un vieillard, nommé Zachée, demande secours à Jésus pour payer ses dettes. — 2. Il lui déclare que tous ses oliviers ont été stériles. — 3. Jésus se fait apporter une branche d'olivier et ordonne à Zachée de la planter au milieu de son champ. — 4. Cette branche pousse immédiatement. — 5. Zachée et les gens de sa maison croient au Christ. — 6. Zachée fait une récolte d'olives extrêmement abondante. — 7. Il va remercier Jésus, qui lui promet que, chaque année, la récolte sera aussi copieuse. | |
| VINGT-DEUXIÈME MIRACLE | 186-191 | | RÉSURRECTION DE SARA, REBECCA ET RACHEL. | |
| 1. Jésus, en se rendant au tombeau de Rachel, rencontre des princes des prêtres et des scribes. — 2. Comme il leur dit qu'il va ressusciter Rachel, ils le traitent de fou. — 3. Il les réprimande sévèrement et leur déclare qu'il va ressusciter aussi Sara et Rébecca. — 4. Il opère la résurrection. — 5. Il fait constater aux Juifs le miracle. — 6. Sara admoneste les Juifs. — 7. Jésus les gourmande aussi. — 8. Il ordonne aux trois saintes femmes de retourner à leur tombeau. | |
| VINGT-TROISIÈME MIRACLE. | 191-195 |
| LE MIRACLE DES MELONS. | |
| 1. Jésus rencontre, à Césarée de Palestine, un homme qui se lamentait sur la perte de ses melons, entièrement rongés par les vers. — 2. Jésus se fait apporter les trois racines qui, seules, restent dans le champ. — 3. Il les bénit et ordonne de les planter en les éloignant l'une de l'autre. — 4. La récolte est surprenante et procure au propriétaire du champ, après le paiement de ses dettes, un bénéfice de quatre mille drachmes d'or. — 5. Cet homme apporte l'or à Jésus, qui lui conseille de le donner en aumône aux pauvres. — 6. Il le distribue entièrement et devient l'un des disciples de Jésus. | |
| VINGT-QUATRIÈME MIRACLE. | 195-200 |
| GUÉRISON DE L'HÉMORROÏSSE. | |
| 1. L'hémorroïsse se décide à aller toucher la frange du vêtement de Jésus. — 2. Elle est guérie aussitôt. — 3. Jésus demandant à Pierre qui l'a touché, l'hémorroïsse se présente. — 4. Jésus lui remet ses péchés. — 5. Aux Juifs indignés qui le prennent pour le fils du charpentier Joseph, il répond que Joseph n'est pas son père, mais son ami. | |

— 6. Il aperçoit une chèvre sauvage paissant sur une colline et lui ordonne de dire qui il est. — 7. Sept mille quatre cents hommes, sans compter les femmes et les enfants, croient en Jésus. — 8. Jésus renvoie la chèvre, en lui promettant qu'elle ne deviendra la propriété de personne.

VINGT-CINQUIÈME MIRACLE 200-207

1. Jésus rend la parole à un éléphantiasique sourd-muet. — 2. Il l'envoie ensuite se laver à la piscine de Siloé : la lèpre disparaît. — 3. Comme la guérison est opérée le jour du sabbat, les Juifs veulent mettre à mort Jésus. — 4. Le miraculé défend Jésus. — 5. Jésus adresse aux Juifs de singuliers reproches, sous forme d'anathèmes. — 6. Aux Juifs qui déclarent que le Christ est Fils de David, il répond par la citation du premier verset du Psaume CIX [Dicit Dominus Domino meo].

VINGT-SIXIÈME MIRACLE 207-215

1. Pendant quatre ans et demi, la Galilée et la Judée sont ravagées par les sauterelles. — 2. Les Juifs chargent Nicodème d'aller demander à Jésus la cessation du fléau. — 3. Nicodème fait la démarche. — 4. Jésus lui dit que cette calamité est due à l'endurcissement des Israélites. — 5. Néanmoins, il les délivrera, mais ce sera le jour du sabbat. — 6. Il expose à Nicodème la question du sabbat. — 7. Nicodème est émerveillé de la sagesse de Jésus. — 8. Jésus est transfiguré et entouré d'une nuée lumineuse. A un ange qui descend du ciel pour lui demander ses ordres, il enjoint d'écarter le fléau, le jour du sabbat. — 9. A Nicodème épouvanté de ce qu'il vient de voir il déclare que le spectacle sera bien plus effrayant, lorsqu'il viendra juger les vivants et les morts. — 10. Il le charge de prêcher aux Juifs la pénitence. — 11. Conversion de nombreux Israélites. — 12. Nicodème voit, de ses propres yeux, l'ange écarter le fléau.

VINGT-SEPTIÈME MIRACLE 215-218

VINGT-HUITIÈME MIRACLE 218-227

DISCOURS ESCHATOLOGIQUE DE JÉSUS A JÉRICHO.

1. Les apôtres sont la lumière du monde et le sel de la terre. — 2. Discours eschatologique de Jésus à Pierre. — 3. Pierre demande à Jésus où les apôtres, qui se trouvent dans le désert, iront passer la nuit. — 4. Jésus ordonne à Pierre de se rendre à Jérusalem. — 5. Pierre et les apôtres arrivent instantanément à Jérusalem. — 6. Ils rencontrent Gamaliel qui les introduit chez lui. — 7. Gamaliel va au-devant de Jésus qu'il trouve assis sur le Mont des Oliviers. — 8. Au moment où Jésus entre chez Gamaliel, les colonnes de la maison se couvrent de verdure. — 9. Jésus déclare à Gamaliel qu'il deviendra martyr. — 10. Paroles de Jésus aux apôtres. — 11. Jésus passe la nuit chez Gamaliel.

VINGT-NEUVIÈME MIRACLE. 227-235

DISCOURS DE JÉSUS A SES APOTRES SUR LE MONT DES OLIVIERS.

1. Jésus se rend au Mont des Oliviers. — 2. Discours de Jésus aux apôtres. — 3. Discours de Jésus à Pierre. — 4. Les apôtres sont jaloux de Pierre. — 5. Après leur avoir prescrit l'humilité, Jésus leur déclare qu'ils jugeront les douze tribus d'Israël. — 6. Il se réserve de juger lui-même les fidèles. — 7. Seul le Père céleste connaît la date du jugement.

TRENTIÈME MIRACLE. 235-248

I. BAPTÊME DE JÉSUS. — 1. Paroles de Jésus à ses apôtres. — 2. Jean-Baptiste déclare à ses disciples que le Seigneur lui a révélé, dans le sein de sa mère, que, lorsque les eaux du Jourdain se mettraient à reculer et deviendraient ardentes, ce serait le signe de la venue de l'Agneau de Dieu. — 3. Le prodige annoncé se réalise. — 4. Jésus dit aux apôtres qu'il va aller au Jourdain se faire baptiser par Jean. — 5. Il passe la nuit avec ses disciples à Bethanie, chez Lazare. — 6. Jean confesse publiquement la divinité de Jésus. — 7. Jésus insiste pour que Jean le baptise. — 8. Les eaux du Jourdain reculent de quarante coudées et deviennent comme des charbons ardents. — 9. Jésus admoneste les eaux. — 10. Il insiste à nouveau pour que Jean lui donne le baptême. — 11. Il descend dans le Jourdain. — 12. Pendant le baptême, le ciel s'ouvre, l'Esprit-Saint descend, sous la forme d'une colombe, sur la tête de Jésus, et la voix du Père se fait entendre. — 13. Affermissement de la foi des apôtres et conversion des Juifs qui assistent au baptême. — 14. A sa sortie du Jourdain, Jésus est alors par de nombreux anges. — 15. Il retourne à Jérusalem d'où il envoie ses apôtres prêcher aux pays d'Aunon et de Moab. — II. TENTATION DE JÉSUS. — 16. Jésus est tenté par Satan au sommet d'une montagne, au désert. — 17. Après un jeûne de quarante jours et de quarante nuits, il est tenté à nouveau. — 18. Il est tenté une dernière fois sur le pinacle du temple de Jérusalem. — 19. Après la fuite de Satan, des anges servent Jésus. — 20. Jésus se rend en Galilée.
